An engaging presentation by

Mary Adams

Sponsored by the

New Hampshire Humanities Council

This event delves into the pivotal role that New Hampshire played during the American Revolution, exploring the complexities and conflicts experienced by its residents. Mary Adams, an expert on the subject, brings to life the stories of both the Redcoats, the British soldiers, and the Rebels, the American patriots, offering a nuanced perspective on their struggles, motivations, and contributions.

Through vivid storytelling and historical insights, attendees gain a deeper understanding of New Hampshire's unique position and its impact on the broader revolutionary efforts. This presentation is not only educational but also a celebration of the state's rich historical heritage, appealing to history enthusiasts and anyone interested in the American Revolution.
