

My family first put roots in Idaho soil in the 1860s. My grandma's father ran a dairy out near Ten Mile. My grandpa established the farms in Little Valley and built the irrigation lines that watered them. On my mother's side, they were loggers – moving through the Northwest, living off the land, hunting and fishing when they had to.

Six generations of people who worked this ground with their hands. My parents were among the first hit when trickle-down economics arrived in the '80s. They lost the farm. My dad went on to work the land for the people who bought it.

I grew up in Grand View knowing exactly what happens when a family loses what they built. Idaho doesn't just feel like home to me – it runs through my blood. And that's exactly why I can't stay quiet about the state it's in.

MORRISON4ID.COM

Since 2019, Congressman Russ Fulcher has represented Idaho's 1st District in the U.S. House of Representatives. In that time, our lives have gotten more expensive, more divided, and more complicated.

Farmers and ranchers are still squeezed by consolidation and DC rules written for corporate insiders. Families can't get ahead enough to buy a home. Too many working people are one emergency away from falling behind. Idaho needs a common-sense Republican who answers to voters—not dark money, not special interests, and not the political establishment.

I'm Joe Morrison—Idaho-born, pro-ag, and a former U.S. Marine. I put service to country before party games, and I'll bring an independent backbone to Congress.
