BOMBSHELL: SWAT Team Told to 'Stand Down' at Navy Yard Shooting

(Truthstream Media)

The official Navy Yard shooting story is beginning to fall apart.

First we were told that suspected shooter Aaron Alexis had filed a police report on Aug. 7 claiming he was being targeted with microwave weapons and was hearing voices through the walls, ceiling and floor of his hotel room.

Next stories came out that Alexis carved "My ELF Weapon" and "Better off this way" into his shotgun before the killings, seemingly corroborating his prior claim, and the mainstream media is actually reporting on directed energy weapon technology and the fact that ex-military intelligence officials have claimed such technology is used by the government to create assassins who can carry out objectives while giving authorities plausible deniability.

Now the BBC is reporting the Containment and Emergency Response Team (CERT), a SWAT team specifically trained in active shooter scenarios, was told to "stand down" when they could have been on scene at the Navy Yard with long-range assault weapons in hand in 15 minutes or less after the shootings began. Instead, Aaron Alexis was not reportedly taken down until after 9 am, nearly an hour after the first shots were fired.

Thirteen people are dead including Alexis who will never be able to tell anyone his side of the story.

Report: Was Navy Yard Shooter Gangstalked with Mind Control Microwave Weapons?

(Truthstream Media)

A newly uncovered document raises some startling questions about suspected shooter Aaron Alexis in the wake of the Washington D.C. Navy Yard shooting that left 13 people dead this week.

Alternative news outlet Activist Post published the following document on Facebook last night which has also been corroborated by The New York Times. It's a report narrative filed by a Rhode Island police officer who responded to a call made by Alexis on Aug. 7. Alexis claimed that people were harassing him using microwave weapons:

Moseley #364

On August 7, 2013 I was assigned to car 1. At about 0623 hours Officer Cormier and I were dispatched to the Marriott Hotel, room 405 for a harrassment report. I responded from city yard.

On arrival we met with A [REDACTED]. [REDACTED] stated that he is a naval contractor and that he travels often. [REDACTED] went on to explain that while getting onto his flight from Virginia to Rhode Island he got into a verbal altercation with an unknown party in the airport. [REDACTED] believes that the individual that he got into an argument with has sent 3 people to follow him and keep him awake by talking to him and sending vibrations into his body. [REDACTED] stated that he has not witnessed any of these individuals, but believes they are two black males and a black female. [REDACTED] stated that he first heard them talking to him through a wall while at the Residence Inn in Middletown. [REDACTED] then packed up and went to a hotel on the Navy base where he heard the same voices talking to him through the walls, floor and ceiling. [REDACTED] stated that he moved to his third hotel and is currently at the Marriott. [REDACTED] first said that the 3 individuals were speaking to him through the floor. Then [REDACTED] stated that the voices were coming through the ceiling. [REDACTED] stated that the individuals are using "some sort of microwave machine" to send vibrations through the ceiling, penetrating his body so he cannot fall asleep. When I asked [REDACTED] what the individuals were saying to him he would not elaborate. [REDACTED] stated that he has never felt anything like this and is worried that these individuals are going to harm him. [REDACTED] stated that he does not have a history of mental illness in his family and that he has never had any sort of mental episode. I advised [REDACTED] to stay away from the individuals that are following him and to notify NPD if they attempt to make contact with him. [REDACTED]

Alexis reportedly told the officer that three people were sent to "follow him and keep him awake by talking to him and sending vibrations into his body." Alexis attempted to change hotel rooms to another at a Navy base "where he heard the same voices talking to him through the walls, floor and ceiling." Alexis also noted these people were "using 'some sort of microwave machine' to send vibrations through the ceiling, penetrating his body so he cannot fall asleep."

The office wrote, "[Alexis] stated that he has never felt anything like this and is worried that these individuals are going to harm him." Alexis also told the officer that he did not have a history of mental illness, nor had he had any sort of mental episodes before.

While the media has already played judge and jury to Alexis on the Navy Yard shooting, this new document is bombshell. People talking to him through walls everywhere he went so he couldn't sleep? Microwave weapons like nothing he ever felt?

The mainstream media can try to spin this however it wants, but anyone who has done even a scant bit of research will recognize that those claims do not merely sound like the random thoughts of one mentally unhinged person.

Directed energy weapons are not science fiction; there are a multitude of patents (see here, here, here and here) for exactly the kind of mind weapon Alexis is describing. Our government has been refining these technologies, based on Nikola Tesla's research, for a long time now. For more on that, check out this unclassified document from the U.S. Army Intelligence and Security Command received via a Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request back in 2006 entitled, "Bioeffects of Selected Nonlethal Weapons".
