

Eva Browne Profile

Eva Brown is a dedicated Farm Technician proudly serving the Universal Farmers Association, where she channels her passion for sustainable agriculture and community development. Born on January 6, 1991, at J.J. Dossen Memorial Hospital in Harper, Maryland County, Eva's journey reflects resilience, determination, and a deep commitment to empowering rural farmers.

Eva's early childhood was marked by travels between Liberia and Ivory Coast, fleeing during the Liberian civil war. Her educational journey began in Ivory Coast, where she started primary school in 1995. After returning to Liberia in 2005, she continued her studies at St. Stephen Episcopal School in Pleebo, Maryland County, highlighting her early leadership and talents—she notably won the school queen competition and contributed to her school's soccer victory.

In pursuit of higher education, Eva enrolled at William V.S. Tubman University in 2017, earning a degree in General Agriculture by 2022. Her university years were distinguished by active participation in student politics—serving as College President in 2020/2021 and later as Vice President for the graduating class, showcasing her leadership skills and dedication to service.

Eva's passion for teamwork and independence shapes her approach to her work. She is committed to advancing agriculture practices that benefit rural women, focusing on innovations such as honey bee farming, fish farming, and regenerative agriculture. Her drive to improve livelihoods and promote biodiversity conservation makes her a key asset in Liberia's agricultural sector. With her resilience and leadership, Eva Brown continues to inspire and uplift her community, working passionately to create sustainable change in rural farming communities.
