Program Officer

Universal Farmers Association (UFA)

Mr. Victor S. Kaie is a passionate agricultural professional dedicated to advancing sustainable farming practices and empowering rural communities through practical, knowledge-driven solutions. As the Program Officer of the Universal Farmers Association (UFA), Victor plays a vital role in planning, coordinating, and implementing programs that support smallholder farmers and promote agricultural resilience across Liberia.

Armed with a strong academic background and hands-on field experience, Victor brings a rare combination of technical knowledge and administrative precision to his work. He holds a Bachelor of Science in Plant and Soil Science from Cuttington University, as well as an Associate Degree in General Agriculture from Cuttington Junior College. These qualifications have provided him with a comprehensive understanding of crop management, soil conservation, sustainable farming systems, and agroecological practices suited to Liberia's unique agricultural landscape.

Complementing his technical expertise is a Diploma in Secretarial Science from the Booker Washington Institute (BWI), which has sharpened his organizational, communication, and documentation skills—key attributes for executing development programs, managing stakeholder relationships, and ensuring smooth project operations.

Based in Lower Margibi County, Victor is deeply rooted in the community he serves. He understands firsthand the challenges faced by local farmers and works tirelessly to connect them with the knowledge, tools, and resources they need to increase productivity and improve livelihoods. His work as Program Officer involves everything from designing farmer training modules and monitoring project progress to engaging with government agencies, NGOs, and donor organizations.

Victor is particularly passionate about finding innovative and scalable solutions to agricultural challenges, including low yields, poor soil health, and limited market access. His forward-thinking approach has made him a key figure in UFA's mission to promote climate-smart agriculture, improve food security, and foster economic development in rural Liberia.

What sets Victor apart is his commitment to collaboration and capacity building. He thrives in team environments, values knowledge-sharing, and is always looking to partner with individuals and organizations that share a vision for a thriving, self-sufficient agricultural sector. Whether facilitating farmer field schools, evaluating soil management practices, or contributing to strategic planning, Victor brings energy, dedication, and a results-driven mindset to every initiative.

At UFA, Victor is more than a program officer—he is a bridge between theory and practice, policy and people, innovation and impact. His work continues to shape a future where Liberian farmers are equipped, empowered, and economically resilient.

With his blend of technical knowledge, administrative skill, and heartfelt dedication to service, Mr. Victor S. Kaie is helping lead the charge toward a stronger, greener, and more sustainable agricultural future for Liberia.
