Phytogenic antimicrobial for better poultry production

Powered by essential oil

Natural product with garlicin and curcumin

In terms of gut health, plant based essential oils have been shown to have antimicrobial, antioxidant, anti-inflammatory, and immunomodulatory effects, which may contribute to improved intestinal health in poultry.

Combination of several essential oils improves intestinal morphology, increases the expression of genes associated with gut barrier function, and reduces the levels of harmful bacteria in the gut. Another study showed that adding a blend of essential oils from cinnamon, thyme, and oregano to the diet of chicken resulted in improved gut health, as evidenced by reduced intestinal inflammation and improved immune function
