DATE PALM FRUIT

Dates are the fruit of the palm tree, which grows in many tropical regions of the world. Dates have become very popular in recent years. Almost all dates imported from outside the country are dried.

We grow palm trees a lot, we produce about 600 trees a year, and we export them to many regions in Somalia.

You can tell if dates are dried or not by their appearance. Wrinkled skin indicates dryness, while smooth skin indicates freshness.

Depending on the variety, fresh dates are very small in size and range in color from bright red to bright yellow. Commonly used varieties include Medjool and Deglet Noor dates.

Dates are chewy with a sweet taste. They are also rich in some important nutrients and have various benefits and advantages.

HUSBANDRY GOAT AND SHEEP

The indigenous breeds of the Ogaden Sheep and goat, which are highly acclimatized to the extreme conditions of the local climate, disease and parasites can be used. The black-head sheep from the Ogaden have high demand in the middle-east market. The flock will have sheep to goat ratio of 3:1. Main activities of the project will be conditioning, cleaning, feeding, upgrading, etc, of the above mentioned breeds. In the farm, intensive flock management, which includes proper feeding, ensuring the health of the flock, etc, will be carried out

Sheep and goat will reach the farm through suppliers or contract as per the pre-determined procurement procedure. The next process will be receiving and treating the animals. The treatment includes weighing, vaccination and deworming followed by prophylactic treatment. Physical examination to isolate sick animals and separation of sexes are also part of the production process. Then, the actual feeding and supplements practice are the main part of the task. Castration will be done depending on the request of the client. The final stage of this process will be marketing. At this time it is also important to separate marketable and unfit animals
