Di Mighty 1ne: From Herbalist Anthem to Global Stardom

Now a musical ambassador for the world, Di Mighty 1ne born Sharmac Blake gained fame with records such as Herbalist Anthem, Say What You Wanna, Afro-dancehall style track Genie as well as Strongest Man Alive and 100 Spliff.

Reggae Roots and Afro-Dancehall Grooves

Reggae Heritage

A star, Di mighty 1ne is easy to listen to, often showing reggae in all its glory.

Afro-Dancehall Style

His other records include Bad Breed and Dream as well as his Emerge Mixtape produced by Mike Dread.

Record Collection

Music started early for the locs man who attended Sabbath School & Church and as a member on the junior choir sang regularly at church functions.

From the Herbalist Anthem to Genie

In high school however Di Mighty 1ne penned his own lyrics and remixed popular tunes as his buddy knocked the bench and made a riddim while he sung or djed.

This attracted keen attention and made the youth hone his skills having derived inspiration from greats such as Bob Marley, Peter Tosh, Michael Jackson, Buju Banton, Beenie Man and Bounty Killa.

Having left his Richmond Park, Clarendon base where he grew under the wings of grandparents, mom aunt and uncles, Di Mighty 1ne paired with a friend whose brother was into production.

In Kingston, away from May Pen, he met notable artistes such as Luciano, Turbulence, Jah Mason and Lutan Fyah.

Bad Breed and Dream: More Than Just Music

After the first professional track was recorded; Di Mighty 1ne wanted more and has since continued recording professional tracks and releasing on all digital platforms as well as performing within Jamaica and globally.
