about my Peranakan Culture

Growing up in Penang, I learned early that food is more than just sustenance, it's memory, it's belonging, it's home. I am Min, and Kita Kuisine is my love letter to my Peranakan heritage.

"Peranakan" means "descendant", and we are the children of early Chinese migrants who fell in love with the lands of Penang, Malacca, Singapore, Indonesia, and Thailand. From that beautiful marriage of cultures came something extraordinary: a cuisine that doesn't blend in, but stands proudly at the crossroads. We took local cooking methods, embraced native spices, and created something vibrant, authentic, and unapologetically bold in flavour.

In my community, we don't just cook for ourselves. We open our homes during festive seasons, weddings, and birthdays. We gather around the Tok Panjang — a long table dressed in exquisite Nyonyaware, overflowing with homemade delicacies that have been passed down through generations. That table isn't just furniture. It's an invitation. It says: come, sit, eat, belong.

That spirit of togetherness is exactly why I named my business Kita Kuisine. In Malay, "Kita" means "we" or "us" — not "me" or "I". Because at Kita Kuisine, our food has never been just mine. It's ours. From the spices we toast by hand to the warm welcome you receive at every event, everything we do is built on unity, inclusion, and the unshakeable belief that the best meals are the ones shared.

Welcome to our table. Welcome to Kita.
