The definite article with nouns

Let's first look at the definite article. All nouns in French have a gender: masculine or feminine, whether they refer to a person, an animal, a thing, or an abstract notion. While English has only one definite article the, French uses le for masculine nouns and la for feminine nouns. Le and la are shortened to l' before a singular noun or adjective that begins with a vowel sound. The plural les is used for both masculine and feminine.

Masculine

|-------------------|--------------------|
| le village | the village |
| le pont | the bridge |

Feminine

| | |
|------------------|-------------------|
| la ville | the city |
| la région | the region |

Plural

|--------------------------------------|---------------------|
| les villages (m.pl.) | the villages |
| les villes (f.pl.) | the cities |

Le and la become l' in front of singular nouns starting with a vowel or a mute h.

|----------------|-------------------|
| l'océan | the ocean |
| l'ami | the friend |

| | |
|--------------------|--------------------|
| l'île | the island |
| l'autoroute | the highway |

Où se trouve le pont Alexandre III?

Where is the Alexandre III bridge?

La ville principale est à cent kilomètres d'ici.

The main town is a hundred kilometers away.

Prenez le chemin sur la droite.

Le réchauffement de la planète est le sujet de sa conférence.

Les enfants jouent dans le jardin.

The children are playing in the garden.

L'ami de Sonia est japonais.

| | | | |
|----------------------------|--------------------------|----------------------------|---------------------------------------|
| la terre | Earth | une plaine | a plain |
| une planète | a planet | une vallée | a valley |
| un pays | a country | une montagne | a mountain |
| un continent | a continent | une colline | a hill |
| une capitale | a capital | une île | an island |
| une ville | a city | un pont | a bridge |
| un village | a village | la mer | a sea |
| une rue | a street | un océan | an ocean |
| une ruelle | an alley, a lane | une rivière | a river (tributary) |
| une impasse | a dead end | un fleuve | a river (flowing into the sea) |
| un plan de la ville | a city map | un ruisseau | a brook, a stream |
| un arrondissement | a (city) district | le nord | north |
| une région | a region | le sud | south |
| une province | a province | l'est (m.) | east |
| un état | a state | l'ouest (m.) | west |
| un royaume | a kingdom | un peuple | a people, a nation |
| le désert | the desert | une tribu | a tribe |
| une frontière | a border | autochtone | native |
| une carte | a map | étranger, étrangère | foreign |
| une route | a road | inconnu(e) | foreign, unknown |
| une autoroute | a highway | | |
| une côte | a coast(line) | | |

The indefinite and partitive articles with nouns

The indefinite articles are un (masculine singular) (a), une (feminine singular) (a), and des (both masculine and feminine plural) (some).

Masculine

| | |
|--------------------|------------------------------|
| un projet | a project, a plan |
| un bâtiment | a building |
| un immeuble | an apartment building |

Feminine

| | |
|----------------------|---------------------|
| une maison | a house |
| une lampe | a lamp |
| une avalanche | an avalanche |
| une aubergine | an eggplant |

Masculine or feminine

|--------------------------|---------------------|
| un(e) architecte | an architect |
| un(e) artiste | an artist |
| un(e) journaliste | a journalist |

Masculine and feminine plural

|-----------------------------|----------------------------|
| des murs (m.pl.) | (some) walls |
| des balcons (m.pl.) | (some) balconies |
| des fenêtres (f.pl.) | (some) windows |
| des amis (m.pl.) | (some) friends (m.) |
| des amies (f.pl.) | (some) friends (f.) |

Est-ce qu'il y a une piscine?

Is there a swimming pool?

Elle a acheté un vélo.

She bought a bike.

Nous avons vu des lapins dans le jardin.
Il a acheté des rideaux pour le salon.
Il a un nouveau chien.
Tu veux emprunter un de mes livres?

*We saw (some) rabbits in the garden.
He bought (some) curtains for the living room.
He has a new dog.
Do you want to borrow one of my books?*

The partitive article

The partitive article is used when the exact quantity of an item is unknown. In English, the partitive article is often omitted. We say, “I want bread” or “I want some bread.” However, the partitive article is always required in French. It is formed by combining de and the definite article.

de + le = du
de + la = de la de + les = des

Je voudrais du pain.
Elle mange du chocolat.
Nous buvons de l'eau minérale.
Il achète de la viande.
Elle fait pousser des haricots verts.

*I would like some bread.
She eats chocolate.
We drink mineral water.
He is buying meat.
She grows green beans.*

When used in the negative, the du, de la, and des all become de, since the quantity of the item doesn't exist any longer.

Ce village a du charme.
Ce village n'a pas de charme.
Il prête de l'argent à son ami.
Il ne prête pas d'argent à son ami.
Elle a des amis à Paris.
Elle n'a pas d'amis à Paris.
Nous avons des cartes routières.
Nous n'avons pas de cartes routières.

*This village has charm.
This village has no charm.
He lends money to his friend.
He does not lend any money to his friend.
She has friends in Paris.
She does not have any friends in Paris.
We have road maps.
We do not have any road maps.*

One exception to this rule is when using the verb être (to be). In the negative, the partitive article is always used with être.

C'est du fromage de chèvre.
Ce n'est pas du fromage de chèvre.
C'est de la porcelaine.
Ce n'est pas de la porcelaine.
C'est de l'eau potable.
Ce n'est pas de l'eau potable.

*It's goat cheese.
It's not goat cheese.
It's porcelain.
It's not porcelain.
It's drinkable water.
It's not drinking water.*

Accent on accents

There is an annoying tendency, quite widespread in the English-speaking world, to dismiss French accents as another example of Gallic eccentricity. In fact, there are reference sources, whose publishers shall remain unnamed, containing thousands of titles, without accents, of French-language publications. French accents are a nuisance, these publishers maintain, and what counts is correct spelling. Indeed, but while we're talking about correct spelling, let us remind the anti-accent crowd that the result of removing a needed accent is a typo.

As we shall see, French accents, which by the way have nothing to do with stress, not only indicate the correct pronunciation of a vowel, but also act as semantic markers. For example, consider the following two exclamations:

Vivre . . . ou . . . ?
Vivre . . . où . . . ?

They may sound the same, but their meaning is completely different. The first phrase, which might remind us of the dilemma expressed in Hamlet's famous soliloquy, could be translated as: To live . . . or to . . . ?

Perhaps expressing some confusion, but definitely lacking any sinister overtones, the second phrase means: To live . . . where . . . ?

Or imagine getting a photograph of a friend at the Louvre Pyramid in Paris. Without the necessary accent, the caption would read:

Marie a la pyramide du Louvre.

This literally means: Marie has the Louvre Pyramid.

Without the accent grave, a is the third-person singular of the verb avoir; when we add the accent grave, as in à, we get a preposition! Now you know why people who denigrate French accents are not to be trusted.

There are four accents in French for vowels and a cedilla for the consonant c. In most cases, their main purpose is to modify the pronunciation of a vowel, except for the cedilla, of course, which modifies the pronunciation of a consonant.

É

The accent aigu (acute accent) ' is used only with the vowel e, as in été (summer), and it indicates that the vowel should be pronounced as a closed e. Think of the e in the English word bed. Here are other examples:

|-----------|---------------|
| le café | coffee |
| le céleri | celery |
| le désir | desire |

| | |
|---------------|-----------------------------|
| l'épaule | shoulder |
| gérer | to manage, to handle |
| le médecin | doctor |
| le mélange | mix |
| le musée | museum |
| la poésie | poetry |
| la sécheresse | drought |

In some words the initial é replaces an initial s that figures in earlier Latin and Old French forms. Note that the Latin s is still alive in the English cognates. Let's look at a few examples:

| | |
|----------------|-------------------------|
| l'éponge | sponge |
| l'état, l'État | state, condition |
| l'étudiant | student |
| étudier | to study |

È, À, and Ù

The accent grave (grave accent) ` is used on the vowels a, e, and u, as in à (at, in) and mère (mother), and has a more open pronunciation. For example, è resembles the vowel sound in the English word bad. (If you ever meet someone from Geneva, Switzerland, ask him or her to pronounce the name of that city: Genève. You will hear a deliciously open vowel in the second syllable.) Let's look at other examples:

| | |
|----------------|-----------------------------|
| à | at, in |
| après | after |
| la/la collègue | colleague |
| le congrès | congress, conference |
| la crème | cream |
| la grève | strike |
| l'interprète | interpreter |
| là | here, there |
| où | where |
| le procès | lawsuit |

Circumflex

The accent circonflexe ^ (circumflex) can be found on a, e, i, o, and u:

| | |
|--|--|
| Le chien s'amuse avec un bâton. | The dog plays with a stick. |
| Ils ramassent des champignons dans la forêt. | They pick mushrooms in the woods. |
| Un touriste finlandais est tombé dans un abîme dans les Alpes. | A Finnish tourist fell into an abyss in the Alps. |
| Les hôtes sont arrivés en retard. | The guests arrived late. |
| Cette pêche n'est pas mûre. | This peach is not ripe. |

If the English cognate contains an s that is missing in the French word, you may assume that the French word will need a circumflex accent, which fills the space created by the disappearance of the s in French. Most of these words, as you may have guessed, are derived from Latin. For example:

|---------|--------------|
| le coût | cost |
| la fête | feast |

| | |
|-----------|----------|
| la forêt | forest |
| l'hôpital | hospital |
| l'hôte | host |
| l'intérêt | interest |
| la pâte | pasta |

It is important to identify the meaning of words. Look at the examples:

- ◆ a versus à
Il a un nouvel ordinateur.
Il habite à Strasbourg.
 - ◆ de versus dé
Elle est revenue de Turquie.
Les enfants jouaient aux dés dans la rue.
 - ◆ du versus dû
Tu veux du thé ou du café?
Ils ont dû partir à six heures.
- He has a new computer.
He lives in Strasbourg.*
- She came back from Turkey.
The children played dice on the street.*
- Do you want some tea or coffee?
They had to leave at 6 o'clock.*

Diaeresis

Another accent is the tréma, or diaeresis. The diaeresis is used when two vowels are next to each other and the accented vowel represents a separate sound. In other words, both vowels in a diphthong must be articulated. For example:

| | |
|-------------|-------------|
| aïe | ouch |
| ambiguïté | ambiguity |
| archaïque | archaic |
| bonsaï | bonsai |
| Caraïbe | Caribbean |
| coïncidence | coincidence |
| égoïste | selfish |
| faïence | earthenware |
| héroïne | heroine |
| laïc | secular |
| maïs | corn |
| mosaïque | mosaic |
| naïve | naive |
| Noël | Christmas |

La cédille

There is also a graphic sign called la cédille, ç. The cédille (cedilla) is found only under the letter c before the vowels a, o, and u. It changes the hard sound of catalogue (catalog) (like a k) into a soft sound of ça (this, that). It is not used with the vowels e and i.

| | |
|---------------|----------------------|
| la balançoire | swing |
| le commerçant | shopkeeper, merchant |
| la façade | façade, front |
| la façon | way, manner |
| français | French |
| le garçon | boy |
| le glaçon | ice cube |
| la leçon | lesson |
| le reçu | receipt |
| le soupçon | suspicion |

It is important to remember to use the cédille when conjugating verbs in different tenses:

| | |
|-----------------|------------------------------|
| nous commençons | we start |
| elle a aperçu | she noticed |
| en remplaçant | while replacing |
| il menaçait | he was threatening |
| nous plaçons | we are placing |
| je soupçonne | I suspect |
| tu déplaçais | you moved |
| ils enfonçaient | they pushed, hammered |
| je conçois | I conceive, imagine |
| il pinça | he pinched |

9. J'ai enfin recu/ressu/reçu ma commande de livres.
10. Les associations écologiques empêchèrent/empecherent/empêchèrent le départ du vieux bateau.

1·3

Restore the accents or the graphic signs in the following passage. (See Translations at the back of this book for the English.)

La porte etroite, André Gide (1909) —Tiens! Ma porte n'était donc pas fermée? dit-elle.

—J'ai frappé; tu n'as pas répondu, Alissa, tu sais que je pars demain?

Elle ne répondit rien, mais posa sur la cheminée le collier qu'elle ne parvenait pas à agrafer. Le mot: fiancailles me paraissait trop nu, trop brutal, j'employai je ne sais quelle périphrase à la place. Des qu'Alissa me comprit, il me parut qu'elle chancela, s'appuya contre la cheminee ... mais j'étais moi-même si tremblant que craintivement j'évitais de regarder vers elle.

J'étais pres d'elle et, sans lever les yeux, lui pris la main; elle ne se dégagea pas, mais, inclinant un peu son visage et soulevant un peu ma main, elle y posa ses lèvres et murmura, appuyée à demi contre moi:

—Non, Jerome, non; ne nous fiançons pas, je t'en prie ... [...]

—Pourquoi?

—Mais c'est moi qui peux te demander: pourquoi? pourquoi changer?

Je n'osais lui parler de la conversation de la veille, mais sans doute elle sentit que j'y pensais, et, comme une réponse à ma pensée, dit en me regardant fixement:

—Tu te meprends, mon ami: je n'ai pas besoin de tant de bonheur. Ne sommes-nous pas heureux ainsi?

Elle s'efforçait en vain à sourire.

—Non, puisque je dois te quitter.

—Ecoute, Jerome, je ne puis te parler ce soir ... Ne gatons pas nos derniers instants ...

Non, non. Je t'aime autant que jamais; rassure-toi. Je t'écrirai; je t'expliquerai. Je te promets de t'écrire, dès demain ... dès que tu seras parti. Va, maintenant!

The h aspiré

In the French language, about 1,500 words start with the letter h. And of these, three hundred of them are called h aspiré.

You are acquainted with nouns like l'habitant (inhabitant), l'habitude (habit), l'hélicoptère (helicopter), l'heure (hour, time), l'histoire (history, story), l'hiver (winter), l'homme (man), l'hôpital (hospital), l'hôtel (hotel), l'huile (oil), and so on. These nouns start with an h that is silent and the article that precedes them needs an apostrophe.

The h aspiré is also silent, but the liaison between the article and the noun is not allowed, so there is no apostrophe on the article. Here are some of the most important nouns with h aspiré:

|-----------------|-----------------------|
| la haie | hedge |
| la haine | hatred |
| le hamac | hammock |
| le hameau | hamlet |
| la hanche | hip |
| le handicap | handicap |
| le haricot | bean |
| le hasard | chance |
| le harcèlement | harassment |
| la hausse | increase, rise |
| le haut | top, summit |
| le héros | hero |
| la hiérarchie | hierarchy |
| le homard | lobster |
| la honte | shame |
| le hors-d'œuvre | hors-d'oeuvre |

This is of the utmost importance, for you don't want the French laughing at you when they hear: les héros de la Révolution, which when pronounced without the aspiration sounds like "The zeros (dummies) of the Revolution"!

As we've seen before, rules can be unreliable, so it's better to remember words in context.

Using the preceding vocabulary list of h aspiré words, translate the following sentences using the est-ce que form and tu when necessary.

1. The hierarchy in this organization is a game of chance.

2. The hero of this new film is a man who lives in the hamlet next to our village.

3. The hatred between the two brothers is well-known.

4. Nora is surprised by the increase of the prices of the hotel's restaurant.

5. The hors-d'oeuvres they served were delicious.

6. Do you want to order the lobster on the menu?

7. Carole's father fractured his hip last week.

8. The hammock in the garden is a gift from Laurent.

9. The cold winter in this city is the main handicap for our grandparents.

10. The shame of his defeat is hard to accept.

Capitalization

In French, the capitalization of words differs quite a bit from English capitalization. After all this business of “rules but no rules,” one rule is pretty solid: capitalization is more frequent in English than it is in French. Let’s look at a few examples.

Nationalities

Adjectives that refer to nationalities are capitalized in English but not in French. Nouns that refer to nationalities are capitalized in both languages. For example:

Marie est française.

Paolo est brésilien.

Marie is French.

Paolo is Brazilian.

Son professeur est un Français de Lyon.

Elle partage un appartement avec une Italienne.

Her teacher is a Frenchman from Lyon.

She shares her apartment with an Italian woman.

Languages

Languages are capitalized in English but not in French. For example:

Ils apprennent l'arabe.

Nous parlons espagnol à la maison.

They are learning Arabic.

We speak Spanish at home.

Locations

When you write an address, the words for street, avenue, place, and other names for roads are not capitalized. For example:

25, rue de l'Université

55, avenue de Neuilly

110, boulevard des Capucines

37, quai Branly

1, place des Abbesses

7, impasse de la Tonnelle

Dates, time, days, months, and seasons

Such words are not capitalized. For example:

Son anniversaire est le 23 août.

Nous partirons le 5 décembre.

Paris, le 10 mars 2013

Il est 10h05.

His birthday is on the 23rd of August.

We'll leave on December 5.

Paris, March 10, 2013

It is 10:05 a.m.

Religions

In French, the names of religions tend not to be capitalized except l'Islam (Islam):

le christianisme

Christianity

le judaïsme

Judaism

le bouddhisme

Buddhism

l'hindouisme

Hinduism

Geographical nouns

Geographic names, as we have seen at the beginning of this chapter, are capitalized: l'Asie (Asia), l'Europe (Europe), les États-Unis (United States), la Loire (Loire River), La Nouvelle-Orléans (New Orleans), La Havane (Havana), Aix-en-Provence (Aix-en-Provence).

If the geographic noun is composed of a generic name (bay, cape, river, sea, etc.) and a specific noun, only the specific noun is capitalized:

la mer Rouge

the Red Sea

la mer Noire

the Black Sea

la mer Morte

the Dead Sea

l'île Maurice

Mauritius Island

l'île de Ré

Île de Ré

la baie des Anges

the Bay of Angels

le cap Horn la péninsule Ibérique le désert d'Arabie l'océan Pacifique le pôle Nord

*Cape Horn
the Iberian Peninsula
the Arabian Desert
the Pacific Ocean
the North Pole*

You will run into many other cases like l'Asie centrale (Central Asia), l'Asie Mineure (Asia Minor), l'Asie du Sud-Est (Southeast Asia), l'Arabie Saoudite (Saudi Arabia), le Moyen-Orient (the Middle East), l'Extrême-Orient (the Far East), les Grands Lacs (the Great Lakes), so check your dictionary.

EXERCICE

Translate the following sentences. Be aware of the capitalization of words, using tu when necessary.

1. Jean is Belgian.

2. Isabella is Hungarian.

3. Bruno's children speak French with their friends and English with their parents.

4. In Greece, winter is mild.

5. Lucie was born on February 28.

6. The jazz festival takes place from July 1 to 4.

7. The Mediterranean Sea is less salty than the Dead Sea.

8. Spanish and Portuguese are the main languages in Latin America.

9. The South Pole is in the Antarctic.

10. When you are skiing in the Alps, you can go from France to Slovenia.

Addressing people

When writing to people in French, capitalize most titles:

Monsieur Verneuil
Madame Deneuve
Maître Didier Lebon
Monsieur le Recteur de l'académie de Poitiers
Monsieur le Premier ministre

Accents on capitals

An old topic for debate: are accents needed on capitals? Although there is still some disagreement, it is absolutely necessary to use accents on capitals to avoid misinterpretation. Here are a few examples of headlines in a newspaper. You'll see how including accents makes a significant difference!

| | |
|-------------------------------|--|
| A NANTES, UN ASSASSIN TUE. | IN NANTES, A MURDERER KILLS. |
| À NANTES, UN ASSASSIN TUÉ. | IN NANTES, A MURDERER IS KILLED. |
| PAUL EST INTERNE A L'HOPITAL. | PAUL IS AN INTERN IN THE HOSPITAL. |
| PAUL EST INTERNÉ À L'HÔPITAL. | PAUL IS CONFINED IN THE MENTAL HOSPITAL. |

And for another reason, it is simply more elegant in prose. It's a question of pure aesthetics. Just take a look:

Étant donné la promotion d'Air France pour les vols à destination des États-Unis, Ève et Édouard ont décidé de passer une semaine à la Nouvelle-Orléans.
Given the Air France promotion for flights to the USA, Ève and Édouard have decided to spend a week in New Orleans.

So, all to your keyboards!

Basic gender endings: Masculin and féminin

Basic endings

As you already know, there are two genders in French: masculine and feminine, preceded by the definite article le, la or the indefinite article un, une. Since the purpose of this book is to forge a reliable method of identifying and learning French genders, we will learn the fundamental rules governing genders, starting with masculine nouns and then moving on the feminine nouns. Along with the rules, we will identify their exceptions. Indeed, exceptions to grammatical rules can be annoying, but this is a “flaw” of all natural languages. (Only constructed languages, such as Esperanto, contain rules without exceptions.)

While you may be tempted to say that French gender can sometimes be arbitrary, you do have some name endings to rely on. Memorization is crucial. Every new word must be learned in conjunction with its gender. This knowledge, as you will find out, quickly becomes tacit, internalized. After some practice, you will be able to identify the gender of a word by relying on your intuition, without even having to think in terms of rules and exceptions.

In your mind, each word will become like a short musical phrase. You won’t have to think which key, major or minor, the musical phrase is in. You will simply know. When you study music, you learn scales. In French: do, ré, mi, fa, sol, la, si, do. Learning endings is similar. Le train, le bateau, and le vin will appear on your masculine scale, whereas la beauté, la nature, and la culture will register on your feminine scale. French is all about sounds. Gustave Flaubert used to isolate himself and shout his novels aloud in his gueuloir—more or less his screaming room—to make sure the words flowed beautifully. Think of endings as musical notes on a score.

In this chapter, you will learn how to connect a noun to its gender marker by studying the main endings of masculine nouns. Feminine nouns will follow. For example, nouns ending in a consonant or in any vowel but e tend to be masculine:

|--------------------|-----------------|
| le bijou | jewel |
| le cacao | cocoa |
| le carnaval | carnival |
| le gala | gala |

|----------------|--------------|
| le gaz | gas |
| le lieu | place |
| le nez | nose |

| | |
|----------------|-------------|
| le sofa | sofa |
| le tact | tact |
| le zébu | zebu |

As we proceed, remember to focus on the endings and, at the same time, to memorize any exceptions that may crop up.

Basic masculine noun endings

The following endings tend to be masculine.

-age, -ige, -ège, -oge, -uge

| | |
|------------|----------|
| l'éloge | praise |
| le fromage | cheese |
| le mariage | marriage |

Stéphane Audeguy a écrit un livre merveilleux, Le petit éloge de la douceur. Les alpinistes ont dormi dans un refuge. Félicie a offert un fauteuil art déco à sa cousine comme cadeau de mariage.

| | |
|--------------|---------------|
| le prodige | prodigy, feat |
| le refuge | refuge |
| le sortilège | spell |

Stéphane Audeguy wrote a wonderful book, In Praise of Sweetness. The climbers slept in a refuge. Félicie gave her cousin an Art Deco armchair as a wedding gift.

However, there are a few exceptions:

| | |
|-----------|---------------------|
| la cage | cage |
| l'horloge | clock |
| l'image | image |
| la loge | dressing room/lodge |
| la luge | luge |
| la nage | swimming |

Il manque la dernière page du livre. Nous avons félicité la diva dans sa loge.

| | |
|------------|--------------------|
| la Norvège | Norway |
| la page | page |
| la plage | beach |
| la rage | rage, fury, rabies |
| la tige | stem |

The last page of the book is missing. We congratulated the diva in her dressing room.

-ail, -eUIL

| | |
|---------------|-----------------------|
| l'épouvantail | scarecrow |
| le fauteuil | armchair |
| le recueil | collection, anthology |

Henri a mis un épouvantail dans son jardin.
Zoé lit un recueil de poèmes dans son fauteuil.

|------------|----------------------|
| le seuil | doorstep, threshold |
| le travail | work |
| le vitrail | stained-glass window |

*Henri has placed a scarecrow in his garden.
Zoé is reading a poetry book in her armchair.*

-ain

| | |
|--------------|---------------|
| le bain | bath, swim |
| le grain | grain |
| le lendemain | following day |

|------------|--------------|
| le pain | bread |
| le terrain | ground, land |
| le train | train |

There is one exception: la main (hand).

| | |
|--|--|
| Samuel est arrivé le 3 mars et il est reparti le lendemain. | Samuel arrived on March 3rd and left the following day. |
| Va acheter du pain avant de prendre ton bain . | Go buy some bread before taking a bath. |

-al

| | | | |
|-------------|-----------|------------|------------------|
| le cheval | horse | le mal | harm, pain, evil |
| le festival | festival | le récital | recital |
| le journal | newspaper | le signal | signal |

Armelle a lu dans le journal qu'il y aurait un récital de musique baroque au festival de La Rochelle.
Le cheval d'Henri IV était-il vraiment blanc?

Armelle read in the paper that there would be a recital of baroque music at the La Rochelle festival.

Was Henri IV's horse really white?

-ament, -ement

| | | | |
|---|-------------------|------------------|---|
| le branchement | connection | le médicament | medicine/medication |
| le département | department | le réchauffement | warming |
| le jugement | judgment/sentence | le testament | testament |
| Ce médicament est recommandé pour l'hypertension. | | | This drug is recommended for high blood pressure. |
| Vu les problèmes dans la famille, il n'a pas encore fait son testament . | | | Given the family problems, he has not yet made out his will. |

-ard

| | | | |
|---|----------|--------------|---|
| le canard | duck | le regard | look/gaze |
| le guépard | cheetah | le renard | fox |
| le placard | cupboard | le vieillard | old man |
| Une famille de canards habite sur l'étang. | | | A family of ducks lives on the pond. |
| Son regard se posa sur elle. | | | His eyes came to rest on her. |

Some words ending in -ard may have a pejorative connotation, such as:

| | | | |
|--------------|-----------------------------|------------|---------|
| le bâtard | bastard, illegitimate child | le fêtard | reveler |
| le chauffard | reckless driver | le vantard | boaster |
| le clochard | bum | | |

-eau, -ou

| | | | |
|------------|-------|------------|---------|
| le bateau | boat | le chameau | camel |
| le bijou | jewel | le château | castle |
| le cerveau | brain | le chou | cabbage |

Patrick était le cerveau de l'affaire.
On lui a volé tous ses bijoux.

Patrick was the brains behind the job.
All of her jewelery was stolen.

Here are two exceptions: la peau (skin), l'eau (water). English and French share many nouns of Latin origin. It will come in handy to compare and deduce the meaning of words. For instance, these two particular exceptions are interesting, for they have retained the gender of their Latin ancestors: pellis (skin) and aqua (water).

-el

| | | | |
|-------------|-----------------|-------------|----------------------------|
| l'appel | call | le matériel | equipment, material |
| le caramel | caramel | le sel | salt |
| le logiciel | software | | |

Ce logiciel vous permettra de créer un site web.

Passe-moi le sel, s'il te plaît.

This software will help you create a website.

Pass me the salt, please.

-ent, -ant

| | | | |
|------------|----------------------|---------------|-------------------|
| l'argent | money | le restaurant | restaurant |
| le chant | singing, song | le talent | talent |
| le diamant | diamond | le vent | wind |

Here is one exception: la dent (tooth). And more Latin: dens (tooth) is feminine.

Églantine a emprunté de l'argent à sa mère.

Puis elle s'est offert une bague en diamant.

Eglantine borrowed money from her mother.

Then she treated herself to a diamond ring.

-er

| | | | |
|--------------|---------------|-------------|------------------|
| le boulanger | baker | le fer | iron |
| le danger | danger | le passager | passenger |
| le déjeuner | lunch | le verger | orchard |

Ils ne produisent que des poires Williams dans ce verger.

Si on prenait du pain perdu au petit déjeuner?

They only produce Williams pears in this orchard.

What about having some French toast for breakfast?

-ier/yer

| | | | |
|---------------|-----------------|------------|-----------------|
| le calendrier | calendar | le loyer | rent |
| le clavier | keyboard | le tablier | apron |
| le fichier | file | le voilier | sailboat |

Adèle n'a pas pu ouvrir ton fichier.

Le loyer est-il cher pour ce studio?

Adèle could not open your file.

Is the rent expensive for this studio?

-at, -et, -t

| | | | |
|------------|----------------------|--------------|---------------|
| l'alphabet | alphabet | le débat | debate |
| le billet | ticket | le lit | bed |
| le circuit | circuit, tour | le perroquet | parrot |

Nous regarderons le débat à la télé ce soir.

Ils dorment dans un lit à baldaquin.

We'll watch the debate on TV tonight.

They sleep in a four-poster bed.

Here are quite a few important exceptions:

| | | | |
|----------|---------------|------------|---------------------------|
| la dot | dowry | la nuit | night |
| la forêt | forest | la part | share |
| la mort | death | la plupart | most people/things |

The Latin word for forest, silva, although feminine, does not even resemble the French noun; however, it appears in words such as sylviculture (forestry). But look at the Latin roots of the other feminine words: nox (night), mors (death), pars (part, share), and dos (dowry).

| | |
|--|---|
| La nuit , tous les chats sont gris. | Everyone looks the same in the dark. |
| De nombreuses espèces de perroquets se trouvent dans la forêt tropicale de l'île Maurice. | Many species of parrot are to be found in the tropical forest of Mauritius Island. |

-eur

Nouns ending in -eur include names of professions as well as words denoting certain tools and machines.

| | | | |
|-----------------------|------------------------|-------------------------|---------------------|
| l'aspirateur | vacuum cleaner | le compositeur | composer |
| le climatiseur | air-conditioner | l'ordinateur | computer |
| le cœur | heart | le réfrigérateur | refrigerator |

Léa, tu devrais passer l'aspirateur dans le salon.

Paul-Henri a un cœur de pierre.

Léa, you should vacuum the living room.

Paul-Henri has a heart of stone.

Don't be intimidated by the references to Latin. No one expects a budding—or even competent—Francophone to become a Latinist. However, Latin is not only the direct ancestor of French but also a living presence. When a French-speaking person dips into the vast ocean of Latin vocabulary to create a handy neologism, he or she, as scholars have written, is not borrowing from a foreign language.

While English is a bit removed from Latin, let us not forget the Norman Conquest (1066), which imposed Norman French on England for more than three centuries. English was not accepted in the courts until 1386, becoming the fully accepted idiom only around 1400. As a result, modern English retains an enormous Latin vocabulary, acquired via Norman French. In fact, English is probably more French than any other non-Romance language, and English speakers use French in everyday life without even knowing it. For example, while love is a Germanic word, its adjective, amorous, is French. We are so used to our Romance vocabulary that we don't even notice our natural bilingualism when we alternate, depending on the context, between friendly (Germanic) and amicable (French). There are thousands of such examples—no surprise, since around 30 percent of our vocabulary is French. These affinities and similarities between English and French are good news for the learner.

In another example, we are all familiar with an elegant French word for software: logiciel. But the word for gamework, ludiciel, is equally elegant. Why ludiciel, you might wonder, since the word for game is jeu? But the Latin word for game is ludus, and the neologism sounds quite native to a French ear. Another interesting Latin-derived word is the French word for computer, ordinateur. It comes from the Latin ordinator, which not only means, literally, the one who puts things in order, but is also a synonym for God!

|-------------|---------------------------------------|---------------|-------------------|
| le bien | good | l'italien | Italian |
| le chien | dog | le lien | link, tie |
| l'entretien | interview, upkeep, maintenance | le végétarien | vegetarian |

Ludovic ne sait pas discerner le bien du mal.

L'entretien de ces jardins coûte une fortune.

Ludovic is not able to tell good from evil.

The maintenance of these gardens costs a fortune.

-illon

| | | | |
|---------------|-----------------------------|---------------|-------------------------|
| le bouillon | broth, bubble | le grillon | cricket |
| le brouillon | first draft, outline | le papillon | butterfly |
| l'échantillon | sample | le tourbillon | whirlwind, swirl |

Voudriez-vous un échantillon de ce tissu en lin?

La bibliothèque Mitterrand a organisé une exposition sur les brouillons des plus grands écrivains.

Would you like a sample of this linen fabric?

The Mitterrand Library organized an exhibit on the greatest writers' drafts.

| | | | |
|------------|------------------------|-----------|-------------|
| le chagrin | grief | le moulin | mill |
| le dessin | drawing, design | le vin | wine |
| le jardin | garden | | |

One exception is la fin (end).

Théo a fait un joli dessin dans le jardin.
Le meunier est mort de chagrin dans son moulin.

*Théo did a nice drawing in the garden.
The miller died of sorrow in his mill.*

| | | | |
|--------------|-------------------|-------------|---------------------|
| le compromis | compromise | le fouillis | mess, jumble |
| le croquis | sketch | le taudis | slum |
| le devis | estimate | le tennis | tennis |

There are two exceptions: la souris (mouse) and la vis (screw).

Pourriez-vous nous donner un devis pour les réparations?
Quel fouillis! Je ne retrouve même plus la souris de mon ordinateur!

*Could you give us an estimate for the repairs?
What a mess! I can't even find my computer mouse!

-isme

| | | | |
|-------------|--------------------|---------------|--------------------|
| l'égoïsme | selfishness | le romantisme | romanticism |
| l'héroïsme | heroism | le séisme | earthquake |
| l'optimisme | optimism | le socialisme | socialism |

Le séisme a fait de nombreuses victimes.
L'héroïsme de la population était inouï.

*The earthquake killed many people.
The heroism of the people was unbelievable.*

-oir, -oin

| | |
|------------|--------------|
| le besoin | need |
| le coin | corner, part |
| le couloir | hallway |

Sabrine a besoin d'un nouveau miroir.
Appelez le témoin!

|-------------|----------|
| le miroir | mirror |
| le témoin | witness |
| le trottoir | sidewalk |

*Sabrine needs a new mirror.
Call the witness!*

-on, -om

| | |
|--------------|------------|
| le cornichon | gherkin |
| le nom | name |
| le prénom | first name |

| | |
|------------|-------------|
| le salon | living room |
| le torchon | dish towel |
| le violon | violin |

Here are a few exceptions:

| | |
|------------|-----------|
| la boisson | beverage |
| la chanson | song |
| la cloison | partition |
| la cuisson | cooking |
| la façon | manner |

Passe-moi le torchon jaune!
Quelle est l'origine de ce prénom?—
Maylis? Je crois que c'est breton.

| | |
|--------------|----------|
| la leçon | lesson |
| la livraison | delivery |
| la rançon | ransom |
| la trahison | betrayal |

*Hand me the yellow dish towel!
What is the origin of this first name?—
Maylis? I think it is Breton.*

Bear in mind that the -on ending often indicates Latin ancestry and that many feminine Latin words ending with -tio acquired -tion endings, which are also feminine in French. Thus the Latin natio became nation. In the same vein, chanson comes from cantio and leçon from lectio. It is safe to say that you have to be extra careful with -on words. For example, son (sound) retains the masculine gender of sonus, its Latin ancestor, whereas words like nation are feminine. It might be helpful to treat -tion as a separate ending, which always indicates a feminine word.

-phone

Nouns ending with -phone are masculine, often referring to machines and instruments connected to sound. This is a bit funny, because this ending stems from the Greek word for voice, phōnē, which is feminine, just as the French word voix, which comes from the equally feminine Latin vox. Yes, Greek, too, lurks behind the scenes, but there is no need for panic. In French, we get to enjoy the lexical opulence of the two classical languages without having to learn their respective grammars. That is a good thing, of course, since French grammar, as we know, is enough of a challenge.

|-----------------|---------------|
| le magnétophone | tape recorder |
| le mégaphone | megaphone |
| le microphone | microphone |

| | |
|--------------|-----------|
| le saxophone | saxophone |
| le téléphone | telephone |
| le xylophone | xylophone |

Leur téléphone est en dérangement.
Guillaume joue du saxophone dans un club le jeudi soir.

Their phone is out of order.
Guillaume plays the saxophone in a club on Thursday nights.

-scope

Nouns ending in -scope refer to optical instruments and related things, which makes sense, because the suffix comes from the Greek verb skopeo, which means I look and I spy on someone.

| | | | |
|---|---------------------------|--|--------------------|
| l'horoscope | horoscope | le microscope | microscope |
| le kaléidoscope | kaleidoscope | le télescope | telescope |
| le magnétoscope | videotape recorder | le trombinoscope | group photo |
| Isabeau lit son horoscope tous les matins dans le journal. | | Isabeau reads her horoscope every morning in the paper. | |
| Nous avons observé Vénus grâce au télescope d'Alix. | | We looked at Venus thanks to Alix's telescope. | |

As you have seen, there is some method in the madness of genders. True, there is no set of rules, free of exceptions, that one could memorize and thereby master French genders. If that were true, there would be no need for this book! However, by memorizing the principal ending types, you will make great strides toward mastery. You might even decide that incomplete mastery may be OK, because it leaves room for mystery.

Other masculine endings

You thought you were done with masculine endings? Not so fast. There are other interesting cases.

-a

Nouns ending with -a are usually masculine:

| | | | | | |
|--------------------|----------------|-------------------|----------------|------------------|----------------|
| l'agenda | agenda | le choléra | cholera | le pyjama | pyjamas |
| le bégonia | begonia | le cinéma | cinema | le visa | visa |
| le brouhaha | hub bub | l'opéra | opera | | |

However, there are a few exceptions:

| | | | | | |
|-----------------|--------------|-------------------|----------------|-----------------|--------------|
| la diva | diva | la saga | saga | la villa | villa |
| la polka | polka | la véranda | veranda | | |

Le choléra sévit dans cette région.
Il faut un visa pour entrer dans ce pays.

Cholera is rampant in this region.
You need a visa to enter this country.

This may be quite confusing, since we know that -a is generally a feminine ending in Romance languages. Indeed, French can be a bit peculiar, but there is an explanation. Unlike the other Romance languages, French did not keep the -a ending in Latin-derived feminine nouns.

Nouns ending with -as are generally masculine:

| | | | | | |
|-------------------|----------------------|-------------------|--------------------|-------------------|---------------------|
| le bras | arm | le fracas | crash, roar | le pas | step |
| le cadenas | padlock | le lilas | lilac | le repas | meal |
| le cas | case | le matelas | mattress | le verglas | glazed frost |
| l'embarras | embarrassment | | | | |

|--|---|
| J'ai besoin d'un cadenas pour ma valise. | I need a padlock for my suitcase. |
| Alice a fait ses premiers pas à huit mois. | Alice made her first steps at the age of eight months. |

-ème, -me, -ome, -ôme, -aume, -rme, -sme

Nouns ending in -ème, -me, -ome, -ôme, -aume, -rme, and -sme tend to be masculine:

| | | | | | |
|----------|--------------|-------------|----------------|-----------|--------------|
| le dôme | dome | le problème | problem | le spasme | spasm |
| l'idiome | idiom | le royaume | kingdom | le terme | term |
| le poème | poem | | | | |

| | |
|---|--|
| Mon royaume pour un cheval! | My kingdom for a horse! |
| C'est le plus beau poème qu'il m'aït jamais écrit. | It is the most beautiful poem he ever wrote to me. |

-ble, -cle, -gle, -ple

Nouns ending in -ble, -cle, -gle, and -ple are often masculine:

| | | | |
|------------|----------------|--------------|---------------|
| l'angle | angle | le sable | sand |
| le câble | cable | le spectacle | show |
| le périple | journey | le temple | temple |

Here are some interesting exceptions, all with a Latin pedigree, except for la bible, a Greek interloper. The Greek neuter plural (ta biblia), which means the books, having become feminine in Romance languages because of its deceptive -a ending, was bound to become -e in French. Back to our Latin-derived exceptions:

| French | English | Latin |
|-----------|---------------|---------------------------------------|
| la boucle | buckle | buccula (meaning little mouth) |
| la fable | fable | fabula |
| la règle | rule | regula |
| la table | table | tabula |

| | |
|------------------------------------|--------------------------------------|
| Le spectacle ne dura qu'une heure. | The show lasted only an hour. |
| La boucle est bouclée. | We have come full circle. |

-ac, -ak, -ic, -oc, -uc

Nouns ending in -ac, -ak, -ic, -oc, and -uc tend to be masculine:

| | | | | | |
|------------|---------------------------|---------------|-------------------|-----------|----------------------------|
| l'ammoniac | ammonia | le croc | fang/ hook | le public | public |
| l'aqueduc | aqueduct | le diagnostic | diagnosis | le stuc | stucco |
| l'armagnac | Armagnac | le duc | duke | le tabac | tobacco |
| le basilic | basil | le fric | money/cash | le trafic | traffic |
| le bivouac | bivouac | le hamac | hammock | le troc | barter |
| le bloc | block, writing pad | le kayak | kayak | le truc | trick/thing/gimmick |
| le clic | click | le lac | lake | le viaduc | viaduct |

| | |
|---|--|
| Renaud vient de penser à un truc . | Renaud just thought of something. |
| Tu as un bloc de papier? | Do you have a writing pad? |

-g

Nouns ending in -g are generally masculine:

| | | | | | |
|-------------|-------------------------|---------|----------|---------|-------|
| l'étang | pond/lake | le joug | yoke | le sang | blood |
| le faubourg | suburb/ neighborhood | le rang | row/rank | | |

Tristan a du sang sur sa chemise.
Célie est assise au troisième rang.

*Tristan has blood on his shirt.
Célie is sitting in the third row.*

-O, -op, -ort, -os, -ot, -ours, -us

Nouns ending in -o, -op, -ort, -os, -ot, -ours, and -us are usually masculine:

| | | | | | |
|---------------|---------|------------|--------------------|-------------|-------------|
| l'abricot | apricot | l'escargot | snail | le numéro | number |
| le cactus | cactus | le jus | juice | l'ours | bear |
| le coquelicot | poppy | le lapsus | slip of the tongue | le paquebot | ocean liner |
| le cours | course | le lavabo | bathroom sink | le sirop | syrup |
| le dos | back | le mot | word | le sport | sport |
| l'effort | effort | le nimbus | nimbus cloud | le vélo | bicycle |

Quel numéro dois-je composer pour appeler Londres?
Vous devriez faire un effort!

*What number should I dial to call London?
You should make an effort!*

Remember that gender does not change when a word is abbreviated:

| | | | | | |
|----------|------------------|-----------|-------------|-----------|---------------------|
| la météo | weather forecast | la photo | photography | la stéréo | hi-fi/stereo system |
| la philo | philosophy | la psycho | psychology | la vidéo | video |

Comment il est, ton prof de philo? Your philosophy teacher, how is he?

-ogue

Nouns ending in -ogue that refer to certain professionals may be masculine or feminine. For example, while Claude Lévi-Strauss was un anthropologue (anthropologist), we would call Margaret Mead une anthropologue.

Masculine nouns ending in -ogue

| | | | |
|--------------|----------|-------------|----------|
| le catalogue | catalog | l'épilogue | epilogue |
| le dialogue | dialogue | le prologue | prologue |

A hint: all these words are in some way derived from the Greek logos, a masculine noun that means word, and from many other words.

Feminine nouns ending in -ogue

| | | | |
|------------|------------------------|--------------|---------------|
| la drogue | drug | la synagogue | synagogue |
| la morgue | haughtiness/morgue | la vogue | fashion/vogue |
| la pirogue | pirogue, dug-out canoe | | |

C'est la grande vogue maintenant.
Les Gauthier ont descendu l'Amazone en pirogue.

*It's all the rage now.
The Gauthiers went down the Amazon in a pirogue.*

-r, -er

Nouns ending in -r and -er are generally masculine:

| | | | | | |
|-----------|------------------|--------------|------------------|-------------|-----------------------|
| l'avenir | future | le cauchemar | nightmare | le jour | day |
| le bar | bar | le cuir | leather | le nénuphar | water lily |
| le car | bus/coach | le décor | décor | le tour | tour/trip/ride |
| le castor | beaver | le dollar | dollar | le trésor | treasure |

One exception to this rule is words ending in -eur when they do not denote a profession or a machine. Here are three additional exceptions:

| | |
|---------|------------------------|
| la cour | courtyard |
| la star | star, celebrity |
| la tour | tower |

C'était le pire cauchemar qu'on ait pu imaginer.

Un sans-abri a découvert un trésor dans une grotte.

It was the worst nightmare we could have imagined.

A homeless man discovered a treasure in a grotto.

-re

Nouns ending in -re are generally masculine:

| | | | | | |
|-----------|---------------|-----------|----------------------|-----------|-----------------------|
| le centre | center | le lustre | luster/gloss | le mètre | meter |
| le feutre | felt | le maître | master/artist | le ventre | stomach, belly |
| le filtre | filter | | | | |

These are some exceptions:

| | | | | | |
|------------|---------------|-----------|---------------|----------|--------------------|
| la fenêtre | window | la lettre | letter | la vitre | window pane |
| l'huître | oyster | la montre | watch | | |

Le centre culturel est juste à côté.

Ne partez pas le ventre creux!

Don't leave with an empty stomach!

-x, -xe

For the most part, nouns ending in -x and -xe are masculine:

| | | | | | |
|----------------|-------------------|-------------|------------------------|-------------|----------------|
| l'axe | axis | le flux | flow, tide | le luxe | luxury |
| le circonflexe | circumflex | l'inox | stainless steel | le lynx | lynx |
| le complexe | complex | le juke-box | jukebox | le paradoxe | paradox |
| l'équinoxe | equinox | le larynx | larynx | le sexe | sex |

Here are some exceptions:

| | |
|------------|---------------|
| la boxe | boxing |
| la syntaxe | syntax |
| la taxe | tax |

Interestingly, the word syntax is a derivation of the feminine Greek noun taxis, meaning battle array.

Tu oublies toujours le circonflexe sur « gâteau »!

Il vit dans le luxe.

You always forget the circumflex on gâteau!

He lives in luxury.

-e

Many nouns ending in -e are masculine, although there are some rather prominent feminine nouns in that category, such as la gloire. It is a mistake, however, to assume that the -e ending automatically defines a noun as feminine. Here are some examples:

| | | | | | |
|------------|---------|-----------|--------------|------------|-------------|
| l'ange | angel | le groupe | group | le pouce | thumb |
| le beurre | butter | le palace | palace | le souffle | breath/blow |
| le divorce | divorce | le peigne | comb | le verbe | verb |
| l'espace | space | le poste | position/job | le verre | glass |

Tu préfères le beurre salé ou le beurre doux? Do you prefer salted or unsalted butter?

Ce groupe est n'est pas compétent pour résoudre ce problème. This group is not competent to solve this problem.

Here we are, at the end of the masculine endings. Ouf!

To facilitate the memorization of gender, make up sentences or rhymes like this one:

Le soir, Lucas lis le journal dans son fauteuil et écoute le récital tandis que son chat joue avec le bouchon de la bouteille de son vin préféré.

At night, Lucas reads the paper in his armchair and listens to the recital while his cat plays with the cork from a bottle of his favorite wine.

Repeat this sentence a few times, and you'll have a few endings engraved in your mind. Then create new ones or extract some from French literature. Write them in a small notebook or make a "Gender" list on your computer. You'll see—it works!

Basic feminine noun endings

The following nouns tend to be feminine:

-ade

| | | | |
|-------------|--------------------------|--------------|------------|
| l'ambassade | embassy | la limonade | lemonade |
| la cascade | waterfall, stunt, series | la promenade | walk, ride |
| la grenade | grenade/pomegranate | la salade | salad |

Here are a few exceptions:

| | |
|----------|--------------|
| le grade | rank, degree |
| le jade | jade |
| le stade | stadium |

L'ambassade n'est pas ouverte aujourd'hui. The Embassy is not open today.
Moi, je prends la salade niçoise. I'm having the salad niçoise!

-aie

| la conjugaison | conjugation, union | la saison | season |
| la maison | house | la toison | fleece, mane |

Here are a few exceptions:

| | |
|-----------|---------------|
| le poison | poison |
| le vison | mink |

Connais-tu la conjugaison du verbe « s'asseoir »?

Do you know the conjugation of the verb to sit?

Jonathan se met en colère pour une raison ou une autre.

Jonathan gets angry for some reason or other.

-ence, -ance

| | | | |
|----------------|---------------------|--------------|----------------------------|
| la chance | luck, chance | la puissance | power, authority |
| l'indépendance | independence | l'urgence | urgency, emergency |
| la présidence | presidency | la violence | violence, roughness |

Here is an exception: le silence (silence).

Vous avez de la chance d'aller en France demain.

You are lucky to go to France tomorrow.

Ils ont lutté pour leur indépendance.

They fought for their independence.

-ande

| | | | |
|-------------|---------------------------|------------|-----------------------------|
| l'amande | almond, kernel | la demande | request, application |
| la bande | band/bandage/group | la viande | meat |
| la commande | order, control | | |

Julien a envoyé sa demande hier.

Julien sent his application yesterday.

Ma commande n'est pas encore arrivée.

My order has not arrived yet.

-ée

| | | | |
|------------|--------------------------|------------|-----------------|
| l'année | year | la durée | duration |
| l'araignée | spider | l'idée | idea |

Here are a few exceptions:

| | |
|------------|--------------------|
| l'apogée | apogee/peak |
| l'athée | atheist |
| le colisée | coliseum |
| le lycée | high school |

| | |
|--------------------|-------------------|
| le mausolée | mausoleum |
| le musée | museum |
| le rez-de-chaussée | main floor |
| le trophée | trophy |

Quelles idées folles!

What crazy ideas!

Quelle sera la durée du vol?

What's the duration of the flight?

Words indicating quantity are often feminine:

|---------------|-----------------------|
| une assiettée | plateful |
| une bouchée | mouthful |
| une brassée | armful |
| une brouettée | wheelbarrowful |

| | |
|---------------|------------------|
| une cuillerée | spoonful |
| une pelletée | shovelful |
| une pincée | pinch |
| une poignée | handful |

Sofia est arrivée avec une brassée de fleurs sauvages.

Sofia arrived with an armful of wild flowers.

Maheu m'a donné une poignée de cerises.

Maheu gave me a handful of cherries.

-esse, -osse, -ousse

| | |
|-------------|--------------|

| la troussse | case |

Here are a couple of exceptions:

| | |
|-----------------|-------------------|
| le carrosse | coach |
| le pamplemousse | grapefruit |

Florin, he is the voice of wisdom.

J'ai perdu un bouton. Tu as une troussse à couture?

-ette

| | |
|--------------|---------------------|
| l'assiette | plate, basis |
| la dette | debt |
| la devinette | riddle |

| | |
|---------------|-----------------------------|
| la fourchette | fork/margin |
| la noisette | hazelnut, small knob |
| la serviette | towel/napkin |

Here are some interesting exceptions:

| | |
|--------------------|-----------------------|
| le bébé-éprouvette | test-tube baby |
| le casse-noisette | nutcracker |
| le porte-serviette | napkin holder |

| | |
|--------------|-----------------|
| le quartette | quartet |
| le quintette | quintet |
| le squelette | skeleton |

Diego a une dette de reconnaissance envers vous.

Diego has a debt of gratitude toward you.

Donne-moi une plus grande assiette.

Give me a larger plate.

-eur (excluding nouns denoting professions and machines)

| | |
|------------|---------------------|
| la chaleur | heat |
| la couleur | color, light |
| la fleur | flower |

| | |
|-----------|--------------------|
| la lueur | glow, light |
| la peur | fear |
| la tumeur | tumor |

Here are some exceptions:

| | |
|------------|------------------|
| le bonheur | happiness |
| l'honneur | honor |

Margaux a une peur bleue des souris.
De quelle couleur allez-vous repeindre votre salle de bain?

| | |
|------------|--------------------------|
| le labeur | labor/toil |
| le malheur | misfortune/ordeal |

Margaux is scared to death of mice.
What color are you going to repaint your bathroom?

-ie, -rie

| | |
|---------------|----------------------------|
| la magie | magic |
| la poésie | poetry, poem |
| la tapisserie | tapestry, wallpaper |

| | |
|-------------|----------------|
| la thérapie | therapy |
| l'utopie | utopia |
| la vie | life |

More exceptions to add to the list include:

| | |
|------------|----------------|
| le génie | genius |
| l'incendie | fire |
| le messie | messiah |

| | |
|--------------|-----------------|
| le parapluie | umbrella |
| le sosie | double |
| le zombie | zombie |

Marie Laveau croit à la magie.
La thérapie de Lola a duré cinq ans.

Marie Laveau believes in magic.
Lola's therapy lasted five years.

-ise

| | |
|------------|----------------------------|
| la cerise | cherry |
| la chemise | shirt, folder |
| la crise | crisis, attack, fit |

| | |
|----------------|-----------------------------|
| la gourmandise | delicacy, greediness |
| la surprise | surprise |
| la valise | suitcase, bag |

La crise financière a eu un impact catastrophique sur cette province.
Je pense que ta valise est trop lourde.

The financial crisis had a terrible impact on this province.
I think your suitcase is too heavy.

-aille

| | |
|-------------|-----------------------------|
| la bataille | battle, fight |
| l'écailler | scale, chip, flake |
| la faille | flaw/fault (geology) |

| | |
|-------------|--------------------------|
| la médaille | medal, disk |
| la paille | straw |
| la taille | waist/size/height |

An exception is le braille (Braille). This exception could be explained by the fact that the Braille alphabet was named after its inventor, Louis Braille (1809–1852).

C'est trop serré à la taille.
Il y a une faille dans votre argument.

It is too tight around the waist.
There is a flaw in your argument.

-ille

| | |
|--------------|-----------------------|
| la brindille | twig |
| la famille | family |
| la fille | girl, daughter |

| | |
|-------------|--------------------|
| la lentille | lens/lentil |
| la myrtille | bilberry |
| la vanille | vanilla |

Here is a trio of exceptions:

| | |
|---------------|--------------------------|
| le gorille | gorilla/bodyguard |
| le quadrille | quadrille |
| le vaudeville | vaudeville |

Manon does not want lentils but a vanilla ice cream cone.
Hadrien's family lives in Nîmes.

Manon ne veut pas de lentilles mais une glace à la vanille.
La famille d'Hadrien habite à Nîmes.

-ouille

| | | | |
|---------------|---------------------|----------------|--------------------|
| la brouille | disagreement | la nouille | noodles |
| la citrouille | pumpkin | la patrouille | patrol |
| la grenouille | frog | la ratatouille | ratatouille |

La ratatouille de votre grand-mère est délicieuse.

La grenouille est assise sur une citrouille près du lac.

Your grandmother's ratatouille is delicious.

The frog is sitting on a pumpkin near the lake.

-ique

| | | | |
|--------------|----------------|---------------|-------------------------|
| la botanique | botany | la polémique | controversy |
| la musique | music | la politique | politics, policy |
| la physique | physics | la république | republic |

Here are quite a few exceptions:

| | |
|----------------|-------------------|
| l'antibiotique | antibiotic |
| le lexique | glossary |
| le moustique | mosquito |
| le pique-nique | picnic |

| | |
|-----------------|------------------|
| le plastique | plastic |
| le portique | portico |
| le téléphérique | cable-car |

Quelle musique écoutez-vous?

Cette politique est fort dangereuse.

What music do you listen to?

This policy is quite dangerous.

Many -ique words come from Latin feminine nouns ending in -ica, such as musica and res publica. However, as we have seen, -ique words come to us from other languages as well, so one needs to tread gingerly.

-gion, -nion, -sion, -ssion

| | | | |
|------------------|---------------------------|------------|----------------|
| la compréhension | understanding | l'opinion | opinion |
| la décision | decision | la passion | passion |
| l'occasion | chance/opportunity | la région | region |

Damien n'a aucune compréhension de la situation.

Antonin doit se faire une opinion sur la situation.

Damien has no understanding of the situation.

Antonin must form an opinion on the situation.

-tion, -xion

| | | | |
|---------------|-----------------------------------|---------------|--------------------------|
| la connexion | connection | la population | population |
| la génération | generation | la révolution | revolution |
| l'information | information, piece of news | la tradition | tradition, legend |

Here are a few exceptions:

| | |
|-------------|---------------------------|
| l'avion | airplane |
| le champion | champion |
| le bastion | bastion/stronghold |

Ils sont fidèles à la tradition.
La Révolution française a eu lieu en 1789.

They are true to tradition.
The French Revolution took place in 1789.

Why doesn't avion, you may ask, share the feminine gender of the other Latin-based words on this list, such as population or tradition? Well, avion is different because it is a neologism, an artificial construction, just like logiciel.

When the airplane was invented, people scrambled to find the right word. English speakers could not come up with anything better than the vaguely Latinate aeroplane, or airplane, which was less cumbersome than the German das Flugzeug but still far from perfect. Fortunately, French speakers know how to benefit from their visceral connection to Latin, which non-Romance languages can only dream about. In fact, avion, a construction based on the feminine Latin noun avis, which means bird, exemplifies the facility with which French incorporates the stupendously rich Latin vocabulary into its own lexicon. This proves the thesis, advanced by the great German literary scholar Ernst Robert Curtius, that Latin words in the French vocabulary are not loan words, since the source language is not foreign.

| | | | |
|----------------------|-------------------------|----------------------|----------------------------|
| l'appendicite | appendicitis | la limite | border, limit, edge |
| la conduite | behavior/conduct | la marguerite | daisy |
| l'élite | elite | la réussite | success |

Here is a list of exceptions:

| | | | |
|---------------------|---------------------|---------------------|-------------------|
| l'anthracite | anthracite | le satellite | satellite |
| le gîte | shelter/home | le site | area, site |
| l'insolite | unusual | le sulfite | sulphite |
| le mérite | merit | le termite | termite |
| le rite | rite | | |

Au-delà de cette limite, votre billet n'est plus valable.
C'est un signe de réussite sociale.

Beyond this limit, your ticket is no longer valid.
It's a sign of social success.

-té, -tié

| | | | |
|-------------------|-------------------|--------------------|--------------------|
| l'amitié | friendship | la pitié | pity, mercy |
| la cécité | blindness | la santé | health |
| la laïcité | secularism | la virilité | virility |

Here are more exceptions to learn:

| | | | |
|-----------------|-----------------------------------|------------------|---------------|
| l'aparté | private conversation/aside | l'été | summer |
| l'arrêté | decree | le karaté | karate |
| le côté | side | | |

As mentioned earlier, some feminine nouns with these endings stem from Latin nouns ending in -a, such as amicitia.

La laïcité est un sujet controversé en France.
Leur amitié fut éternelle.

Secularism is a controversial topic in France.
Their friendship was eternal.

Here's a helpful hint: most feminine -té words have English cognates ending in -ty, a suffix that was stolen from French.

| | | | |
|--------------------------------------|------------------------|--|--------------------|
| l'identité | identity | la nationalité | nationality |
| l'illégalité | illegality | la propriété | property |
| la liberté | freedom/liberty | la vanité | vanity |
| Quelle est la nationalité de Morgan? | | What's Morgan's nationality? | |
| Ulysse a agi en toute liberté. | | Ulysse acted with complete freedom. | |

Here are three exceptions:

| | | | |
|-----------|------------------|---|---|
| le comité | committee | Le traité aurait été signé pendant la nuit. | The treaty was reportedly signed during the night. |
| le comté | county | Le comité de soutien se réunira ce soir. | |
| le traité | treaty | The support committee will meet tonight. | |

-ode

| | | | |
|------------|-------------------------|------------|--------------------|
| la commode | chest of drawers | l'ode | ode |
| la méthode | method | la pagode | pagoda |
| la mode | fashion/style | la période | period/time |

Here some exceptions:

| | | | |
|---|-----------------------------|---|---------------------------|
| l'antipode | antipode | l'exode | exodus |
| le code | code | le mode | mode, mood, method |
| l'épisode | episode/serial/phase | Quelle est la meilleure méthode pour mémoriser le genre des noms? | |
| Plusieurs femmes priaient dans la pagode. | | What's the best method to memorize the gender of nouns? | |
| | | Several women were praying in the pagoda. | |

-tude

| | | | |
|------------|-----------------|--------------|----------------------------|
| l'attitude | attitude | l'inquiétude | anxiety, worry |
| l'étude | study | la longitude | longitude |
| l'habitude | habit | la solitude | solitude/loneliness |

Here are a couple of exceptions:

|-------------|------------------|
| le prélude | prelude |
| l'interlude | interlude |

Many French nouns with these endings come from feminine Latin words ending in -tudo, such as solitudo. The exceptions can be explained by the fact that these words are compounds containing the Latin word ludus (game), which is masculine.

| | |
|---|--|
| Blaise, tu devrais te débarrasser de cette mauvaise habitude. | Blaise, you should get rid of this bad habit. |
| Ophélie aime la solitude. | Ophélie loves being by herself. |

-ure

| | | | |
|------------|----------------------------|-------------|-----------------------|
| la censure | censorship, censure | la nature | nature |
| l'écriture | writing | la peinture | paint/painting |
| la lecture | reading | la voiture | car |

You'll need to remember these exceptions:

| | | | |
|------------|----------------|------------|-----------------------|
| l'augure | omen | le murmure | whisper/murmur |
| le cyanure | cyanide | le parjure | traitor |

Cédric vient de vendre une autre peinture à l'huile.
Cédric just sold another oil painting.

La meilleure recette pour apprendre le français, c'est la lecture et l'écriture.
The best recipe for learning French is reading and writing.

Note: Just like -tié, which we have seen in amitié, the French ending -re, like in nature, stems from the Latin ending -ra, found in such eminently feminine words as natura. One of our exceptions, l'augure, also comes from Latin, but the original word is augurium, which is neuter. The only thing about the neuter we need to know is that Latin words in this gender automatically become masculine in French.

Incidentally, according to the Belgian philologist André Goosse, editor of the famed Bon usage, the fact that the masculine in French is a default gender for the Latin neuter undermines the notion that the masculine gender in French implies power. For example, the neuter medicamentum becomes médicament, a masculine noun in French. Whenever you think of English words ending in -um, more specifically the Latin words that seem to enjoy a green card status in English, words such as colloquium and opprobrium, you can be sure that their French equivalents, in this case le colloque and l'opprobre, are masculine.

Other cases

There are many other endings, and each must be studied case by case.

-ice

Nouns ending in -ice, except for the feminine forms of masculine words to denote people practicing particular professions, such as rédactrice (female editor) or directrice (female director), are often masculine:

| | | | | | |
|---------------|-------------------|--------------|------------------|-------------|-----------------|
| le bénéfice | benefit | l'exercice | exercise | le service | service |
| le caprice | caprice | l'indice | clue | le solstice | solstice |
| le complice | accomplice | le précipice | precipice | le vice | vice |
| le dentifrice | toothpaste | | | | |

But watch out for the feminine nouns:

| | | | |
|--------------|--------------|-----------|--------------------------------|
| l'avarice | greed | l'épice | spice |
| la cicatrice | scar | la malice | malice, mischievousness |

This looks like a rule that's not really a rule. However, we can get some help from an old friend, Latin. You see, as mentioned earlier, the French masculine nouns, in their old (i.e., Latin) form as neuter nouns ended in -um: beneficium (le bénéfice), indictum (l'indice), servitium (le service), solstitium (le solstice), and vitium (le vice).

Now what about those pesky feminine nouns? Well, as we know, French likes to standardize noun endings, which explains why feminine Latin nouns such as avaritia (l'avarice), cicatrix (la cicatrice), and malitia (la malice), also ended up with -ice endings. Sometimes one has the impression (French is no exception) that languages have a mind of their own, often ignoring our wishes and desires. Frustrating, you may say, but a certain measure of unpredictability also makes languages fascinating and exciting.

La police a arrêté le complice du meurtrier.

Pourriez-vous me rendre un service?

The police arrested the murderer's accomplice.

Could you do me a favor?

-aire, -oire

We could try to make a rule for -aire and -oire being masculine:

l'anniversaire le dictionnaire le formulaire birthday dictionary form l'interrogatoire le laboratoire le mémoire questioning/cross-examination laboratory thesis/dissertation

However, we cannot avoid the many androgynous words, such as le/la stagiaire (intern) and a very long list of exceptions. Here are a few of them:

| | | | | | |
|----------------------|------------------------|---------------------|----------------|------------------------|------------------------|
| l'affaire | business, issue | la foire | fair | la moustiquaire | mosquito screen |
| la baignoire | bathtub | la grammaire | grammar | la victoire | victory |
| la bouilloire | kettle | la mémoire | memory | | |

You might be better off making your own rhymes.

Le stagiaire, fatigué d'écrire son mémoire le jour de son anniversaire, a pris un bain dans sa baignoire avant d'aller à la foire artisanale.

Quel interrogatoire! Ça a duré plus d'une semaine!

Remplissez d'abord le formulaire!

Tired of working on his thesis on his birthday, the intern took a bath in his tub and went to the arts and crafts fair.

What a cross-examination! It lasted more than a week!

Fill in the form first!

-oi, -ois, -oix

The only feminine nouns ending in -oi, -ois, and -oix are:

la croix cross
la foi faith

la loi law
la noix nut

la paroi wall/partition
la voix voice

Elles parlaient à voix basse.
C'est la loi de la jungle.

They were talking in low voices.
It's the law of the jungle.

-f, -aim

The only feminine nouns ending in -f and -aim are:

la clef ou la clé key la faim hunger

la nef nave
la soif thirst

La faim dans le monde empire chaque jour.
Où as-tu mis la clé du coffre-fort?

World hunger gets worse every day.
Where did you put the key of the safe?

-ole, -ôle, -ule

Nouns ending in -ole, -ôle, or -ule seem willing to go either way. While Latin may provide some guidance, there is no foolproof method. Nevertheless, it helps to know that symbolus—le symbole (symbol)—is masculine in Latin and crepusculum—le crépuscule (dusk)—is neuter, while schola—l'école (school)—is feminine.

Masculine nouns ending in -ole or -ôle:

| | | | | | |
|--------------------|-----------------|-------------------|--------------------------|---------------------|-----------------|
| le contrôle | control | le pactole | fortune/gold mine | le protocole | protocol |
| le monopole | monopoly | le pôle | pole | le symbole | symbol |

Feminine nouns ending in -ole or -ôle:

| | | | | | |
|---------------------|------------------|-------------------|----------------|---------------------|-------------------|
| l'Acropole | Acropolis | la console | console | l'idole | idol |
| la banderole | banner | l'école | school | la nécropole | necropolis |
| la casserole | pan | la gondole | gondola | la parole | speech |

Masculine nouns ending in -ule:

| | | | | | |
|----------------------|-------------------------|---------------------|--------------------------------------|---------------------|-------------------|
| le crépuscule | dusk | le préambule | preamble | le scrupule | scruple |

More French nouns and their gender

Naming people and animals

As a rule, professions are masculine when they refer to a man and feminine when they refer to a woman. You can just add a final e:

| | | | |
|--------------------|-------------------|----------------------|--------------------|
| l'apprenti/ | apprentice | l'avocat/ | lawyer |
| l'apprentie | | l'avocate | |
| l'attaché/ | attaché | le magistrat/ | magistrate, |
| l'attachée | | la magistrate | judge |

In the past, traditionally masculine professions, even if practiced by women, remained masculine:

| | | | |
|-----------------------|-----------------|----------------------|--------------------------|
| le compositeur | composer | le procureur | prosecutor |
| le peintre | painter | le professeur | professor/teacher |

In 1998, Lionel Jospin, the socialist prime minister, created a new commission to study the question. Femme, j'écris ton nom, the commission's resulting guide for the feminization of professions and titles, was published in 1999. If you are an insomniac, you may enjoy reading this hundred-page guide of some obscure professions in French or in English, which is available online. The guide had a major impact.

In addition, Quebec, at the cutting edge of feminization, played a key role, even if we, the French, won't admit it. . . Over ten years ago, I started consulting and hosting workshops for the Blue Metropolis Montreal International Festival. I gasped when I saw myself listed in the festival's program as «Annie Heminway, professeure à New York.» I have to admit it took me some time to get used to it.

These days, you will read more frequently in the newspapers and magazines: l'écrivaine (writer), l'ingénierie (engineer), la juge (Judge). Even the newspaper Le Monde talks about a famous writer as l'écrivaine Léonora Miano.

You have to use caution, though. Were you to send a letter to a minister of the government, you should ask the Chief of Protocol if she uses Madame le ministre or Madame la ministre. In a speech made by Roselyne Bachelot on January 2008, for example, the headline was: « Discours de Madame le ministre de la santé, de la jeunesse et des sports. » Then Roselyne Bachelot herself had written, a few lines down: « La ministre de la qualité des soins que je veux être ne peut que repren-dre à son compte de tels propos. » As you can see, anything goes! The tendency today, however, is to use Madame la ministre.

Human beings

One way of identifying the nouns is to learn if they have identical or different root words.

Identical roots

In numerous cases, the noun of a profession is identical in the masculine and the feminine:

| | |
|-------------------------------|--------------|
| l'architecte/l'architecte | architect |
| le vétérinaire/la vétérinaire | veterinarian |
| le dentiste/la dentiste | dentist |

In many instances, you add an -e at the end of the noun:

| | |
|--------------------------|----------|
| l'avocat/l'avocate | lawyer |
| le marchand/la marchande | merchant |
| l'associé/l'associée | partner |

In other cases, there are many possible endings depending on the noun. Here are some examples, but always check in the dictionary.

| | |
|--------------------------------|-------------------------------|
| l'ouvrier/l'ouvrière | worker |
| le conseiller/la conseillère | adviser |
| le chocolatier/la chocolatière | chocolate maker |
| l'acheteur/l'acheteuse | buyer |
| le vendeur/la vendeuse | salesperson |
| le coiffeur/la coiffeuse | hairdresser |
| le musicien/la musicienne | musician |
| le doyen/la doyenne | dean, most senior member |
| le pharmacien/la pharmacienne | pharmacist |
| le rédacteur/la rédactrice | editor |
| le concepteur/la conceptrice | designer, project manager |
| le spectateur/la spectatrice | viewer, member of an audience |
| le patron/la patronne | boss |
| le baron/la baronne | baron |
| le vigneron/la vigneronne | wine grower |
| le prince/la princesse | prince/princess |
| le maître/la maîtresse | master/mistress |
| le comte/la comtesse | count/countess |

If there is an adjective, it will agree accordingly:

| | |
|---|--------------------|
| le directeur financier/la directrice financière | financial director |
|---|--------------------|

La coiffeuse d'Alice est aussi musicienne.
Les ouvriers ont demandé une augmentation à leur patronne.

*Alice's hairdresser is also a musician.
The workers asked their boss for a raise.*

Some nouns follow no rule:

| | | | |
|---------------------|-------------------|---------------------------|-------------------------|
| le barman/ | barman/ | la couturière | seamstress |
| la barmaid | barmaid | le steward/ | flight attendant |
| le couturier | couturier/ | l'hôtesse de l'air | |

Coco Chanel était un grand couturier. Coco Chanel was a great fashion designer.

As mentioned in the introduction, the feminization of nouns is widespread. And yet, the masculine form is still used by a lot of women. You may want to ask for the business card of the woman you are talking to so you'll have an answer as to which she prefers.

Here are more professions that are often feminized. But always ask to double-check.

| | | | |

Animals

Since the animal kingdom, just like the human world, has genders, one usually has to learn two nouns for each species.

Animal couples with identical root words

Couples may be made of the male noun plus different suffixes:

| | | | |
|---------------------|------------------------------|---------------------|--------------------------|
| agneau/agnelle | lamb/ewe lamb | hérisson/hérissonne | hedgehog |
| âne/ânesse | donkey/she-donkey | héron/héronne | heron |
| buffle/bufflonne | buffalo | lapin/lapine | rabbit/doe rabbit |

François, le chat de Michael, aime s'asseoir sur le clavier de l'ordinateur.

The children saw a polar she-bear and a camel at the zoo.

François, Michael's cat, likes to sit on the computer keyboard.

Animal couples with different root words

Some male and female nouns of animals are totally different, just as in English:

| | | | |
|---------------|------------------|---------------|----------------------|
| bélier/brebis | ram/ewe | dindon/dinde | turkey/turkey hen |
| bouc/chèvre | goat/she-goat | jars/oie | gander/goose |

| cheval/jument | horse/mare | singe/guenon | monkey/female monkey |
| coq/poule | rooster/hen | taureau/vache | bull/cow |

Épicène

Most names of animals are épicène. This strange-sounding word comes from the Greek epikoinos, meaning “common.” Épicène nouns work with either gender. To differentiate between the two sexes, you add mâle or femelle. Here are some masculine names:

| | | | | | |
|------------|-------------|-------------|--------------|--------------|------------|
| aigle | eagle | faucon | falcon | mille-pattes | millipede |
| blaireau | badger | gorille | gorilla | oiseau | bird |

Places and the calendar

No, geography is not neutral either. There are rules—and exceptions. Let's start with cities.

Cities

The masculine is used more commonly for cities, but the feminine is still used in a more aesthetic or romantic sense. There is no set rule. You will find many examples in literature. Look at the following examples:

|---|---|
| Le Paris populaire des années 1930 | The working-class Paris of the 1930s |
| Paris est si bruyant ; c'est épuisant. | Paris is so noisy; it's exhausting. |
| Paris, la magnifique | Paris the magnificent |
| Paris, traversée de fragrances envirantes | Paris, bathed in intoxicating fragrances |
| Le Tout-Paris était présent pour l'inauguration du nouveau musée. | Everybody who is anybody in Paris attended the inauguration of the new museum. |
| Tout Venise souffrait des inondations. | All of Venice suffered from the floods. |
| Venise La Sérénissime | Venice the Most Serene |
| Venise, la belle, l'enchanteresse | Venice, the beautiful, the bewitching |

Names of towns preceded by a masculine definite article are masculine:

| | |
|--|---|
| Le Havre est un grand port. | Le Havre is a big harbor. |
| Le Caire est connu pour son musée de l'Antiquité Égyptienne. | Cairo is known for its museum of Egyptian antiquity. |
| Le Mans est connu pour sa course automobile. | Le Mans is known for its car racing. |

Names of towns preceded by a feminine definite article are feminine:

| | |
|--|---|
| La Rochelle est très prisée par les vacanciers. | La Rochelle is highly rated by vacationers. |
| La Havane est fréquentée par de merveilleux musiciens. | Marvelous musicians are to be found in Havana. |
| La Seyne-sur-Mer est située dans le Var. | La Seyne-sur-Mer is in the Var. |

The gender of Italian cities varies:

| |
|--|
| La Florence des Médicis |
| Le Florence de James Ivory (in Room with a View) |
| La Venise de Casanova |
| Le Venise de Pasolini |

It all depends on the context.

Usually, when the nouns of cities are preceded by the adjectives grand, nouveau, and vieux, they are used in the masculine form:

| | |
|-----------------------|--------------------|
| Le Grand Prague | Le Vieux-Marseille |
| Le Nouveau-Belleville | Le Vieux-Québec |

Departments, regions, and states

Now we are going to travel around the provinces and departments of France and states of America and try to figure out their genders.

Departments

Many departments take the gender of a river, a mountain, or a geographic site, like the coast.

| | | |
|--|--------------|--|
| l'Auvergne | la Dordogne | la Loire |
| le Cantal | le Finistère | la Manche |
| Le tunnel sous la Manche est ouvert depuis 1994. | | The Chunnel has been open since 1994. |
| Dans le Finistère, Concarneau, ville médiévale entourée de remparts, attire de nombreux touristes. | | In the Finistère, Concarneau, a medieval walled town, attracts many tourists. |

Some departments are named after two rivers. If one river is masculine, it goes first and the noun is masculine. If both are feminine, the department is feminine.

| | | |
|---|-----------------------|---|
| l'Ille-et-Vilaine | le Maine-et-Loire | la Saône-et-Loire |
| l'Indre-et-Loire | la Meurthe-et-Moselle | le Tarn-et-Garonne |
| le Loir-et-Cher | | |
| Chenonceau est l'un des plus beaux châteaux de l'Indre-et-Loire. | | Chenonceau is one of the most beautiful castles in Indre-et-Loire. |
| La Meurthe-et-Moselle a l'une des productions les plus élevées de mirabelles de France. | | La Meurthe-et-Moselle has one of the highest productions of mirabelle plums in France. |

Some departments are classified according to geographic parameters:

| | | |
|---|--------------------|--|
| les Bouches-du-Rhône | les Hauts-de-Seine | la Seine-Saint-Denis |
| les Côtes-d'Armor | le Puy-de-Dôme | le Val-de-Marne |
| la Côte-d'Or | | |
| Le Puy-de-Dôme porte le nom du volcan endormi en Auvergne. | | Le Puy-de-Dôme bears the name of the dormant volcano in Auvergne. |
| La Seine-Saint-Denis est le 93ème département français. On l'appelle 9-3. | | La Seine-Saint-Denis is the 93rd French department. It is called 9-3. |

Others are determined by an adjective. Departments ending in -e tend to be feminine.

| | | |
|---|-----------------|---|
| les Alpes-Maritimes | la Haute-Loire | la Haute-Vienne |
| le Bas-Rhin | la Haute-Savoie | les Pyrénées-Atlantiques |
| Le lac d'Annecy en Haute-Savoie est l'un des plus grands de France. | | The Annecy Lake in Haute-Savoie is one of the largest in France. |
| Le festival du cinéma a lieu à Cannes dans les Alpes-Maritimes. | | The film festival takes place in Cannes in the Alpes-Maritimes. |

Many nouns of departments that do not end in -e tend to be masculine:

| | | | |
|-------------|-----------|-----------|-----------|
| l'Ain | le Cantal | le Gers | le Loiret |
| l'Allier | le Cher | l'Hérault | le Nord |
| l'Aveyron | le Gard | le Jura | le Tarn |
| le Calvados | | | |

L'Enfant sauvage de Truffaut est basé sur une histoire vraie dans l'Aveyron du dix huitième siècle.

Le pont du Gard est un aqueduc romain qui enjambe le Gard.

The Wild Child by Truffaut is based on a true story in the eighteenth-century Aveyron department.

The Pont du Gard is a Roman aqueduct that crosses the Gard River.

The overseas departments, called les départements ultramarins, are:

la Guadeloupe la Guyane

la Martinique Mayotte

la Réunion

There are many ultramarine territories and collectives like:

la Nouvelle-Calédonie la Polynésie

Saint-Pierre et Miquelon
les Terres Australes et Antarctiques

Le plus grand poète de la Martinique fut Aimé Césaire.

The greatest poet in Martinique was Aimé Césaire.

Mayotte est devenu le 101ème département français en mars 2011.

As of March 2011, Mayotte has become the 101st French Department.

Regions and states

Regions, provinces, and states ending in -e tend to be feminine. The others tend to be masculine—with some exceptions, of course. Here are some examples in the masculine in France:

le Bordelais le Jura

le Languedoc le Limousin

le Midi le Nord-Pas-de-Calais

le Poitou
le Roussillon

Les châteaux cathares du Languedoc sont remplis de mystère.

The Cathar castles in Languedoc are full of mystery.

La capitale du Poitou est Poitiers.

The capital of Poitou is Poitiers.

Here are some examples in the feminine in France:

l'Alsace l'Aquitaine l'Auvergne la Bourgogne

la Bretagne la Champagne la Côte d'Azur

la Franche-Comté la Lorraine la Normandie

la Picardie la Provence
la Savoie

Un des personnages les plus célèbres d'Aquitaine est Aliénor d'Aquitaine qui fut reine de France puis d'Angleterre.

One of most famous figures of Aquitaine was Eleanor of Aquitaine who was queen of France, then of England.

La Picardie est composée de trois départements: l'Aisne, l'Oise et la Somme.

The Picardy region is composed of three departments: l'Aisne, l'Oise, and la Somme.

Here are some examples in the masculine in the United States:

le Colorado le Kansas le Maine le Michigan

le Minnesota le Mississippi le Nebraska

le New-Hampshire
le Nouveau-Mexique
l'Ohio

le Texas le Vermont
le Wyoming

Here are some examples in the feminine in the United States:

la Californie la Caroline-du-Sud

la Floride la Géorgie

la Louisiane la Pennsylvanie

la Virginie

La Californie est l'un des États les plus visités par les Européens.
Napoléon vendit la Louisiane en 1803.

California is one of the states most visited by Europeans.
Napoleon sold Louisiana in 1803.

Note that you will say l'État de New York to avoid the confusion between New York State and New York City and l'État de Washington to distinguish between the state of Washington and Washington, D.C., the capital of the country. There are quite a few tricks to be aware of, so double-check the article and the preposition in the dictionary.

EXERCICE

10. _____ Québec est traversé par le Saint-Laurent.

Islands, rivers, seas, and oceans

Now we are going to investigate the gender of islands and rivers. Could there be set rules?

Islands

The rules for the gender of isles are as fluid as their waters. You will find variations from one dictionary to the other, from one writer to the other. It remains a poetic enigma of islands . . . Even if the island is a state, the tendency is to use the feminine, referring to l'île, but not always. In fact, some islands do not even have articles:

| | | | |
|--|-----------|---|-------------|
| Aruba | Guernesey | Jersey | Samoa |
| Bora, Bora | Haïti | Madagascar | Terre-Neuve |
| Chypre | Hawaï | Malte | Taiwan |
| Cuba | Hong-Kong | Ouessant | |
| Madagascar est situé dans l'océan Indien. | | Madagascar is in the Indian Ocean. | |
| Haïti chérie | | Darling Haiti (political song, 1920) | |
| Cuba, la belle | | Cuba, the beautiful | |
| Au quinzième siècle, Cuba était peuplée par les Taïnos. | | In the fifteenth century, Cuba was inhabited by the Taino Indians. | |
| Taiwan est située au centre de l'Asie. | | Taiwan is in the center of Asia. | |

Some islands have a definite article, making things easy:

| | | | |
|--|---------------|---|--------------------|
| la Barbade | la Grenade | l'Île de Sein | les Marquises |
| le Cap-Vert | la Guadeloupe | la Jamaïque | la Nouvelle-Guinée |
| la Corse | l'Île Maurice | les Maldives | les Seychelles |
| la Crête | l'Île de Ré | la Martinique | la Sicile |
| La Corse est renommée pour ses falaises. | | Corsica is renowned for its cliffs. | |
| L'Île de Ré est l'île favorite des politiques français. | | The island of Ré is the favorite island of French politicians. | |
| Jacques Brel a passé de longues années aux enchanteresses Marquises. | | Jacques Brel spent many years on the enchanting Marquesas Islands. | |

Rivers

In French, there is a difference between un fleuve, a river that flows into the sea or the ocean, and une rivière, which does not. Most fleuves not ending with -e are masculine. Watch out for exceptions! Here are a few examples from around the world:

| | | | |
|--|----------------|---|-----------------|
| Feminine | | | |
| l'Amazone | la Krishnâ | la Seine | la Volga |
| la Garonne | la Loire | la Vistule | |
| Masculine | | | |
| le Colorado | le Mékong | le Rhin | la Tamise |
| le Congo | le Mississippi | le Rhône | le Tibre |
| le Danube | le Missouri | le Rio Grande | le Yangzy Jiang |
| le Gange | le Niger | le Saint-Laurent | le Yukon |
| l'Hudson | le Nil | le Sénégal | le Zambèze |
| Le Mississippi est le plus long fleuve des États-Unis. | | The Mississippi is the longest river in the United States. | |
| Le Gange est le fleuve sacré de l'Inde. | | The Ganges is the sacred river of India. | |

Les rivières are either masculine or feminine. Here are a few examples in France:

le Cher la Creuse la Dordogne

le Doubs la Drôme le Gard

le Gers le Loir le Lot

la Mayenne
la Moselle

La Dordogne est une rivière serpentine de presque 500 kilomètres.

Le château de Chenonceau est construit sur un pont qui enjambe le Cher.

The Dordogne is a serpentine river almost 500 kilometers long.

The Chenonceau castle is built on a bridge across the river Cher.

EXERCICE

3·9

Indicate the gender of the river by adding the definite article le or la.

- | | |
|----------------------|--------------------|
| 1. _____ Rio Grande | 11. _____ Potomac |
| 2. _____ Somme | 12. _____ Tumen |
| 3. _____ Mékong | 13. _____ Loir |
| 4. _____ Volga | 14. _____ Seine |
| 5. _____ Loire | 15. _____ Pô |
| 6. _____ Mississippi | 16. _____ Drôme |
| 7. _____ Têt | 17. _____ Nil |
| 8. _____ Drâ | 18. _____ Rhône |
| 9. _____ Niger | 19. _____ Dordogne |
| 10. _____ Rance | 20. _____ Vienne |

Seas and oceans

La mer (sea) is feminine and l'océan (ocean) is masculine; that is fairly easy. The common mistakes have to do with capitalization. Always check in the dictionary.

le golfe de Californie the Gulf of California
le golfe du Mexique the Gulf of Mexico le golfe Persique the Persian Gulf la mer des Caraïbes the Caribbean Sea
la mer de Chine the China Sea

L'Île Maurice, territoire ultramarin de la France, se trouve dans l'océan Indien. Éric Tabarly a fait la traversée de l'océan Atlantique bien des fois.

la mer Noire the Black Sea la mer du Nord the North Sea l'océan Atlantique the Atlantic Ocean
l'océan Indien the Indian Ocean
l'océan Pacifique the Pacific Ocean

Mauritius Island, ultramarine territory of France is in the Indian Ocean.
Éric Tabarly crossed the Atlantic Ocean many times.

Days, months, seasons, cardinal points

| | |
|-------------|------------------|
| le lundi | Monday |
| le mardi | Tuesday |
| le mercredi | Wednesday |
| le jeudi | Thursday |
| le vendredi | Friday |
| le samedi | Saturday |
| le dimanche | Sunday |

The months of the year are also masculine:

| | |
|---------------------|--------------------------|
| janvier | January |
| février | February |
| mars | March |
| avril | April |
| mai | May |
| juin | June |
| juillet | July |
| août | August |
| septembre | September |
| octobre | October |
| novembre | November |
| décembre | December |
| un avril ensoleillé | a sunny April |
| un septembre vente | a windy September |

The seasons are masculine:

| | |
|---------------------|------------------------|
| un hiver froid | a cold winter |
| un printemps tardif | a late spring |
| un été pourri | a rotten summer |
| un automne pluvieux | a rainy fall |

Cardinal points are also masculine:

| | |
|---------|--------------|
| le nord | north |
| le sud | south |
| l'est | east |
| l'ouest | west |

Religious celebrations and holidays

Noël is usually used in the masculine form and without an article:

Nous serons chez notre grand-mère à Noël.

We'll be at our grandmother's for Christmas.

However, you may find an article when the day is qualified:

Nous avons eu un Noël sous la neige.

We had a snowy Christmas.

Do not be surprised if you find articles in front of the noun in old tales and literature:

Voici la Noël qui arrive.

Christmas is coming.

Some other holiday-related terms to keep in mind:

- ◆ Pâque used in the singular means Passover.
- ◆ La Pâque orthodoxe means Orthodox Easter.
- ◆ Pâques in the plural means Easter.
- ◆ L'Ascension (Ascension Day), la Pentecôte (Pentecost), and la Toussaint (All Saints' Day) are all feminine.
- ◆ Le Ramadan and l'Aïd al Kébir are masculine.
- ◆ Thanksgiving is masculine.

Now, let's see how to send holiday greetings:

| | |
|--------------------------------|------------------------------|
| Je vous souhaite... | I wish you ... |
| ...un Joyeux Noël | ...Merry Christmas |
| ...un bon Ramadan | ...Happy and Blessed Ramadan |
| ...un joyeux Thanksgiving | ...Happy Thanksgiving |
| ...de joyeuses Pâques | ...Happy Easter |
| ...une bonne et heureuse année | ...Happy New Year |
| ...une bonne année du singe | ...Happy Year of the Monkey |

Plants, wine, and cheese

We are going to explore the world of flowers, trees, and bushes and see if we can figure out a rule.

Flowers, tree, shrubs

Let's start with flowers. They play an important role in French life and also in art, especially in painting.

Flowers

One could think that flowers are feminine since flowers are delicate and feminine. That would be not only politically incorrect but also totally wrong. The truth is that most flowers not ending in -e tend to be masculine.

Hint: Try memorizing the gender of some flowers and connecting them with a person you know: Jérôme/le tournesol, Marie/l'aubépine, and so on.

Here are flowers with a masculine gender:

| | | | |
|------------------------|----------------------|---------------------|------------------------------------|
| l'arum | arum lily | le glaïeul | gladiola |
| l'aster | aster | l'hortensia | hydrangea |
| le bégonia | begonia | l'iris | iris |
| le bouton d'or | buttercup | le jasmin | jasmine |
| le cactus | cactus | le myosotis | forget-me-not |

La raclette goes back to the Middle Ages and was consumed by Swiss peasants who were in need of a hot meal after a long day of labor and by herders who would cook la raclette on a campfire. Today in France, families and especially children enjoy it in the winter. It also has become trendy in upscale restaurants that have all the proper utensils.

Raclette comes from racler (to scrape). It is served with small potatoes and Savoy wine or Pinot Gris. It is definitely not cuisine minceur . . .

Here are a few feminine names of cheeses:

la faisselle la feta

la fourme la mimolette

la mozzarella la ricotta

la tome

Le roquefort est le fromage idéal pour la salade d'endives.

Colors and fabric, the elements, cars, and brands and acronyms

One could dream that some nouns would be neutral for a change. But this is not the case, even for stones or fabric.

Colors and fabric

Let's start with the palette of colors.

Colors

The word couleur (color) is feminine, as it ends with -eur. The colors themselves, however, are masculine:

| | | | | | |
|-------------|-----------|-----------|--------|-----------|---------------|
| l'ambre | amber | l'indigo | indigo | l'orange | orange |
| l'aubergine | aubergine | l'ivoire | ivory | le rose | pink |
| le beige | beige | le jaune | yellow | le rouge | red |
| le blanc | white | le kaki | khaki | le safran | saffron |
| le bleu | blue | le marron | brown | le saumon | salmon |
| le cramoisi | crimson | le noir | black | le vert | green |
| le gris | gray | l'ocre | ochre | le violet | violet/purple |

Le bleu de sa robe est parfaitement assorti au le jaune doré de sa ceinture.

The blue of her dress coordinates perfectly with the golden yellow of her belt.

Pierre, le vert et le bleu... ça ne va pas dans cette pièce!

Pierre, green and blue . . . it does not work in this room!

Fabric

Most names of fabric are masculine:

| | | | | | |
|-------------------|----------------|-------------|---------------|--------------|-----------------------------|
| l'acrylique | acrylic | l'écosais | plaid | l'organdi | organdy |
| l'alpaga | alpaca | le feutre | felt | le polyamide | polyamide |

Cars

In most cases, cars are used in the feminine form:

J'adore ma nouvelle Citroën Picasso.

I love my new Citroën Picasso.

However, as this list shows, some minivans or SUVs use the masculine form. It depends on the model:

la 206 (Peugeot)

le 4x4

la BMW

la Coccinelle (Beetle/Volkswagen)

la Ferrari la Golf la jeep

la Land Rover

la Lexus

la Mini (BMW)

la Mondéo (Ford)

le monospace (minivan)

le (ou la) Kangoo

le Pajero (Mitsubishi)

la Panda (Fiat)

la Porsche

la Renault Clio

la Renault Scénic

la Smart

la Volvo familiale

Mon monospace est en panne. Peux-tu me prêter ton Pajero?

Sa Volvo est parfaite pour son travail. Mais moi, je préfère ma Coccinelle.

My minivan has broken down. Can you lend me your Mitsubishi?

His Volvo is perfect for his job. But I prefer my Beetle.

An anecdote from Quebec: In the past, a car was called un véhicule automobile and was little by little abbreviated to un automobile. The change was made in the 1940s. However, this is often described as usage flottant and you may hear:

Il s'est offert un gros Chevrolet.

He treated himself to a big Chevrolet.

instead of:

Il s'est offert une grosse Chevrolet.

He treated himself to a big Chevrolet.

We can use some of the many slang terms to talk about cars:

In France

la bagnole

la caisse car/wheels

la guimbarde

jalopy

le tacot

clunker

un tas de ferraille pile of junk

la tire

old rattletrap

Complete with the possessive adjective son or sa.

Le père de mon copain Luc adore _____ BMW alors que sa femme préfère _____ Mini. Luc voudrait bien avoir _____ Pajero à lui tout seul mais ses parents ne sont pas d'accord. S'il passe le bac, il pourra rendre ses copains jaloux avec _____ Smart ou _____ Coccinelle.

Brands and acronyms

Like anything else, brands and acronyms follow a rule.

Brands

Brand names take the gender of the products they represent. For example, une poupée (doll) is feminine, so Barbie will be une Barbie.

| Brand name | Derivation | |
|---------------------|---|-----------------------------|
| le bikini | le maillot de bain | bathing suit |
| le Bic | le stylo à bille | pen |
| le Botox | le comestique | Botox |

There are also acronyms without articles, as they refer to famous people:

| | |
|-------------|--------------------------|
| VGE | Valéry Giscard d'Estaing |
| DSK | Dominique Strauss-Kahn |
| PPDA | Patrick Poivre d'Arvor |

Ils ont créé une ONG au Brésil.

Tout le monde attend la décision du FMI sur la fraude fiscale.

They set up an NGO in Brazil.

Everyone is waiting for the IMF's decision about tax evasion.

Other languages, parts of speech, and the sciences

In this chapter, we'll cover the gender of different languages, parts of speech, and also sciences. Do they have some mystery in store for us?

Names of languages

Nouns denoting particular languages are masculine. Note that, in French, the names of languages are in lowercase:

| | | | | | |
|-------------|----------------|-------------|-----------------|--------------|-------------------|
| l'allemand | German | le grec | Greek | le portugais | Portuguese |
| l'anglais | English | l'hindi | Hindi | le russe | Russian |

| l'espagnol | Spanish | le polonais | Polish | le turc | Turkish |
| le français | French | | | | |

Mai Hien a appris le français à Aix-en-Provence.

Hervé a appris le swahili au
Kenya.

Mai Hien learned French in Aix-en-Provence.

Hervé learned Swahili in Kenya.

Nouns of foreign origin

Over the centuries, because of history, wars, colonialism, and the exploration of continents, the French language has absorbed words from all over the world. You will often hear that French is being contaminated by English. This is a backward approach to languages. During the Renaissance, for example, it was trendy and very chic to use Italian words in the French language. And it is a good thing, considering that French, even after borrowing words from many languages, has a much smaller vocabulary than does English, perhaps a half or a third of the English lexicon.

A large number of the nouns of foreign origin tend to be masculine. Let's look at a few examples, starting with words borrowed from English.

Nouns of English origin

Many nouns of English influence are masculine:

| | | | | | |
|------------------|----------------|---------------|----------------|-----------------|-------------------------------|
| le baby-sitting | le camping | le flirt | le knock-out | le poker | le slogan |
| le badge | le cash | le footing | le know-how | le pressing | le smoking |
| le barman | le challenge | le freelance | le laser | le pull-over | le snack |
| le bermuda | le charter | le freezer | le leader | le puzzle | le snob |
| le best-seller | le chewing-gum | le gospel | le lifting | le rap | le sponsor |
| le blazer | le coach | le hamburger | le listing | le reporter | le talkie-walkie (in reverse) |
| le blues | le hold-up | le holding | le living-room | le ring | |
| le boss | (trainer) | le jackpot | le lobby | (boxing) | |
| le boycott | le cocktail | le jazz | le manager | le rock | le tank |
| le brainstorming | le crash | le jean | le marketing | le self-service | le thriller |
| le briefing | le dealer | le job | l'outsider | le shopping | le timing |
| le building | le fair-play | le jogging | le parking | le show | le training |
| le bulldozer | le fast-food | le kidnapping | le planning | le skateboard | le week-end |
| le business | le feeling | | | le skipper | |

Here are a few feminine exceptions:

la barmaid la basket l'interview l'overdose la rocking-chair la snob

la start-up la superstar

Trop de snobs fréquentent ce bar.
Le boss a dit que le briefing aurait lieu au snack-bar.

*Too many snobs go to this bar.
The boss said that the briefing would take place in the snackbar.*

It would be a mistake to think that the additions of English words to the French language are a sudden occurrence. When you hear the French complaining about the invasion of the English language, do not take it too seriously. As a French person, I'm giving myself permission to say it may be more a matter of "American envy."

Foreign words have enriched the French language for centuries. The word camping, for instance, has been in the French dictionary since 1903 when the concept of recreational activities started to flourish before World War I.

Also be aware of the origins of English words. For example, flirter was borrowed from the English but actually comes from the old French fleureter.

The origin of the word gadget is uncertain. Some sources say that in the 1850s it was similar to gâchette, a small tool. Other sources maintain that gadget comes from Gaget-Gauthier, the French company that designed miniatures of the Statue of Liberty to finance Frédéric Bartholdi's project. The name Gaget was written on the base of the miniatures, and the Americans started calling the statue gadget. Then the word crossed the Atlantic again and found its place in Le Robert's dictionary in 1946 under gadget with the English pronunciation. And then the French created a wonderful verb: gadgétiser.

Some new nouns, especially those connected to technology, are added on a regular basis.

| | | | | | |
|--------------|------------|----------------|---------------|----------|------------|
| le Bluetooth | le geek | l'iPhone | le podcast | le texto | le Twitter |
| le buzz | l'internet | le mail | le podcasting | le tweet | le website |
| le chat | l'iPad | le multi-touch | le SMS | | |

French has borrowed from many other languages you may identify, as they are similar or close to English. If you are not sure of the meaning of a word, check your dictionary at home or any bilingual dictionary online.

Nouns of Arabic origin

The influence of the Arabic language on the French language has been significant in many fields (mathematics, alchemy, botany, astronomy, medicine, philosophy, and mysticism). The Arab army came all the way to Poitiers in the eighth century and left quite a few words behind. Arabo-Andalusian music played an important role from the ninth to the fifteenth century, spreading gradually to Provence and becoming a source of inspiration for the French troubadours. Inevitably, words traveled back and forth from Spain to France, and many words were adopted by the French. For example, who does not like to rest on a sofa? Until the eighteenth century, Arab architects worked their way to England and left their mark, the arabesque. In addition, about two-thirds of the names of stars come from the Arabic language, such as Al Bali, Aldébaran, Algol, Almanac, Altaïr, Mizar, Regulus, Rigel, Sadalmelek, Yad, Zaniah, and so on.

At least five hundred Arabic words are used in the French language on a regular basis. Another factor in play is that the second, third, and fourth generations of immigrants from Tunisia, Algeria, Morocco, Egypt, Lebanon, and so on living in France have been so creative with the language through literature and music that the count keeps going up, and the French language enriches itself.

Here are a few examples, both masculine and feminine, of words of Arabic origin:

| | | | | | |
|------------|------------|-------------|-----------|-----------------|------------|
| l'ambal | l'azimut | le couscous | le harem | le magasin | le taboulé |
| l'alcool | le baobab | le cramoisi | le hasard | la maroquerie | le tambour |
| l'algèbre | le bled | l'élixir | le henné | le matelas | le tajine |
| l'almanach | le camaïeu | la gazelle | la jupe | le moucharabieh | le talc |
| l'amalgame | le camphre | le goudron | kif-kif | le sofa | le toubib |
| l'ambre | le carmin | le hammam | le luth | le sumac | le zénith |
| l'amiral | | | | | |

Nouns from other languages

The French language, over the centuries, has borrowed words from numerous other languages as well.

Compound nouns

After memorizing the genders of single nouns, could there be a trick to figure out the gender of compound ones?

Compound nouns composed of a verb derivative and a noun

Compound nouns composed of a verb derivative and a noun tend to be masculine:

| | | | |
|---------------------------|--|--------------------------|------------------------------------|
| l'abat-jour | lamp shade | le faire-part | announcement |
| l'aide-mémoire | memorandum | le garde-fou | railing, parapet, safeguard |

Compound nouns composed of an adverb and a noun

Compound nouns composed of an adverb and a noun tend to take the gender of the noun. For example, rasage ends in -age so it is masculine. L'après-rasage is also masculine.

| | | | |
|---------------------------|-------------------------|---------------------------|---------------------------|
| l'après-soleil | after-sun lotion | l'avant-veille | two days before |
| l'arrière-boutique | back shop | la mini-jupe | mini-skirt |
| l'avant-goût | foretaste | le sous-bois | undergrowth, trees |
| l'arrière-goût | aftertaste | le sous-continent | subcontinent |
| l'arrière-pensée | ulterior motive | le sous emploi | underemployment |
| l'arrière-plan | background | la sous-estimation | underestimation |
| l'avant-bras | forearm | le sous-marin | submarine |
| l'avant-première | preview | la sous-traitance | subcontracting |

Here are a couple of exceptions: l'avant-guerre (prewar years) can be both masculine or feminine; l'après-guerre (postwar years) is only masculine.

Compound nouns composed of a noun plus a noun

Compound nouns composed of a noun and a noun tend to take the gender of the first noun:

| | | | |
|---------------------------------|--------------------------|------------------------------|--------------------------|
| l'appui-tête | headrest | l'oiseau-mouche | hummingbird |
| l'arc-en-ciel | rainbow | la porte-fenêtre | French window |

| la main-d'œuvre | workforce/labor | la voiture-restaurant | dining car |
| la moissonneuse-batteuse | combine harvester | | |

Je n'ai pas trouvé de drap-housse assorti à ma couette.

I have not found the fitted sheet that matches my duvet cover.

Hier, nous avons vu un bel arc-en-ciel au-dessus de la mer.

Yesterday we saw a beautiful rainbow over the sea.

Nouns derived from verbs and adverbs

Nouns derived from verbs and adverbs tend to be masculine:

| | | | | | |
|-------------------|------------------|--------------------|-----------------------|--------------------|------------------|
| l'arrière | back/rear | le derrière | bottom/behind | le manger | food |
| l'avant | front | le dessous | underside/back | le pourquoi | the why |
| le boire | drink | le dessus | top/right side | le rire | laugh |
| le comment | the how | le devant | front | le tout | the whole |

Tu vas t'asseoir à l'avant de la voiture.

You'll sit in the front of the car.

Je ne comprends pas le pourquoi de cette décision.

I don't understand why this decision is being made.

Abbreviated nouns

Abbreviated nouns keep the gender of the complete noun:

| | | | |
|---------------------------------------|---|-----------------------------------|--------------------|
| l'apéro/l'apéritif | before lunch or dinner drink | la photo/la photographie | photography |
| le ciné/le cinéma | cinema/movie theater | le pseudo/le pseudonyme | pseudonym |

Épicène nouns: Nouns with two genders

Some nouns have their own idiosyncrasies: their gender varies for multiple reasons, and some are androgynous. This is just another twist to the never-ending story.

Some nouns can be either masculine or feminine. They are called noms épiciènes. You encountered some earlier where, for example, une tortue can be either male or female.

The words that can be used with either gender are:

| | | | |
|--------------|--------------|-------------|---------------------------------|
| après-midi | afternoon | oasis | oasis |
| avant-guerre | prewar years | palabres* | never-ending discussions |
| enzyme | enzyme | parka | parka |
| laque | lacquer | perce-neige | snowdrop |
| météorite | meteorite | régisse | licorice |

*Used in the plural.

Arnaud a photographié une merveilleuse oasis couverte de palmiers dattiers.

Une météorite de 150 kg est tombée dans un champ de blé à Ensisheim, Alsace en 1492.

Arnaud photographed a wonderful oasis covered with date palms.

A 150-kilo meteorite fell in a wheatfield in Ensisheim, Alsace, in 1492.

Nouns that are masculine in the singular and feminine in the plural

The gender of some nouns changes if an adjective follows or precedes them. We'll look at amour, délice, and gens. Amour is masculine in the common, singular usage:

L'amour fou est éternel.
« Mais combien fait mal un amour qui meurt! » (Pierre Loti)

*Being madly in love is eternal.
"How a dying love is painful!"*

If the adjective precedes the noun when it is plural, the noun and the adjective are used in the feminine plural:

Dans son roman, il raconte ses folles amours avec la marquise.
Elle n'oubliera jamais ses premières amours.
« J'aspirais secrètement à de belles amours. » (Honoré de Balzac)

*In his novel, he writes about his mad love for the marquise.
She'll never forget her first romantic experiences.*

In the case of délice, it is more a matter of degree. In the masculine singular, délice means joy, fun:

Quel délice de manger ces mangues bien mûres!

What a delight to eat these very ripe mangoes!

In the feminine plural, there is a sense of pleasure, intense transport of the mind and body:

Ils profitait des délices de l'amour à Venise.
Nous goûtions les délices de la vie.

*They enjoyed the pleasures of love in Venice.
We enjoyed the delights of life.*

The noun gens is usually masculine plural. However, if an adjective precedes the noun, both the noun and the adjective become feminine and the meaning changes:

J'ai rencontré des gens très distrayants.
Ces vieilles gens vivent de très peu!
Quelles honnêtes gens!
Ce sont des petites gens sans ressources.
Leurs voisins, ce sont des braves gens.

I met very entertaining people.
These old people live on very little!
How honest these people are!
They are poor people without resources.
Their neighbors are good folks.

However, jeunes gens, considered as a block, remains masculine:

De nombreux jeunes gens faisaient la queue devant le cinéma.

Many young people were standing in line in front of the cinema.

Homographic homonyms

A number of nouns are differentiated only by their gender. The spelling and the pronunciation are identical, but the meaning is different. It is very important to be aware of these homographic homonyms. Let's take an example from the hair salon:

Je voudrais une mousse de qualité pour ma croisière dans les îles des Caraïbes. I would like a quality styling mousse for my cruise in the Caribbean Islands.

Versus:

Je voudrais un mousse de qualité pour ma croisière dans les îles des Caraïbes. I would like a quality cabin boy for my cruise in the Caribbean Islands.

Memorize the gender of such words little by little, using them in full sentences and engraving them in your mind to keep out of trouble. Compare these masculine and feminine nouns:
