As the world continues to experience rapid technological advancements, it is essential to acknowledge that the benefits of these developments are not distributed equitably. In particular, marginalized communities—whether defined by class, caste, gender, ethnicity, disability, or geography—are often left behind in the digital revolution. The issue of digital inequality is a critical one, as technology is increasingly shaping access to resources, opportunities, and participation in societal and political processes.

The Two-Day Multi-Disciplinary International Conference on “Digital Inequality and Social Stratification: The Impact of Technology on Marginalized Communities” offers an invaluable platform for critical dialogue and exploration of the complex ways in which digital technologies intersect with the realities of social stratification. This conference will illuminate the barriers faced by marginalized populations and provide an academic and policy-oriented space to address the challenges posed by the digital divide.

As a professional working within the domain of disaster management, I am particularly attuned to the devastating effects that climate change, natural disasters, and environmental degradation have on vulnerable communities. These populations are often disproportionately affected by both environmental risks and the exclusion from technological tools that could aid in their resilience-building efforts. Therefore, the focus of this conference on the intersection of digital technology and marginalization is of utmost importance in building long-term solutions that are both sustainable and inclusive.

This conference, with its hybrid mode format, will ensure broader participation, thus providing an opportunity for global and local voices to engage in discussions that could pave the way for inclusive technology development, policy interventions, and community-based solutions. I commend the organizers for their commitment to making this dialogue accessible to diverse perspectives and for their focus on elevating the voices of those often unheard in the mainstream discourse.

I look forward to the rich discussions that will emerge from this conference and hope that it will lead to actionable outcomes that will reduce digital inequality and improve the lives of marginalized communities worldwide.

President, Pondicherry Society for Disaster Management
Tamil Nadu, India

Dear Dr. Vasudevan,

Invitation to Establish a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU)

We refer to the productive discussion held with you during your recent visit to our institute in Sri Lanka. It was indeed a pleasure to exchange ideas on advancing disaster management education in the South Asian region.

At present, the Department of Geography, University of Kelaniya, is in the process of revising its existing Diploma in Disaster Management (DDM) program. In parallel, we are developing a new Higher Diploma in Disaster Management (HDDM) program to further enhance academic and practical engagement in the field.

In this context, we are pleased to extend a formal invitation to the Indian Institute of Disaster Management (IIDM) to establish a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) with our department for academic and professional collaboration in Disaster Management.

The proposed MoU aims to:

- Facilitate joint curriculum development and expert lectures
- Enable resource sharing and collaborative research
- Offer opportunities for student and faculty exchange
- Organize training workshops, simulations, and field-based learning modules

We are confident that this partnership will foster mutual learning and contribute meaningfully to building regional capacity in disaster risk reduction and resilience. We kindly invite your institution to begin a dialogue toward formalizing this MoU. We would be happy to schedule a virtual meeting at your earliest convenience to discuss the scope, structure, and implementation modalities.

Thank you for your kind consideration. We look forward to a positive and fruitful collaboration.

The twenty-first century is witnessing unprecedented complexities —Climate change, environmental degradation, social and economic inequities, public health disparities, governance among others. These intersectional concerns demand solutions that cross disciplinary boundaries. Addressing these pressing issues requires insights from across the interdisciplinary aspects.

International Seminar on Contemporary Issues—Challenges and a Way Forward is guided by the principle that effective interventions emerge when diverse perspectives are brought together, leveraging the strengths of multiple disciplines. Designed as a truly interdisciplinary forum, this seminar invites participation from a broad spectrum of scholars, practitioners, and stakeholders to foster innovative, actionable responses to contemporary challenges

This one-day international seminar seeks to inspire actionable solutions that acknowledge the depth of these challenges while fostering innovative pathways toward a future that is both inclusive and sustainable.

About the College:

Southfield College, originally established as Loreto College in Southfield, Darjeeling, began its journey in August 1961 as a women's college. At the request of the Government, the Loreto Educational Society agreed to oversee its management. However, due to a shortage of personnel, the Loreto Nuns later handed over the institution to the Government of West Bengal. From June 15, 2008, it has been functioning under the name Southfield College.

Staying true to its founding values, Southfield College is committed to the holistic development of women. It seeks to nurture individuals who exercise responsible freedom, uphold reverence for human dignity, and appreciate enduring values.

Proudly standing as the only women's college in North Bengal to be re-accredited by NAAC with an "A" Grade (3rd Cycle), Southfield College continues to foster a vibrant academic and research culture. Through its multifaceted initiatives, the college contributes meaningfully to both scholarly advancement and the broader societal development of the Darjeeling region.
