Our Brand Safety Glove Vitex

Technical Performance (EN388:2016)

The code 4131X represents its performance ratings:

- 4 (Abrasion) : High resistance to friction and wear.
- 1 (Cut) : Basic protection against sharp edges (low risk).
- 3 (Tear) : High resistance to tearing.
- 1 (Puncture) : Basic protection against pointed objects.
- X : Not tested for TDM cut resistance or impact.

Key Features

- Material : Seamless 13-gauge polyester or nylon liner for a "second skin" fit.
- PU Coating : Thin Polyurethane layer on the palm and fingertips for superior grip and tactile sensitivity.
- Breathability : Uncoated back of the hand allows for air circulation, reducing sweat.
- Precision : Ideal for handling small parts or oily components without losing grip.

Common Applications

- Electronics & Assembly : Handling tiny screws or delicate circuit boards.
- Logistics : General warehouse work and packaging.
- Automotive : Light mechanical tasks and quality inspection.
- Maintenance : General DIY and precision tool handling.

Our Brand Safety Glove Vitex

Why it is Used in Seat Manufacturing (e.g., Hyundai) In the production of car seats, precision and material care are critical. This glove is preferred for :

- Tactile Sensitivity: Essential for handling small clips, screws, and fine upholstery fabrics where "fingerprint" feel is necessary.
- Product Integrity: The PU (Polyurethane) coating is non-marking and low-linting, ensuring that premium leather or fabric seat covers are not stained or scratched during assembly.
- Superior Grip: Provides a steady grip when pulling and stretching seat covers over foam frames to ensure a tight, professional finish.
- Maximum Abrasion Resistance: Rated at Level 4 (the highest), allowing workers to handle rough metal seat frames and hardware repeatedly without the glove wearing out.
