B. Reading Comprehension (16 Marks)

Read the following passage, then answer the questions below:

Should we work all the time without having rest or entertainment? The answer is that we cannot go on working without stopping. From time to time, we should stop to have some rest and some recreation to have fun. If we did not, we could make mistakes and our work might get worse.

An overworked person may end up losing his ability to think clearly and having no energy to go on working. Sleep is one way by which we can renew our energy. Sports and games are also important for brainworkers, who stay in closed offices and don't have a good chance to exercise their muscles. Swimming, walking and other outdoor activities are excellent and may be very good for all people, so we should not waste our weekends. People should make full use of them by being in the open air places. Having forgotten all about our work and the worries of life, we can then enjoy ourselves to the full and return the next day to work with our energy fully renewed. Change has a magic effect on people's health and their work.

Only clever people are those who can make a balance between their work and their personal lives. They are hardworking when they do their jobs and they live the happiest moments when they are not working.

B. Reading Comprehension (16 marks)

Read the following passage, then answer the questions below:

In England, many parents think that they must teach their children how to swim to make them more respected and stronger among their friends. Swimming also makes parents feel that their children will be safe whenever they go to the sea or swimming pools. They usually take them to public swimming pools or sports clubs on holidays to give them swimming training courses.

One often sees some parents worried trying to force their frightened children to swim. I believe that pushing the little child into water can be a big mistake because this makes the child more afraid of water. Parents commit another mistake which is to give children rubber rings or wings to help them. This makes the child think that it is dangerous to get his / her head under water.

When my children were young, we usually spent the weekends in mountains where there was a circular water tank. It was about two metres deep. I let them swim there. I never gave them rubber rings or water wings while they were in water. That gave them self-confidence and made them depend on themselves. My eldest son began to jump into the tank. Soon, his brother and sister got used to water and did the same thing. This means that children should learn swimming at their own speed.

Dolphins have become a popular attraction at zoos in recent years. They are more and more interesting than lions and tigers because they are more active and perform tricks like circus animals. Although they usually obey the trainer more than other land animals, they sometimes get bored if they were asked to do the same trick twice. This is the reason for believing that they are very intelligent.

Dolphins are the friendliest animals in the sea, and stories of them helping drowning sailors have been told for thousands of years all around the world. Marine scientists in South Africa have trained dolphins to help swimmers and divers in difficult situations and drive sharks away from touristic beaches.

Dolphins range in size, from one to seven metres. They can travel in seas and oceans at the speed of 29 kilometres per hour. They have well-developed hearing with which they can hear in both air and water. It is so well developed that some can survive even if they are blind.

The more we learn about dolphins, the more we know that they are better organised and their society is more advanced and not as simple as people can imagine. Dolphins look after other dolphins when they are ill, care for mothers, and protect the weak and the young ones, as we do. The more scientists discover about these sea animals, the more they appear in need for more studies about dolphins.
