

Like this:

The voice in her head grew louder and louder until it burst out with a loud AAAAAA.... And Aggy ran out of the bathroom as fast as she could, before the giant spider ate her.

Like this:

Aggy saw a giant spider approaching her.

Like this:

The spider, without even having time to think about his future, scurried back under the bathtub at full speed.

The spider certainly didn't expect that. The deafening, explosive sound completely changed his intentions and plans to weave webs and live peacefully here.

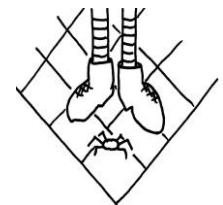

The spider was big and fat.

Like this:

He lived peacefully until one day he accidentally crawled out from under the bathtub. A whole new world opened up before him.

Like this:

The spider liked his new world and crawled towards it to weave new webs.

Aggie climbed onto a stool so that the spider could not reach her so easily, and carefully inspected the entire bathroom. There was no trace of the spider.

Like this:

The brave girl Aggy consulted with her wise mother and returned to the bathroom. She brought a cup - if the spider appeared again, she would be ready.

Monika S.K.

Aggy and the Spider

If she caught him, she would release him outside, where the spider wouldn't find her so easily.

Like this:

Aggy seemed a little upset, yet also relieved that the spider wasn't in the bathroom. Aggy thought that the spider went to live in another bathroom. But she kept the cup just in case. If the spider ever came back, she intended to catch him.

And so they lived, Aggy and the spider, not, knowing anything about each other, not getting in each other's way. Only the flies, flying from Aggy's world, got caught in the spider's webs. And the cup kept watch quietly on the windowsill.

Like this:

