The Tree of Healing

Winter, it seems, can drain the energy out of us. The cold weather can zap us of our vitality and motivation. Long nights, short days, early darkness, bleak landscapes can all lead one to feel as if the bears got it right with their hibernation during these months. Wake me in the Spring. Now branches look dead, there's little foliage and the chilling, dry winds discourage all but the hardiest of us to venture outdoors. Into the cold and the fatigue of winter comes our Lenten season beginning with Ash Wednesday on February 18.

This month as we hold our Ash Wednesday service and move into the Lenten season, just as it is barren outside, internally we are reminded of our mortality, sinfulness, and our desolation which cries out our need for a Savior. Ash Wednesday and Lent fall in the starkest time of the calendar year, begging for a renewal of life within and around us. Lent is longer in duration than Advent. Maybe this is because we need more time to reflect upon what is broken within our lives and to be truthful about what hurts and where we need to be healed. There is also a collective sadness as we contemplate the state of violence and hatred in our world and we need space and time to lament and to draw upon the hope we hold deep in Christ. Lent calls us to renew our commitment to daily and weekly repentance; and to remember with confidence and gratitude that Christ has conquered death and sin. Lent calls us as witnesses to the power and beauty of our union with Christ and to the daily dying and rising with Christ that this entails. Perhaps Lent is longer than Advent because we need more time to walk through the difficult parts of life and to trust them to our Savior whose life, death and resurrection makes rebirth possible in us.

To this end, this year on Ash Wednesday, we will be erecting a bare tree in the sanctuary. This tree, impoverished as it is, is a healing tree. The empty branches cry out for new life and newness of being. Each week as we enter the sanctuary, we will be able to bring life to the tree, one leaf at a time, by clipping leaves onto the branches. Each leaf will hold an action we can take that week which will encourage life to flourish. Actions taken can be as simple as calling to encourage a person or more complex as we seek to make amends with another. An action might be a note written to an estranged family member, or the wiping out of a small debt. Actions can also be a promise to God to quit blaming others, to give up entitlement, to cease from over commitment and busyness, to stop gossiping, to quit ignoring things that matter or anything else that will be an action leading to fresh life. Confession and repentance enter into this opportunity for new life as we take the moment to do both. Write on the leaves any place in your heart that needs healing; the relationships that need healing; the hurts that need forgiveness or the places you need to forgive.

Each week until Easter we will have an opportunity to add leaves to the tree as we give up or cease from destructive behavior and work towards living our lives out in the blessing of our union in Christ and relationships with others. As Lent progresses toward Easter, the tree will gradually bloom with many "dangling leaves."

It is challenging and courageous to give up old hurts. As we do so each week we will see the tree's branches spreading out with fresh leaves showing the many healing possibilities held in its branches. Every leaf added to our healing tree helps bring us closer to God and to one another in fresh ways.

By Easter Sunday this tree will be full of leaves of confession, repentance, forgiveness, and healing. From Easter Sunday forward it will become a tree of life. The six weeks from Easter Sunday to Pentecost we will have opportunities to add flowers to the tree alongside the leaves. These flowers will name places of gratitude, places where we have given or received encouragement, kindness, and joy. These flowers hold peace in places where we have loved and served and are a physical demonstration where we have lived into the kingdom of God in intentional and God honoring ways.

We love and serve a God who loves us, who redeems us through Jesus, and who by the power of the Holy Spirit, empowers us to live as beloved children. Let us fill our tree with healing life.
