

RULES

Familiarize yourself with the rules when visiting the farm:

- By arranging your visit for educational sessions or other events, you confirm that you have familiarized yourself with the farm's internal rules and commit to adhering to them.
- Children may only visit when accompanied by parents or supervising adults. Parents or accompanying adults are responsible for ensuring that children are aware of the rules.
- The accompanying adult is responsible for the safety and rule compliance of any group or minors in their care.
- Permission from the farm owner to interact with the animals does not guarantee peaceful behavior from the animals. You must independently decide whether or not to engage with them.
- A person who directly interacts with an animal is considered to have taken control of the animal and assumes all risks of possible actions by the animal that may cause harm to themselves or any minors they represent or supervise.
- Remember, even the sweetest and friendliest animal has claws and sharp teeth.
- Animals may only be fed with food specified by the farm owner and with their permission.
- Entering animal enclosures or cages without permission is strictly prohibited.
- Animals may only be petted or fed at arm's length and only in the presence of an instructor.
- Do not bring your face too close to the animal, and do not tease or scare them – this can be dangerous for both you and the animal.
- Treat the animals with respect and follow all instructions from the instructor.
