

From Wales, the 18-year-old musician is an artist who skilfully fuses elements of progressive and alternative rock all within a pop sensibility captivating listeners in an entirely unique and singular way for his generation.

Currently pursuing his studies at the Liverpool Institute for Performing Arts, Isaac's musical journey began at the early age of six, with the guitar quickly becoming his primary instrument of choice drawing inspiration from a vast array of artists including Steven Wilson, John Mayer and Jeff Buckley.

Beyond his guitar skills, Isaac's musical ability extends to an array of other instruments, which he incorporates into his compositions, often playing all the instruments on a given track. Isaac also showcases his talents as a self-taught producer and prolific session guitarist playing on over 150 songs for artists and producers around the world.

Despite his young age, Isaac has already made an impressive mark on the industry, attaining millions of views online and gaining recognition from industry legends such as Toto guitarist Steve Lukather, John McLaughlin, and guitar professor at Berklee College of Music, Tomo Fujita. In September 2023, Isaac performed at the Grammy Museum in LA for the Crossroads Guitar Festival, opening for Eagles guitarist Don Felder as a tribute to the late guitarist Jeff Beck.

On the 6th November 2024 Isaac performed his song 'Lone Man' from his eagerly awaited debut EP at the Royal Albert Hall alongside his incredible live band comprising of Solomon Bryant (Drums), David Vine (Bass), Reece Peaty (Acoustic Guitar), Charlie Wallace (Keys).

"Got a LOT of potential for greatness."
