Last Resort Counseling

Just as there is crisis counseling for marriages there is also crisis counseling for those who are one step away from animal surrender. I have been there, and you never fully recover once the animal is gone from your life. But there is HOPE! Join me, keep the hope alive, and we will work together to heal the broken, fractured connection.

We will begin with an introduction session. I will meet with you and your pup in your home. This is the time to just relax and tell me what the problem is. We will discuss possible causes and next steps.

After the introduction session I will suggest next steps. We will try everything in our power to heal and move forward. Possible forms of examination include a study day where I hang out with you for a day. I know it sounds awkward - so there are other options as well. I may suggest a boarding study where I take the animal to my kennels and work through some scenarios in a neutral environment. I might also construct an entirely new plan for your family. Each family and each dog is unique after all.

Once I have a good idea of the situation and we have tried everything possible, there will be two outcomes. First, IT WORKED! If this is the case, rest assured I will not leave you to figure out this new relationship alone. Included in the fee will be check ups scheduled at your convenience. Second, we need to work on another solution. Your animal will be cared for I promise that. Certain situations are out of my league but I have a solid team that I can refer the toughest situations to in times of crisis.

Therapy, Working, and Service Animals

Did you think I only train dogs? Think again. Therapy, Working, and Service Animals are the main reason I am in animal training at all. Each one provides a crucial service to mankind. They deserve our greatest respect and our finest dedication.

Therapy animals work in hospitals, nursing homes, schools, and a myriad of other places to comfort, heal, and guide us humans. AAT (animal assisted therapy) is a studied form of therapy common in many medical facilities. This program prepares your animal (and you!) to serve in this noble manner.

Medical service animals save lives. From epilepsy detection to seeing-eye dogs, the connection between human and animal is critical. I work with humans and their animals to foster that bond and polish the animal's training and skills. This is an ongoing course - I am always available when you need me!

Working Dogs include Military, Police, Detection, Protection, and Search and Rescue dogs. I recommend handlers have former knowledge in their chosen discipline before enrolling their pups in one of Whisper's training courses. The human-animal connection is no more relevant than in the working dog trades. Very often, human life depends on the handler and working dog's bond.
