Read this passage and answer Questions 27 to 31

"Quick! We've to hurry!" Ling cried out excitedly to her little brother. "We can't be late!"

The village chief, Uncle Ahmad, was throwing a birthday party for the villagers again. But, this year would be a special celebration - he was also celebrating his retirement. The event was even more extraordinary as he would be unveiling a 'magic box'. Ling and her brother were looking forward to the array of food that each family was preparing, as well as playing games with the other children. But, their favourite part was the top spinning competition. The winner was the one who could keep his or her top spinning for the longest. 5

"I'll beat you this year!" Ling's brother declared. His sister grinned. Indeed, he was better at it. 10

When all the guests had arrived, Uncle Ahmad presented his 'magic box' that looked unimpressive. It sat on four spindly legs and occupied the end of his massive living room. On the front of the box was a glass screen and four little buttons. Ling and her friends peered curiously at the screen and tapped their fingers on the glass but could not see anything. Uncle Ahmad quickly stepped in front of it and fluttered his arms, signalling anxiously for his guests to move away. 15

"This can show you pictures of people and places you've never been to before!" he said proudly. Then, he pressed one of the buttons. The screen soon lit up. Suddenly, the face of a man appeared on the screen and he started talking! He was so tiny! 20 The guests were amazed. Everyone was buzzing with excitement.

The children looked behind the box but did not see anyone. "Could someone be in it?" Ling whispered to her brother. He shrugged.

Uncle Ahmad then gestured for the guests to return to their seats. The villagers were totally transfixed. All were staring at the moving images. None of the children was interested in spinning tops. The adults too, sat in silence. They were absolutely captivated by them. That night, the first television had arrived at the village. 25
