Standing at its base, Ben looked up eagerly at the lighthouse. His heart quickened with the anticipation of what lay inside. Climbing the winding stairs gingerly, he was mindful of the narrow steps beneath his feet.

(16)

In the lantern room, Ben paused, admiring the old, faded pictures of the lighthouse. "300 years? How amazing!" he gasped as he realised that the sturdy lantern had stood through countless storms. The light glowed faintly. Stepping closer to the lantern, he could feel its purpose to guide lost sailors home. Gazing out over the endless sea, he imagined ships battling fierce storms, in urgent need of a glimmer of hope. The lighthouse was a promise of safety, warning sailors of hidden dangers.

Eat Healthy, Learn Well

Choose healthy snacks for growing children

Encouraging healthy eating habits helps:

- ✓ Boost focus
- ✓ Maintain a healthy weight
- ✓ Build strong, healthy bodies
- ✓ Keep children energised for learning

Simple Weekly Snack Planner:

 Snack Box Ideas
Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday
Wholemeal sandwich with scrambled eggs	Yoghurt cup & unsalted nuts	Brown rice ball with seaweed & grapes	Wholegrain crackers & cherry tomatoes	Baked chicken & a banana

Healthy Eating Tips :

- ✓ Add colour: Include at least 2 different coloured fruits or vegetables.
- ✓ Go whole: Choose whole grains like brown rice, wholemeal bread and oats.
- ✓ Skip sugary treats: Avoid sweets and sweet drinks; choose milk or water instead.
- ✓ Keep portions kid-sized: Pack enough food to fill little tummies but do not overfill the snack box.
- ✓ Get children involved: Get children to prepare the snacks themselves. They'll love it better!

Text 2

The extract is from a school newsletter article on Health Awareness Week.

Promoting Healthy Habits in School

Do you know that healthy snacks can be delicious and easy to prepare? Last week, our school organised its annual Health Awareness Week, and students were filled with excitement! The week began with a Snack Box Challenge, where students brought colourful, healthy snacks from home, such as wholemeal sandwiches, fruit skewers, and yoghurt cups.

Students also participated in a Bento Art Workshop, where they created fun animal-shaped rice balls by themselves. Many students were surprised by how delicious healthy food could be.

The school canteen vendors joined in by offering new dishes that align with national nutrition guidelines. To make them tasty, the vendors added creative touches, such as adding crispy tofu to whole-grain noodles. They even replaced the sweetened sodas with naturally flavoured low-sugar fruit infusions. During recess, teachers noticed that even students who usually avoided healthy snacks polished off their plates!

A survey showed over 80% of students are now more willing to pack or eat more nutritious snacks!

- 21 "Choose healthy snacks for growing children." The image in Text 1 supports this statement as the children shown are looking _____.
- (1) full
 - (2) cheery
 - (3) intelligent
 - (4) comfortable
- 22 According to the poster in Text 1, eating healthy snacks helps children to _____.
- (1) excel in everything they do
 - (2) improve their concentration
 - (3) lose weight to build muscles
 - (4) cultivate a strong interest in learning
- 23 Based on Text 1, which of the following statements is not true?
- (1) Sugary drinks and candies can be given as occasional treats.
 - (2) Snacks should be given in smaller portions to prevent overeating.
 - (3) Children are more likely to finish the snacks prepared by themselves.
 - (4) Snacks given should include two or more different coloured fruits or vegetables.
- 24 "Do you know that healthy snacks can be delicious and easy to prepare?" Why did the writer ask the question in Text 2?
- (1) to enthuse students to participate in Health Awareness Week
 - (2) to show students how simple it is to make healthier food choices
 - (3) to encourage students to bring their own healthy snacks from home
 - (4) to get students thinking about their current snack habits and consider healthier options
- 25 Which one of the following phrases from Text 2 does not show the application of the healthy eating tips given in Text 1?
- (1) [vendors] ... used whole-grain noodles.
 - (2) [vendors] ... replaced the sweetened sodas.
 - (3) [students] ... created fun animal-shaped rice balls by themselves.
 - (4) [students] ... are now more willing to pack or eat more nutritious snacks.

The mattress had been rolled up, and Mama was folding clothes without a word. It made sense now – why the cardboard boxes were stacked in the corner when I first walked in.

"We're moving again, Son," Papa said, not looking up. "The strawberries are gone. Time to find new work." 5

This was the life of a migrant family. It was not the first time the five of us had packed up our lives into a rusty old car. We followed the harvest. In spring, we picked strawberries. In summer, we picked grapes. Later in the year, we moved again to pick cotton. Each move meant leaving behind any friends I had just made. Still, something about this move felt heavier and I was unwilling to accept that. I had just begun to enjoy school and found it hard to give up my spot on the soccer team. But once again, I would have to make a fresh start. 10

We arrived at our new home two days later. The sun was harsh, and the shed we were offered to stay in had cracked walls and a floor made of dirt. Mama did not complain. She simply said, "We'll make it work," as she laid out our blankets. 15

Work in the grape fields began the next day. I woke up early and followed Papa and my two older brothers into the rows of vines. The grapes looked beautiful hanging in bunches, but they were tough to cut, and the buckets grew heavier with each trip. My hands stung, and my back ached by mid-morning. "Keep going," Papa said gently, "We need the money." In the evening, we returned to the shed exhausted and silent. I missed school, but Papa reminded me that work came first. 20

Eventually, I was allowed to attend the nearby school since the harvest was slowing down. On my first day, I walked into the classroom clutching a paper bag lunch. My new class was twice the size of the old one. The teacher greeted me kindly and pointed to an empty seat, but I felt everyone's eyes on me. During lessons, students spoke quickly and worked in groups, but I barely understood what anyone was saying. At that point, I wished I was back in my old school. 25

One afternoon, the teacher announced that we would each take turns reading a paragraph aloud. My heart raced. When it was my turn, I stood up and began reading – but stumbled over several words. A few students giggled. I sat down quickly, face burning. 30

That night, I did not eat much. Mama noticed that.

"You okay?" she asked.

"I read badly today," I muttered. "Everyone laughed."

She placed a hand on my shoulder. "Then read it again tonight. Show them what you can do." 35

So I did. I read the paragraph over and over every night. Even after my brothers were asleep, I whispered the words under my breath.

A week later, it was my turn again. This time, I read the paragraph without hesitation. The room was quiet, and when I finished, my teacher gave me a nod. After class, a boy walked over. "Hey," he said, "you read well. Want to sit with us at lunch?" 40

I nodded, surprised. It felt like I was beginning to belong again.

That night, as I sat in the corner of the shed reading by the dim light of a lantern, I thought of how friendly the boy was at this new place. It dawned on me that I no longer felt afraid. The key to that was to keep an open mind.

Chimpanzees can help each other when injured. Scientists have found that chimpanzees not only treat their own wounds _____ they also provide 'first aid' to others. This discovery suggests that chimps may recognise _____ another chimp is hurt and try to help. A team of researchers came to this conclusion after reviewing _____ years of previous studies _____ observing two groups of chimpanzees for months.

The researchers documented numerous cases where chimpanzees cared _____ their own injuries. Common behaviours included licking wounds and chewing plants to apply the material directly to open wounds. These methods can help remove dirt and prevent infections _____ chimp saliva and some plants contain healing chemicals.

Even _____ remarkable were seven examples of chimps helping others. For instance, a young male chimp was seen licking a wound on another chimp's leg, and in one case, a male helped a female escape _____ a rope trap. These acts were not limited _____ family members, showing how social care extends _____ family ties.

_____ behaviours are likely instinctive, but others appear to be learned. Scientists plan to continue studying these behaviours to better understand how chimps learn and care for each other.

sleeping. This information helps you learn more about your daily habits and overall hee'th.

(38)

One key feature of fitness trackers is tracking your steps. They use built-in sansers to count

(39)

movement and ditact if you are walking, running or climbing stairs. Many trackers also shine a light on your skin to check the rate in which your heart is beating. You can view all this data on the device or in an app on your phone. For some people, starting out with new technology may feel a bit donnting, but it becomes easier with use.

(40)

(41)

(42)

Fitness trackers let you set goals like walking 10,000 steps a day – a number making popular by a Japanese doctor in the 1960s. These goals offer valued motivation to stay active and healthy. Some trackers also monitor stress levels and sleep quality.

(43)

(44)

Although fitness trackers are not perfect, they can help detect potenshielly serious health issues – some of which could turn faytle if ignored. They are like small coaches on your wrist, guiding you towards better habits every day.

(45)
