- Partners in identity verification and payment services

Risk Assessment

While our business model poses low direct risk to human rights violations, we have identified specific areas of attention:

- Use of third-party developers or subcontractors (including foreign service providers)
- Data handling practices related to identity verification (e.g., passport validation, MitID integration)

Mitigation Measures

We have taken several steps to manage potential risks:

- Signed data processing agreements and ethical guidelines with suppliers
- Included contractual clauses requiring compliance with human rights standards
- Implemented internal procedures for privacy and information security
- Established onboarding routines to evaluate new vendor risks

4. Key Findings

To date, we have not uncovered any violations of human rights or unacceptable working conditions within our operations or among our partners. Identified risks related to technology vendors and data processing are being monitored actively.
