More Submarine Wildlife Stories

I am sure all submarines XO have a "mess party" as diving officer. During mess and before I noticed several members of the crew standing back and forth through. Could it be they way to enter the PTB or ATK, the Chief of the Watch tried to explain my mess problem. Was the 500 pound mess party the deck Allegedly the "first" of the 500 pound mess party involved the birds among chickens and dogs and the crew refusing to eat it and making around with their own hands for several days. When Guy McKinnon asked the reason, they said it was because the birds had "killed" the 500 pound mess party and tried to serve it to them. He went along with the gag and we had a formal Navy burial service hospital, complete with gun salute and conducted a variety of chicken bones to the sea. There is a photo of the burial service that I published once in Sticker Sticker (I don't remember the exact issue). It came by mail from Skipper (Bill Russell) who was the Quartermaster who participated in the burial service.

Ball of Fluff MASCOT... This fluffy guy is part of a specialized pool filter... We literally designed this character around an actual photograph of one single ball... many are used in a pool filter.

USS SEA OWL HOOTS

The legend of the Sea Owl BULLNOSE CANNON makes it the last submarine to be equipped with a deck gun. Scuttlebutt is that a 45 caliber line-throwing gun was ordered through the Navy Supply System. When the gun arrived in a huge wooden crate, it turned out to be... you guessed it, a 45 millimeter cannon instead of a 45 caliber gun. The cobbler, Danny Bodner, had the gun chrome plated and mounted the gun on the forecandle as a novelty and conversation piece. The rumor passed along by the last XO, (Taylor) is that submarine sailors from all over the river have paraded their girl friends under the gun, explaining that the gun will go off if the girls haven't been true to them, or if a natural blonde passes underneath.

Florida man threw live gator in Wendy's drive-thru window, police say

WEST PALM BEACH Alligators have been used as shoes, briefcases, university mascots, lunch and now, authorities say, a deadly weapon. Joshua James, 24, was arrested and charged with assault with a deadly weapon without intent to kill after Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation officials say he threw a 3.5-foot alligator through a Palm Beach County Wendy's drive-thru window. He's also charged with illegally possessing an alligator and petty theft. He was ordered to have no contact with animals. Wildlife officer Nicholas Guerin said in his report that James drove his pickup truck to the window at about 1:20 a.m. Oct. 11. After an employee handed James his drink, he threw the alligator through the window and drove off.

Florida man arrested for trying to get alligator drunk

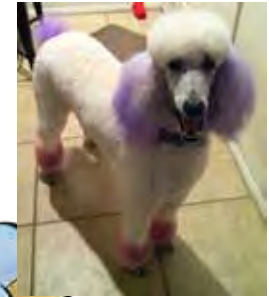

A Florida man was reportedly arrested for trying to get an alligator drunk after his pal captured the reptile. Timothy Kepke, 27, of Hobe Sound allegedly fed some beer to the animal, which also bit him, on Aug. 26 in Palm City, according to a Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission report obtained by TC Palm. Moments earlier, Kepke told police, Noah Osborne, 22, caught the gator with his bare hands, the report said. Kepke told authorities he had consumed a few beers that day, but claimed he wasn't intoxicated during the incident. After the beer feeding, which was recorded, the duo released the animal back into the wild, Kepke told officers.
