"Moving is about maintaining a cool head and common sense during stressful and unexpected events."

You know what needs to be done, so plan it out, with safeguards for the unexpected, when unexpected things occur, adapt, and keep moving.

- Know your timeline-The times from when you need to move out, to when you can move in, and any times in between are the restrictions to start your move with.
- Decide how you want to move, and what you need along the way
  - ◆ Choose to use movers, storage units, or storage containers after you have the time parameters so you know what time frame services need to work within.
- How to Pick the Right Movers and the Right Services for you
  - ◆ Know your standards and requirements: Whether a new house/apartment, realtor, moving company, storage facility, or storage Container Company, as well as any other services you utilize. It's also important to rate the level of professionalism
  - ◆ Find the balance between your budget, your standards, and the ability to service your needs effectively.
  - ◆ Ask the right questions, of course, it's good to make sure that they have their licensing, etc, I think most importantly, it's about making sure that they'll meet your needs(Ideally exceed them) in a professional manner.
- Create a Detailed plan with a checklist(Add as you go)
  - ◆ Take your framework for your move and run through the process from packing/cleaning/preparing your current place for the next person, to finding a place in the desired area, prepping utilities, etc for the new place, then moving in and getting set up.
  - ◆ Prepare for the Process Ahead, create a checklist, and add to it as you go through the process and remember things.
- Understand that everything is a resource and all resources should be fully utilized.
  - ◆ Between what your budget is and what you have on hand sometimes you'll need to be creative. Remember that everything is a tool to obtain the objective.
- Common Moving Reminders that get Neglected/Forgotten:
  - ◆ Don't Underestimate the Move- You never know what you got till you have to move it all, so mentally prepare for more than what you think you have.
  - ◆ Start Early- The earlier you start, the more empowered you are, and the more enjoyable the process. Moving is supposed to be exciting.
  - ◆ Pace Yourself - Dates are set in stone(most of the time), Find a pace that will get you there on time, no matter how bad traffic(obstacles and unexpected) is.
  - ◆ Avoid making last-minute or under-stress decisions- This is how you end up with a messy/unprepared move which is usually the most expensive move too.
