91 The life of man is similar to a weaving.

1. Existence is directed and animated by a living and intelligent connection that the ancient sages called the “river of life.”
2. All beings peopling the different worlds are connected to each other by an actual weaving composed of fine subtle channels that allow life to circulate and harmonize the lower with the higher, the small with the big.
3. The more man is conscious that he stands in the middle of a vast weaving that is a powerful network of communication and exchanges, the more he can play his role as an awakened intermediary between the worlds and as a conductor of the forces of the minerals, plants and animals up to the Divinity, passing through the Angels, Archangels and Gods.
4. The body and life of man are similar to a weaving. Man is at the centre of a spider web, each thread connecting him to a region, an organ, a very precise function of the universe. This image of the spider web, of which man is the centre, summarizes the existence of man and reveals his mission, his role. He is a living body connected to a much larger body with which he must maintain conscious and harmonious relationships. Each thread starting from him is a relationship, a path that open up towards immensity.
5. Man has to be responsible for the nature of the relationships he maintains with the living universe. Each one of his concepts, thoughts, senses, habits, behaviours, attitudes, activities establishes him in a harmony or makes him an agent of disease, disorder, suffering.
6. The essential virtue of the Essene is healing, and the knowledge of this web woven from subtle channels is its absolute key. It is through the knowledge of this web that the Essene can restore harmony in him and in all the kingdoms of creation.
7. Each world is connected to a thread and each thread to an activity, an organ, a cell of the body and life of man.
8. It is by consciously uniting and harmonizing with the higher worlds that man can truly act and heal his world and the lower worlds. To achieve this union with the higher worlds, it is necessary to cultivate the right consciousness, attitude and life behaviour. It is the secret of Essene wisdom and discipline.
9. Every movement, word, look has to be studied, made conscious and harmonized with the higher intelligence. Then true knowledge can enlighten the Essene, who becomes a healer of the worlds.
10. There are connections that unite man with himself, his relatives, the animals, the environment, a path of destiny, the important roles of his life, moods, spiritual atmospheres, karmic heredities, convictions . . . As long as man does not awaken to the importance of uniting and harmonizing with the greatest, with the universal, he remains a prisoner of all these ties that are limited and, quite often, confined to the world of men.

11. The Essene finds the connection that unites him with eternity, with the immortal soul through the Tradition, and from this connection reactivated in his life, he can find the perfection and outcome of each direction, of each thread and lead them into healing.
12. In its essence, life is universal and it is the limited men who have confined it to the world of man and death.
13. By giving life its true dimension again, the Essenes generate currents of intelligence, peace, harmony and healing that can touch a large number of people and worlds.
14. Illusion consists in believing there are a multitude of separate beings.
15. Truth is to become aware that threads of light unite beings and bring them together, for the triumph of the one being or for the great nothingness.
16. Each cell is connected to the living organism, which is itself a cell in a bigger organism. This is a healthy and Essene vision of the world. It is a vision that leads to the unification of all paths towards the one light. The other vision leads to disease, confinement, illusion and nothingness.
17. Life is made up of relations that open paths. Each path is a thread that comes into contact with several worlds for the victory of harmony or of disorder.
18. If man does not heal all the paths that lead towards all the directions of his life, he will never be able to go towards the great idea of each direction.
19. If man thinks, speaks and acts, it is for one day to meet the Divinity that has opened for him the path of thought, speech and action. He has to restore the connection so that his activity is in keeping with his divine origin. If the relation is not clear, if the connection is not alive, man is cut off and there are disorder, disease.
20. Man lives with a family, friends, but if he does not heal the relationships he maintains with them, he will never be able to re-establish the connection with the higher worlds and meet the true brotherhood, which is a Divinity, a face of the Father in the world of eternity.
21. It is this Divinity of brotherhood that has to direct, inspire and lead the world of relationships in which man lives in everyday. This world is complex, for it is itself a whole weaving that unites or draws away beings according to the nature of their relationships and their degree of consciousness.
22. If man knows how to put everything in its place, in harmony with the higher principle of brotherhood, he is really an Essene, a great healer on earth, a living and active blessing.
23. One who knows how to see his brother or sister through others takes his first steps in the world of brotherhood.

24. What I want to teach the Essenes is that through all paths, man must think and act in order to make the act of healing appear so that nothing sick, destructive, conflictive, dark can go from him to another.
25. Through the study of this Essene science, the awakened men must be capable of taking their lives in hand and weaving their own garments, their bodies of Light, in order to unite their lives and their destinies with the divine world. Then all paths will be joy, abundance, the creative activity of peace, healing, harmony for the worlds they will be called to meet and mix with.
26. Every encounter is a path, a thread of life in the great body of the universe, that needs to be healed by being led towards the original Divinity that gave birth to it.
27. No river can be separated from the primary source of the world and it is the water of the Source that will unify the worlds in the wisdom, love and true being of all beings.
28. The Essene must be an awakened healer of his own world and the world that surrounds him in order to reunify all currents with the great eternal principles and sacred virtues that animate the universe and humanity for the victory of the higher intelligence of the Father.
