

The University of Minnesota, in partnership with the Founders Growth Community, will be returning to Cambridge from 14-18 July to host their Valuation Lab Summer School.

The summer school will see groups of students from the US and UK working together on projects, where they will evaluate the US market opportunity of a handful of UK-based life science startups.

Each project team will work closely with their assigned company (under confidentiality agreement) to understand their innovative solution, the business model, potential competitors in and market size in relation to the US. The team will share their findings with the company, concluding with a final presentation at the end of the summer school.

Information for students

We are seeking ~5 UK-based students who are looking to gain real-world experience by participating in this summer school programme, alongside the US post-graduate students. As well as working on your designated project, you will get to visit different leading organisations and extend your professional network.

Requirements:

- Students can be from any field of study
- An interest in healthcare/life science innovation is essential
- Ideally students will be close to completing their under-grad studies or have embarked on post-graduate studies
- Students must be able to participate in person (in Cambridge) from 14-18 July
- Students must be able to attend advance sessions online from 3-6pm on the following dates: Wednesday, 18 June & Saturday, 28 June. There is an additional online session on Saturday, 4 June that we would like students to attend if possible.

Benefits of taking part:

- Invaluable experience of working in a multiskilled project team
- Real-world experience of collaborating to deliver a project within a set timeframe
- Opportunity to gain new knowledge on life science innovation and market analysis
- Chance to increase network through visits to various organisations at the forefront of life science innovation

Please note, students are responsible for their own accommodation and travel costs. Due to the cost of accommodation in Cambridge, we ask that you confirm you are able to be in Cambridge at the point of offering roles. You do not need to be in Cambridge over the weekend.
