Today I got accused of harassment for wanting to know where my children are when they're not with their father like when there's a sleepover and they're staying somewhere else. It is very hurtful isolating and cruel that anyone would choose to ignore my request to know where my children are at all times. We all have had our own struggles and own faults. But my children are my entire world and you guys know this you know I am a fantastic mother and me asking to be notified when they're staying someplace else is not harassment. I would think the mothers and fathers of this email would understand especially.
I don't know what you've heard or assumed Id hoped you'd all try to keep an open mind but not everything is what it seems.
I didn't spend and dedicate the last 17 years with the man I thought I'd spend the rest of my life with to be put through such as I am now especially being ignored as a mother of my own children and by the father of my children. Whether you were trying to just stay out of it or not when it comes to my children you can't just not communicate with me and neither can Sean. That's not how these situations work. you all must know that at some point.
If you don't like what I have to say too bad that's life I think I was as honest as I could be. It's no news to anyone that there's excessive smoking and drinking in this family and yes this is a family. I am my kids family my kids or your family I'm not just gonna disappear and when anything is concerning my children I will approach anyone I need to to make sure I am made aware of anything that concerns them. Go ahead and call it harassment but to me it's called being a good mother. Sean doesn't communicate unless it's over the parenting app and as we all know texting especially when emotional is not the best choice but I don't have any other option right now because Sean has completely shut me out. I'm sorry if you don't want to be in the middle I don't want anyone to be in the middle either but when I'm left with no choice and I need to communicate about my children I will do what I have to do to make sure that that happens that's one of the reasons that makes me such a wonderful mother. And it would really help if you could be a wonderful family to my children and respect their mother.I'm not going anywhere And eventually everyone's going to have to accept that. And Sean please just stop with your accusations already. I'm not out to get anyone I'm not up to prevent my kids from having sleepovers with their family or time with their dad. I'm not out to isolate everyone the way that I feel. trust me I know how horrible it is I would never wish it upon anyone else. I hope someday you'll will be grown-up enough to understand. We all have our shit. I'm coping the best I can but it's a real struggle when there's no clear communication and boundaries. Whatever your feelings are for me really doesn't matter at this point but it matters to my kids so please find a way to suck it up because I am.
And the only reason it hurts so much is because I have love for each and everyone of you as I do my children and to see them go off and spend time with the family that I once called mine and to hear news about sleepovers instead of being told where my children are ahead of time is extremely stressful and painful. It's hard enough not being with them every day especially after having them every day since they were born. please don't make it any harder if there's a way that you can help make it less harder like responding to me when I have a question do it for them please all I ask is that you do it for them. This is an about me and it isn't about Sean. It's all about the kids.
Christine
