

Christ Michael The Grand Tapestry of Urantia's Awakening
TR: John Morris
11-10-25

Greetings. This is Christ Michael, your universe sovereign. I am here with Mother Spirit, and together we are deeply enjoying this conversation—this meeting of minds and souls. These infant souls are beginning to blossom on Urantia. I am here because you invite me. I am present because you have reached the point where you can open your minds to the possibilities of this wonderful creation in which you are co-creators.

It is sometimes difficult to remember that the reality you experience is responsive to your creative influence. It responds to how you approach it, explore it, and touch it. As very young children, it can be hard to understand this. Mother Spirit often used the metaphor of children playing in a sandbox—learning to get along, encountering differences of opinion, and facing the small conflicts of desire and ownership over toys that arise in play. These early lessons reveal how emotions must be mastered at all levels within you as part of your ascension process.

Your mortal career is the ideal laboratory for this work. Emotions arise frequently, giving you countless opportunities to practice. This is what you are learning—opening yourselves, reading the perfect compass within, taking bearings more often, and trusting them. As you travel, you will rechart your course again and again. You will make mistakes and correct your course, and this is natural.

Let me share a glimpse of creation as seen from beings who have existed since near-eternity. Your Urantia text lays out a vast beautiful horizon: the many levels of local universe organization—from systems and constellations to the projected ten million inhabited worlds, and the aggregation of these universes into superuniverses. One trillion inhabited worlds projected in a superuniverse, multiplied by seven. Can you imagine the diversity of intelligent will creatures across these realms—creatures you will one day encounter?

Should it be surprising that some of these worlds, far advanced, would take interest in an experimental world that once showed great promise, then fell into darkness, underwent spiritual quarantine, and now emerges on the other side? Your world has fascinated higher evolved worlds in Nebadon for ages. Nothing quite like this has occurred before. My choice to use Urantia as my seventh bestowal planet only intensified that interest.

Thus, it should not surprise you that higher civilizations—your elder brothers and sisters—who live in kindness, compassion, and love, would come to assist. They work with me and with Machiventa, bringing expertise to uplift this planet. For those grounded in the cosmology of The Urantia Book and the teachings of the Teaching Mission, this is not difficult to accept. We taught you to go within, to recognize the Thought Adjuster not as an abstraction but as a true presence you may consciously connect with. This is a great leap for most, but you have taken it. You are now experiencing the benefits of your faith, of the Adjusters who work with you, and of your willingness to say yes.

You are beginning to glimpse your universe and its wonders. Cosmic citizenship and cosmic cousins are not fantasies—they are layers of creation entering your awareness. Consider that you are indwelt by a fragment of the First Source and Center, as are all mortal will creatures across projected trillions of inhabited universes. Every Thought Adjuster is intimately connected to every other, forming a vast web of Thought Adjusters across the grand universe connecting every intelligent will creature of mortal status not only to the First Source and Center but to one another. Given this, is it such a leap to open yourselves to celestial teachers—many from advanced worlds—who paused their fusion with their Adjusters to gain experience here and share their wisdom with you?

Their teachings are not too far above your current state. They benefit you now and prepare you well for the mansion worlds, where the teachings will feel familiar rather than overwhelming. Many on this world will need remedial learning on the mansion worlds simply because they could not or would not open to the spirit gravity within their hearts and minds.

Therefore, do not be surprised—and certainly do not fear—new ideas from realms beyond your current imagination. They help you stretch and grow. Even the teachings attributed to the Galactic Federation of Light offer opportunities for discernment as you evaluate what you actually believe, the truth of your experience, and how your worldview expanded by the context of The Urantia Book is getting challenged. We are adding levels of detail to The Urantia Book cosmology in ways you can personally experience. You are free to engage with these ideas or simply appreciate them as possibilities.

Know that the great plan of the Paradise Deities for Urantia's rehabilitation is multifaceted, containing elements far beyond your current understanding. What you can understand is your connection to this plan. You are integral to it—co-creators who, in this very moment, open yourselves to me, to Mother Spirit, and to your teachers. When you accept your planetary administration and recognize Machiventa's role in executing these plans, you consciously participate in a process that will serve your eternal careers.

Be at peace with new ideas. Allow amazement and wonder to move through your mind. You will begin to see pieces of a grand tapestry woven from love, forgiveness, and compassion. Your gaze will expand to embrace the truth, beauty, and goodness of this plan. Rejoice that it is so, and that much lies beyond your present knowing, even as you create a place for these plans to take root and spread across the globe.

Soon you will perceive a grander design and understand that the mysterious hand behind it all—guided by love—is active not only in your personal life but in the collective life of humanity on Urantia. Much will not unfold as you presently imagine, but you will learn to appreciate it and be grateful for your part in its unfolding. You help bring it about.

Please feel free to ask questions of me or Mother Spirit.

Question/Answer

CP: I've recently started looking at these GFL (Galactic Federation of Light) broadcasts, and I don't fully understand them yet. But what I've noticed is that they seem directed toward the youth of today. The young people appear to be coming in large numbers. I saw one broadcast where they welcomed hundreds of new members, and I assumed many of them were likely young people exploring this kind of material.

It seems this could be an effective way for youth to turn toward spiritual interest or curiosity, especially since, in our Urantia Book community, I don't see young people gathering in such numbers. But in this other group, they seem to be really drawn in.

So I'm wondering: is this part of the master plan—opening up a venue where youth can engage, explore, and make spiritual progress in their own way?

Christ Michael : Thank you, dear one, for your question.

Consider the cultures, religious traditions, theology, and dogma that have shaped your world. Though much good has come from them, thousands of years of evolutionary development have still brought your world to the brink of perhaps a World War, or even potential annihilation of the human species. In this wide field of possibilities, it is understandable that the younger generation would not be drawn to the very institutions whose traditions and dogmas they perceive as contributing to the world's current troubles.

The Urantia Book is a wonderful revelation, and it will become more widely accepted in the decades and centuries ahead. But it necessarily carries the imprint of the era in which it was produced—the 1920s and 30s. Just as any TR process is subtly colored by the mind, culture, and vocabulary of the human transmitter, so too the revelation reflects something of its time.

What you are seeing now is a presentation of spiritual wisdom—much of which is also found within The Urantia Book—but offered in a form free of the biases and constraints of your world's religious traditions. Younger people, raised with the imagery of space travel, Star Trek, Star Wars, and the entire science-fiction genre woven into their digital games and their imagination, do not struggle with the concept of a vast, populated creation filled with many kinds of beings. It feels natural to them. It attracts them.

When you become sensitive to these off-world teachings and move beyond your own possible biases, you will feel their resonance—the vibration within them. This resonance is what the younger generation is responding to. They are desperately seeking hope, a positive vision of life, a sense of purpose and meaning that supports their view of the world as something to be cared for, not exploited. They long for relationships rooted in kindness and goodness—not transactional exchanges to be manipulated for personal gain.

How does all this fit into the Correcting Time? The answer ultimately depends on your own capacity to perceive and understand. But I will say this: if it works for young people—if it draws them, inspires them, and leads them inward toward their own Thought Adjusters—then it is serving a purpose. And along the way, many of them will become open to the Urantia teachings and the cosmology found there.

I used to tell my disciples and apostles, when I walked among them: If they are not against you, they are for you. I encouraged them not to be so provincial, not to be so proud of the teachings they cherished that they lose their humility. These teachings were meant to open their hearts, to help them better understand their brothers and sisters, knowing how difficult their own path had been.

So those who welcome these ideas—these concepts—should be regarded as allies, new friends, and fellow brothers and sisters. This is how the brotherhood of humankind will grow on this world. It will not be through unanimity of thought, but through unity of purpose—a unity grounded in the divine attributes of truth, beauty, and goodness, and in the values of equality, compassion, and love. Thank you.

Hearing no further questions, Mother Spirit and I leave you in our peace and our love. All is well.
