██████████ To my family, for their exemplarity and patience; and to my country, for its difference. To Christ-God, for everything, and to his Father, for being My Father.

██████████ To H.E. Teodoro Obiang Nguema Mbasogo, for above all, being a Friend, a Grandfather, an Example and an excellent and exemplary Advisor. Thank you for all your advice, which from an early age I have been able to listen to and imitate. Thank you for teaching me to be patient and to make an effort, and to never get discouraged, no matter what happens, thank you for making me a Man of Profit and not just another coward and mediocrity in the henhouse. Thank you for being Excellent, Mr. President. Many will judge and criticize you for the bad, I will always toast to all the good.

“ I am very conscious of what I do, what I say and what I write; I hope that you too - dear enemies - are very conscious of what you do, what you say and what you write, because now the world is watching us and I am not going to shake hands with you either at mass or for mercy; you do not know what a volcano is, but from now on, from today on, you are going to know it. Do you want to be my enemies? - For my part, with great pleasure and pleasure, go ahead!

No one is known to have triumphed and much less survived fighting against God and I, my enemies, I belong to God, I belong to God and I am his Masterpiece.

So every day that you survive is an opportunity for you to turn to God before you perish like the shit flies that you are and are reborn as cockroaches, that which in your hearts you already are: shit flies.”

Introduction

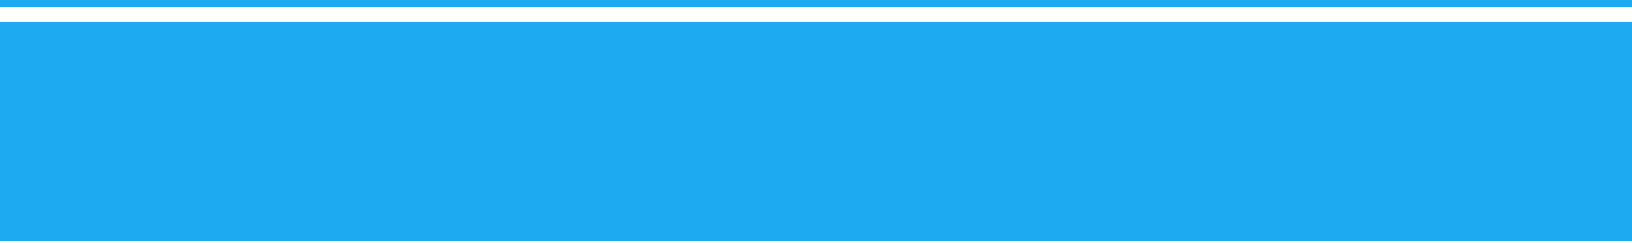

In life, one of the most difficult lessons for us human beings to assimilate is that every struggle ends precisely when we give up.

At that moment when we decide to throw in the towel, the brain immediately accepts defeat not as a probability, but as an order, so we must not let our guard down.

When we decide to surrender in the face of the struggle for freedom and for what we believe to be just; when we decide to surrender in the face of the cowardice of tyrannies that do everything on the sly like the cowards and thieves that all tyrannies are, and when we decide to stop defending the just in the face of injustice, then we become part of the problem and we have no right to be exempt from blame.

When we stop speaking the truth to the face, and calling the enemy of the poor, of widows, of the sick, of girls and mothers; when we stop calling the enemy of families, of development and industrialization by its true name, then we become part of the problem.

The worst of all is when the real enemies of the People, those who corrupt the youth condemning them to misery, poverty, begging and prostitution in an immensely rich country, those - those scoundrels - are the ones who pretend to label one as an "enemy". Yes, I am the enemy of the enemies of the People, I am the enemy of the murderers, of the criminals, of those who imprison the innocent, of those who have no respect or consideration for human rights because they do not fear God.

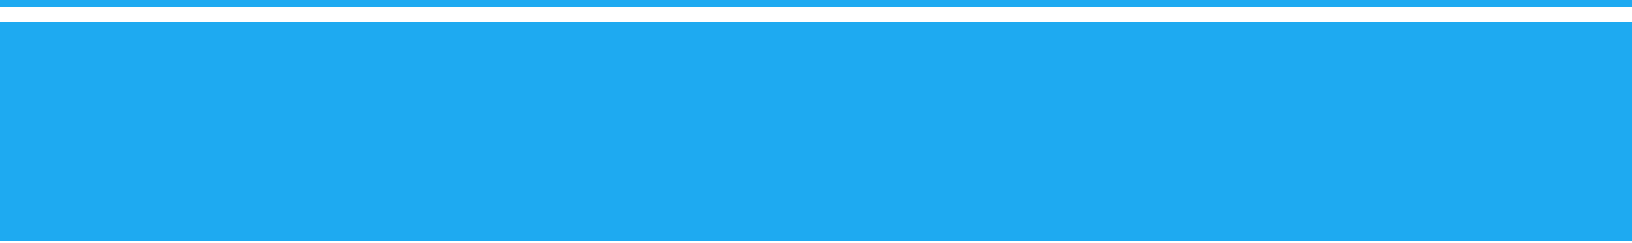

I am the enemy of those who defend the indefensible, justify the unjustifiable, and do injustice to the innocent, for yes, they can also consider me their enemy.

I am the enemy of all the corrupt, the thieves who take advantage of politics only to become rich and powerful and their wealth and power only to make others poorer and more miserable; well yes, these can consider me their enemy too.

I am the enemy of the enemies of God, of those who do not know how to do good, or tell the truth, or think of others, or do things rightly or do good even by chance, so I will never stop defending what I believe is right and with the Grace of God and by His Grace I will fight, so that the enemies of God and of the People, my enemies, always receive what they deserve and with the help of God and for His Glory.

Thank you for reading these lines.

Javier Clemente Engonga Avomo.

Sin, or sinning, is to do or to be in contact with everything that our soul rejects even though it pleases our senses.

It is to practice, to act, to relapse in that which inhibits our freedom and will. And just as we all sin, we can all stop sinning, and that is the spiritual and Christian practice.

The goal of prosperity and abundance is to make it as possible as possible to create prosperity and abundance for others.

Things that only happen to me?

A few months ago, my enemies decided to end my life, in a country so small that it barely appears on the map, but which is certainly one of the richest countries in Africa, and in the world.

My fault? Simply refusing to be a fool and an evildoer, and refusing to do evil to others, and for treating others as I would like to be treated, in short, for not being like them.

It is not that I know everything and I do not even presume to know anything, but that I do not join with fools in talking foolishness and doing evil, because I do not see under the toe of my shoes.

Maybe that's why the fools hate us so much - because we don't talk nonsense or think like them - for not thinking that violence serves any other purpose than to show the world ignorance.

Maybe that is the reason why the criminals - the corrupt ones who live day by day committing crimes while they invent accusations and create frame-ups against the innocent - go to great lengths to pretend that the just and the innocent have a common interest in their criminal ends, but that is not possible.

No, the innocent, the sane, the God-fearing, the kind, the humble cannot have any common interest with the wicked.

No, I am not perfect, but neither do I promote imperfections in anyone.

Like all or most of the inhabitants of my country, I survive every day thinking of solutions to the problems that prevent me from providing sustenance and future projections as any father and responsible for a family; as my ancestors did: we are warriors.

The ease of deprivation of liberty with which Equatorial Guinea is making itself known to the world has no regard for innocence, in fact the innocent is the first to be imprisoned without trial or sentence, that is, the guilty are those who imprison the innocent in a country that claims to have as its motto "Unity, Peace and Justice"; but do the guilty know who judges them and which authority will determine their sentences in this life, first and then at the death of the body?

Do the guilty of today, those who imprison the innocent in their countries because they feel like it, know that they are precisely the ones who have much heavier faults and typified by the penal code of many countries and by the international laws?

God sentences in silence at first, because He always decides quickly when it comes to putting the wicked in their place, and although at first it may not seem so, evil can never overcome good, not in this world created by God.

Then he does justice in a forceful way, and his wrath is relentless against all those who oppose the righteous ways, that is why the fear of God is Wisdom and obedience to his Word, is intelligence.

Everything that happens in our days and in our lives is part of a higher plan that we cannot understand because it is beyond us, that is, it is a plan that is part of a Higher Reality that we do not have to understand if we do not want to, but that affects all aspects of our unconscious life and that is, certainly, the Plan of God.

The wicked are soulless beings, who have given up their humanity in exchange for the baser feelings of the spirit, and no matter what they do, they can only do evil, and the results are never deceiving and only evil manifests itself.

They live possessed by their evil instincts, their evil desires, and they obey that appetite for evil forgetting that they are not gods, they are only human beings who should treat others as equals, but they cannot understand it, because they live like the dead, with eyes but without seeing, and with ears but without hearing, hoping to rest one day in peace not without first destroying the peace of others, but is that possible in a world where God reigns and establishes the balance?

It is not possible to do evil eternally and inconsistently, but the wicked do not understand that, because they do not understand anything.

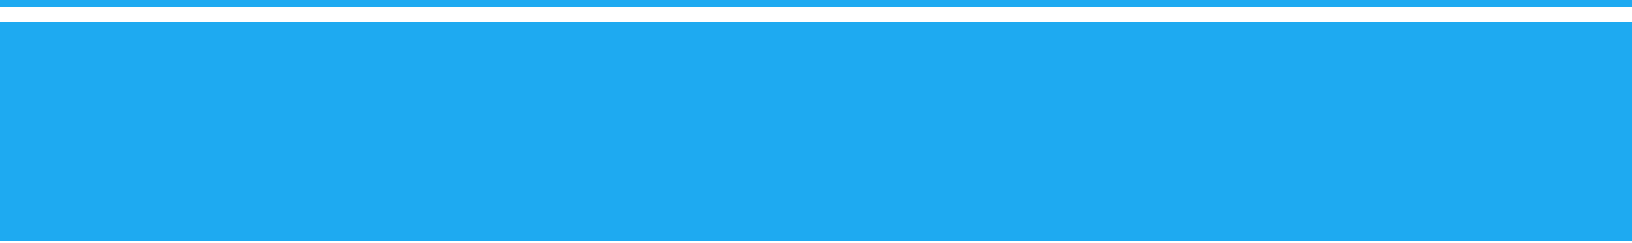

They really believe - the wicked - that they can solve all things by doing evil and in a violent way, and only perhaps - in some cases - in old age and after many failures they remember and realize that violence does not solve anything, it only creates more violence and enmity.

When you mention the name of God before the wicked, their faces become even more enraged, because they certainly believe from their malicious reality, that the name of God only serves to be taken in vain.

Overnight, the proud rose up against me, for they have long since decided that the country was theirs, and therefore - always according to that point of view proper to those who only think evil and act evil - nothing and no one in the country has the right to breathe without paying obeisance to evil, but with a servant well they were wrong.

From my youth they decided to fight against me, but I never participated neither in their reality nor in their games; I never participated neither in meetings nor in demonstrations of fools. I never defended the indefensible on any possible ground, I never sought to do only evil, but quite the opposite.

And I learned, in time, that the wicked really did not understand that power should serve to do good and not to oppress your own brothers. I learned that evil was never right or justified, and that the fault lies with all those who prefer not to be responsible in those moments and decisions where they most need to be.

The reality of evil is what you see when you take off your glasses and look carefully at everything that is happening in the world, in Africa and specifically in Equatorial Guinea, in terms of evil, corruption, lack of democratic oxygen. When things seem to be improving, the reality of evil always returns omnipresent to tarnish any progress that may have been made, it is not normal.

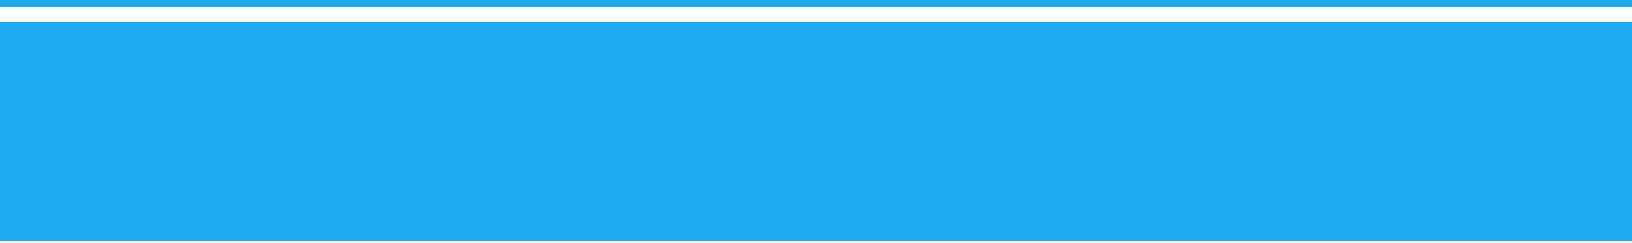

In a society and in times when we all have already assumed that the technological and digital control of the State towards everyone is not an urban legend, and yet even so, it is so easy to point, accuse, arrest and even of any pamplina just to create plots that serve only one thing: irrelevant political issues for me.

It is so easy to invent evidence in order to create set-ups against the innocent, while the victims of the guilt of the guilty are the living proof of all the evils of the guilty.

“When Martin Luther King said he had A Dream, he was talking about you and me.”

Eric Thomas

We are not our memories, for we cannot be what is past. We are our good wishes and our vision, we are our future on its way to

The Secret to Prosperity: Living Peacefully

It is good to recognize the good things one learns along the road of life in a society as particular as the Equatoguinean people are: young, intrepid, innocent, and above all, good, very good.

The Equatoguinean people have become immune to their own affliction and enjoy being intoxicated in their own shortcomings, which can be improved.

But in a country where innocent blood is easily condemned, the wise man must know how to move, if his goal is to live righteously, to achieve prosperity and to serve the People in all that is necessary but above all, as far as preserving their Freedom is concerned.

Our People - My People - Equatoguineans have forgotten their own courage, because even their self-respect has been taken away from them by their own fears, their fear to express themselves, their fear to liberate themselves, their fear to correct themselves, their fear not to imitate what is not good, their fear of the weapons that aim at the people from dusk till morning.

They have no salvation for it the wicked, for their hands, their acts, their bad decisions, their irresponsibilities, their hatred, their envy and their contempt for the Free People is their greatest Capital Sin against their own brothers, and they do not deserve to be called Equatoguineans.

They believe perhaps that nothing and nobody will ever judge their wrongdoings but that is because they do not know history nor have they read about past truths.

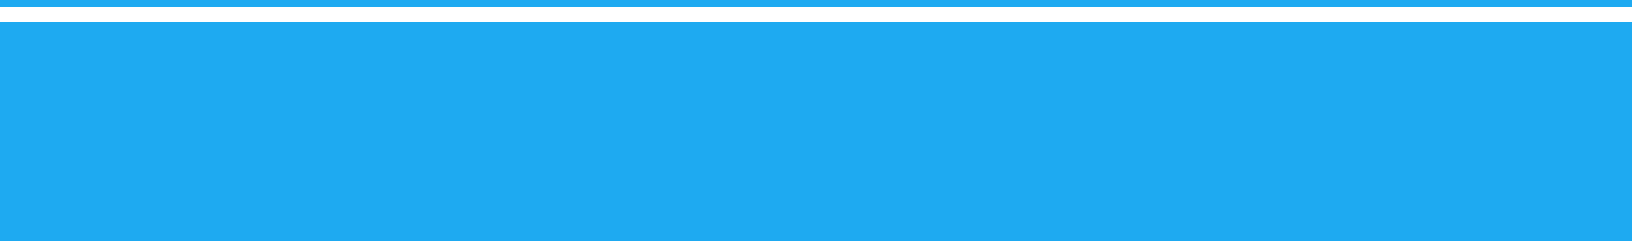

They believe - wrongly - that Jehovah Our God - tolerates them because he fears them, and they do not think that they are only given days, time and opportunity to do good but clearly it is useless, because the evil one logically cannot do good, not even by accident.

For some, life is a great party without consequences and for others, life is the cause of terrible consequences if it is not lived as they think.

Well, first of all we must understand that for each individual and collective, life is only what the mind understands. For the collective mind, life is defined in each case as the result of the experiences, mythology and sociology of the community throughout its history up to a particular point in the present in the infinite and timeless space that we perceive as "life and reality".

For the individual, the understanding of life is the great unfinished business of individual existence, which is collated with everything else, everything that fills our time and our reality.

Life and reality are only subjectivities that have no value in the spiritual reality of the soul, for the soul is timeless and immortal, like its Creator, our Creator, God.

Somehow we are here to be victorious in the race of life; to cultivate and harvest faith, to make sacrifices, to strive, and to recognize God behind all the experiences of our lives which in the end are only lessons.

It is not possible to overcome in life or achieve victory if we do not prepare ourselves properly for it.

For those who wish to overcome in life, overcome the world and achieve victory, as all those who have ever achieved it, must first overcome themselves, with discipline, studies, effort and dedication.

We must first prepare ourselves for victory, preparing our mind for what God has in store for us because of our faithfulness and effort in this life, and that is what victory is all about.

Obstacles, weaknesses, our faults or sins always tend to slow us down and hinder our spiritual perfection, but precisely for this reason they should motivate us to continue to strive even harder, for there is no victory without effort.

Everything happens for a good reason, and what happens badly is to teach us a lesson.

The path of life is the path to the Beginning, the beginning of the manifestation of the greatness of our souls, which is reflected in the relationship we adopt with the world.

If we are in struggle with the world, in that eternal conflict of unconscious misunderstanding, we cannot understand what we need or what the world needs to be perceived better, and we only see the negative.

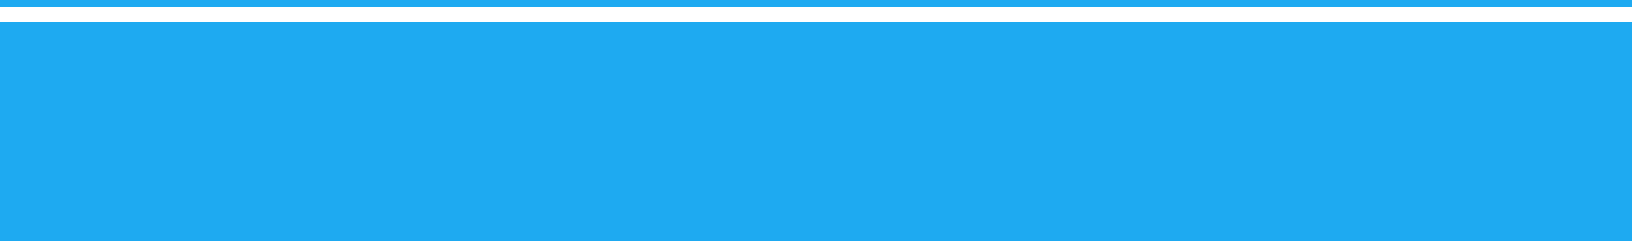

We are in struggle with the world when we do not know what we want and we self-sabotage ourselves in different ways, because we do not understand our mission or set goals in life.

If you do not know where you are going it is impossible to get to a good place, it is simple logic. If you do not know your destiny, and you live operating under the programming of a set of patterns, behaviors, data, information and knowledge that is of no use to you and that will be of no use to you in the grave, then you are lost, even if you do not know it.

To find something you first have to lose it, but important things cannot be lost just like that.

We cannot lose life, time and destiny, thinking that nothing happens and that we will have more time because time is irrelevant if it is not used properly.

Time is like an opportunity to heal the wounds of past lives, it is a bridge that never stops and has no end.

If we do not believe that we can overcome our weaknesses, if we do not mentalize ourselves in victory, the impossible becomes possible, but in a painful, negative way, for our human perception.

We call these setbacks and misfortunes in many ways, from bad fortune or luck and even blame higher beings and entities for our misfortunes.

The mind must therefore be aware of what is there, of the reality it wants to create, and of the truth that is hidden in it.

The truth of transcending from the normal to the extraordinary, from the past to the future from the present, that metamorphosis of the soul is the preparation for victory.

And victory is not only a spiritual and personal state.

Victory is always achieved first in training, in practice, in discipline and effort, especially when we want to live in accordance and in tune with the joys of the soul, everything that makes us better people.

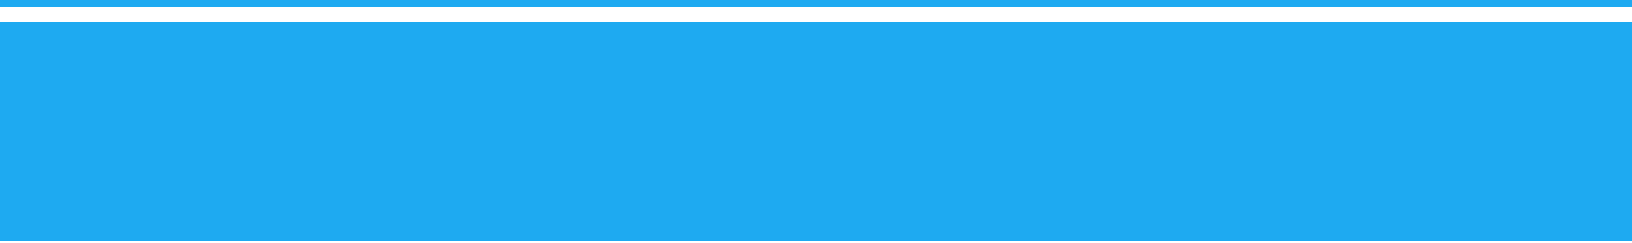

The higher the goal the more difficult the victory, even if the obstacles appear as invisible walls that prevent us from transcending to the next level, to the level we wish to reach to overcome the present and transform the reality of our lives and improve everything we want as the creators we are.

The external obstacles are less important than the mental obstacles and limitations we place on ourselves that prevent us from learning.

When you know what you want, you simply must never give up, because giving up is the true end, that is why we must always walk upward and forward.

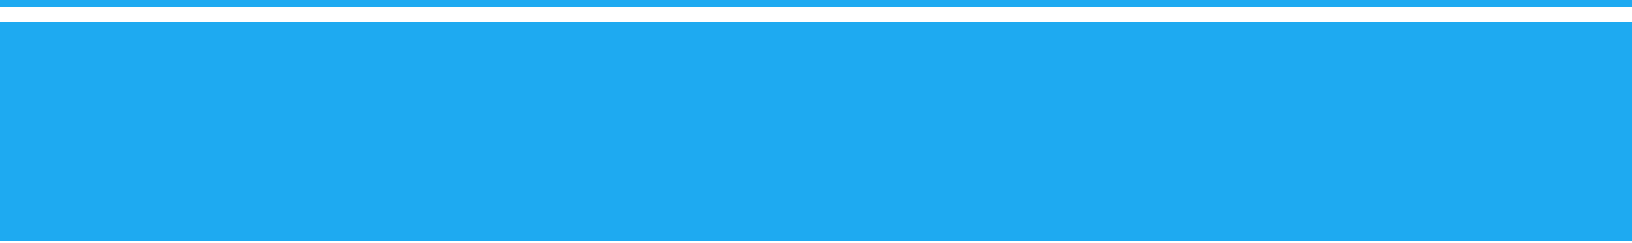

Life is not safe, the only thing that is safe is the here and now.

It does not matter so much your defects today, if you know with certainty that the only strength of your Soul and the only objective of your life is to reach the existential perfection on the objectives of your celestial Mission in the world, in life and in this material plane.

“ When we are born, we are not yet fully men, at least we are not the men we are meant to be, that we will later become.

We have two births. When is our second birth? When we become conscious, not of what we are, but of what we must become; not of what we desire, but of what we must desire to become.

After all, man is made as he makes, as he strives to be what he should be; if the youth is the product of the child, man is the product of the youth; in that sense the child is the father of man.

We do not become old when we have lived a certain number of years, but when we lose the enthusiasm of our ideal.

Saints became, not those who began, but those who continued and continued to continue; those who never tired of continuing.”

The 5 Minutes of God, Alfonso Milagro (Meditations for each day of the year)

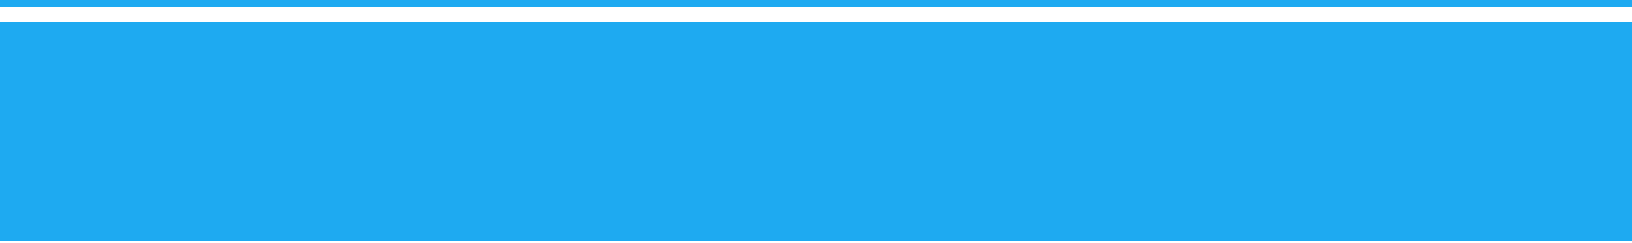

The Faithful Witness : the Soul of God

The wicked - heartless - already lost his soul doing evil, with his hands stained with blood and with hatred in his heart. That is the only thing that the wicked have in their hearts, hatred, that irrational feeling towards those who have done absolutely nothing to them.

That is why the wicked are declared enemies of God, for by their deeds you will recognize them. If their acts are always of the worst that can be expected, and their solutions only create more problems and worse consequences, then their hearts can harbor nothing but foolishness and wickedness, in perfect imbalance.

Sometimes it seems for certain that the wicked compete to see who is the worst of all; and the People become the innocent victims of arrogance and abuse of power.

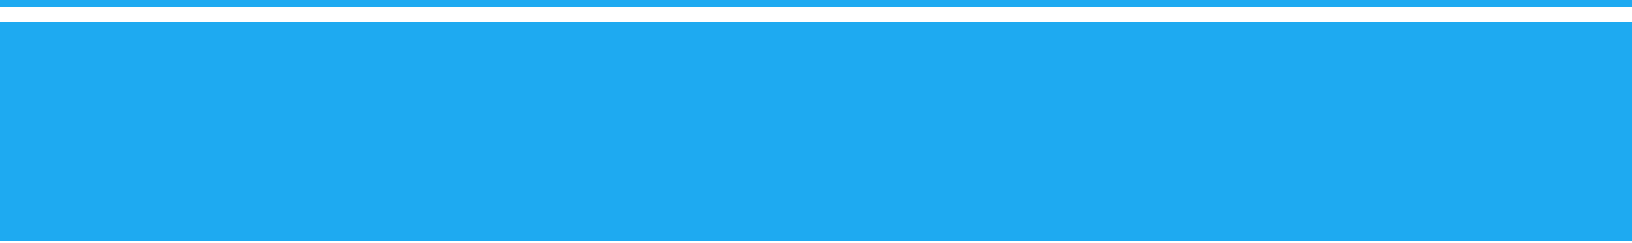

The law then begins to be interpreted according to the acquisitive and political power of the accusing finger, and incarcerated justice is exhibited as part of the problem.

It is sad, indeed, to see a country victim of its own children, who because they have no soul have decided to be demons for their brothers and sisters, and that is neither good, nor just, nor definitive: God exists, and the bad have never defeated the good.

Each one decides if he wants to serve God or the devil, the good or his capricious heart, but it is no longer worthwhile to pretend to be good when one is a devil, because God, the World and the conscience of each one are watching well.

It is no longer valid to disguise oneself with false smiles while oppressing and destroying families and lives; it is no longer valid to murder innocents and not expect to be called and to be recognized worldwide as such; no, it is no longer valid.

It is no longer valid to believe that fear can do everything because fear cannot with Jehovah-God, fear cannot with love, good, justice and balance in nature and the universe; no, because no matter how fast the wicked act doing evil while pretending to act as if they understand what justice is; God is more direct and practical: his justice does not wait.

Each one with his conscience, although the wicked no longer have that; the conscience is our faithful witness, it is the imprint of God in our existence. We are what our soul is, and with that character we walk through life.

He who has the soul of an artist paints the world with the beauty that is manifested in it. The artist only sees beauty even in misery, poverty or sadness.

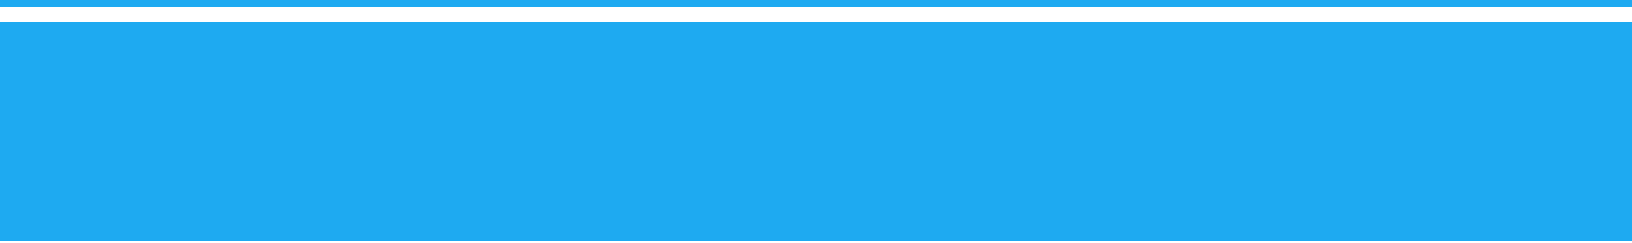

For the one who has a depraved soul, there are only two paths, although generally the wicked always stay on the same one, that of continuous evil.

The first path is that of awareness, something almost impossible for those who have decided not to respect others, nor to take into account the human rights and freedoms of all individuals; it is the path of spiritual defeat, of those who have chosen to be executioners and beasts for society, disguised as humans with the hearts of soulless beasts.

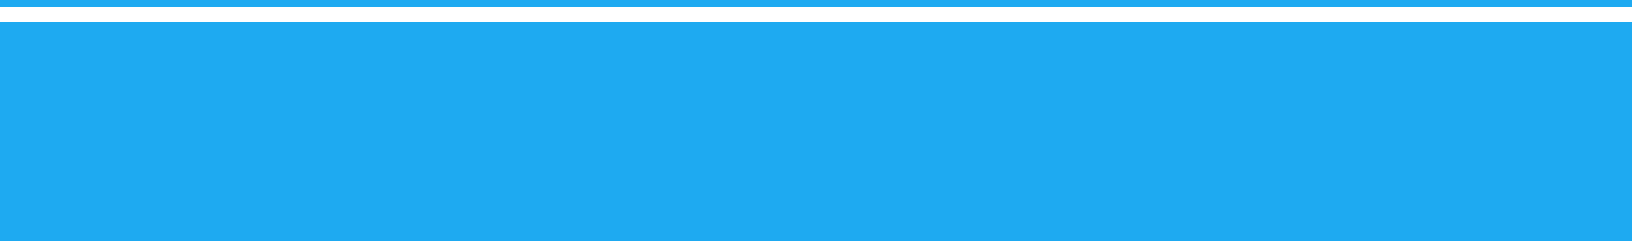

It is a path that can only be overcome by following the second path, which follows awareness and is the path of acceptance, that which is so hard to admit to those who find it difficult to change: accepting one's own mistakes.

Acceptance is a great achievement to avoid greater evils; to accept that we are not perfect and that we are still human beings; this is very difficult when we have blood on our hands, but it is not impossible when our soul has returned to the Good Way.

No matter what we have done in the past, we cannot give up losing the only thing that God has truly given us, and that is the value of our conscience, our soul, the essence of our being, above all, pursuing to do harm in any way to others as if it were the new national sport.

Unity, Peace and Justice" are impossible without respect, without love, without tolerance, and all those things that are lacking when those responsible have become the most irresponsible, and of their irresponsibilities they boast as if they were a source of pride, that is to say, without shame or embarrassment.

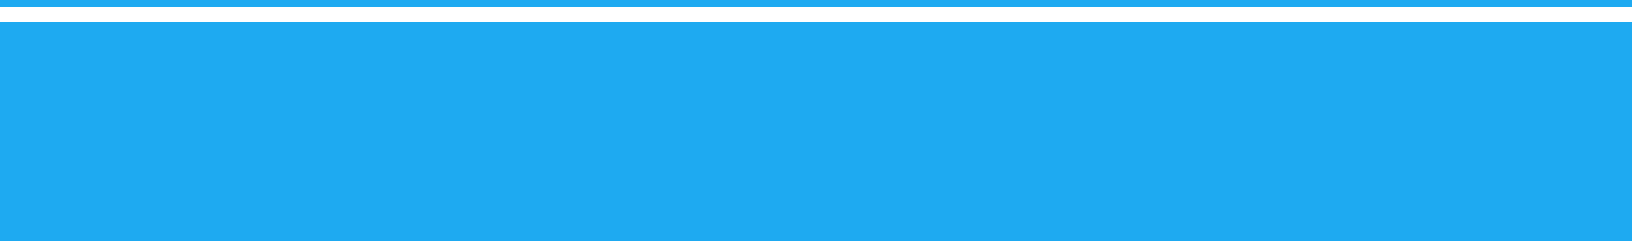

The greatness of the spirit is always humble, and shines in the souls of people who have learned to suffer with a smile, and have stopped fighting against life, becoming masters of their own existence.

And you, what do you think, that you have more problems than anyone else and less than those out there?

We all have the same problem, that we are looking for God, and that is the theme of life, a better life.

JCE

Prosperity should be our goal but never at the price of the damnation of our souls. But if in this life you don't learn it, I'm afraid that normally you would have to come back again to learn it but I think, - in my humble opinion - that there is simply no more time.

Bloodless

Blood is a river of living water that flows and allows us to connect with the invisible and imperceptible substance that allows us to "exist" in synchronicity with nature and all the elements of the universe and to perceive reality from a conscious point of view that we call rational.

Blood is important because it is completely irreplaceable, it is the fuel in which all the energy that allows us to enjoy life every day is transformed.

Our body is like a refinery that transforms everything that sustains it into its natural fuel, irreplaceable, which should not be spilled on a whim.

Without blood - without spilling blood - say the violent ones, that nothing is possible, at least, nothing to their liking.

But everything that is to the liking of the violent is reprobated by conscience and common sense, by law and good manners.

Violence only generates violence, and bloodshed is always only the beginning.

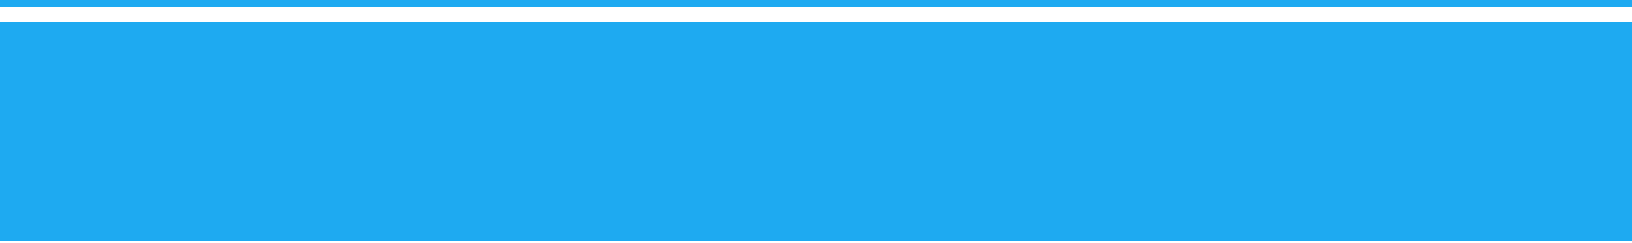

The brutes - also violent - are more foolish though the former; their ignorance is reflected in their violence, and by their brutality you will recognize them.

Because of their crimes they have already forgotten that God exists and is not a fairy tale; they no longer dream, they only have nightmares; they no longer laugh because their souls only cry, suffer, die in life, of sorrow. They see how the human being is becoming a monster who enjoys doing evil to people who do not deserve it.

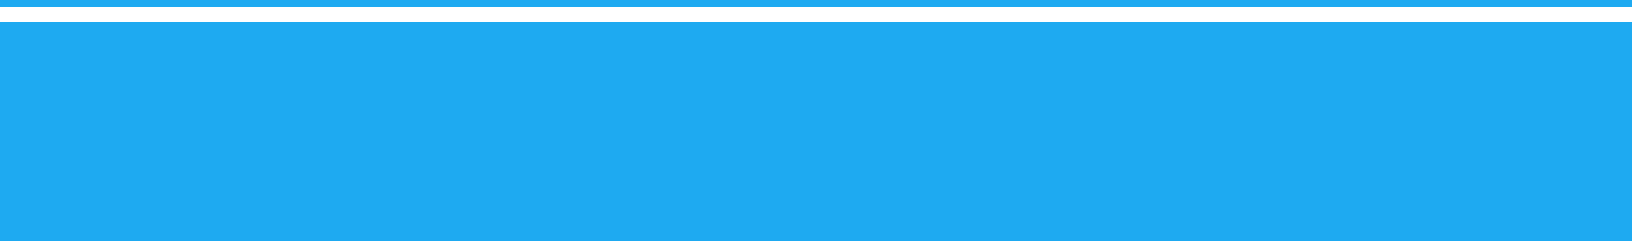

It is easy to call to arms when you have all the money to run away at any time, but cowardice goes against how brave some people are in their mouths.

That has been the reality of many African countries in not too distant times where personal ambitions have divided their peoples and created cycles of instability whose toll is still being taken in the present and will continue to be taken for generations to come;

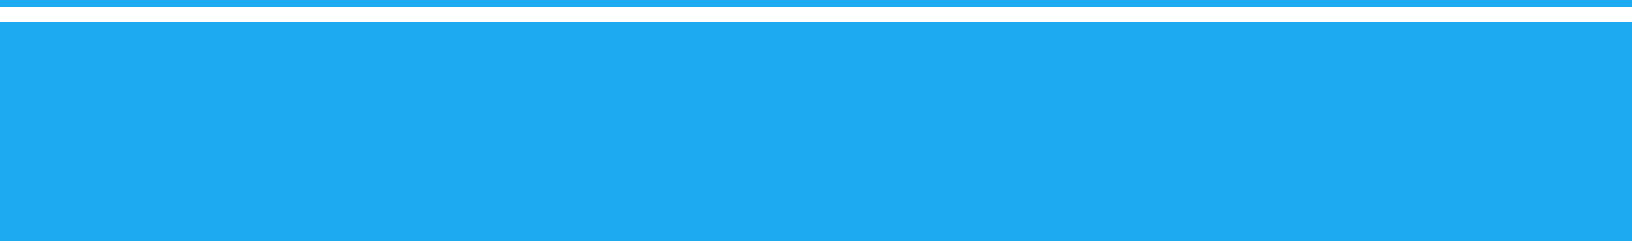

Therefore, there are mistakes to be avoided, but the wicked do not understand this when they think only of evil, of destruction, of their power.

Then, when those same ones start to analyze their crimes and wickedness, instead of becoming aware or accepting that there is something they are not understanding about this matter of life, they still tend to persist, to want to justify their wickedness with a taste of honey.

The path to our best manifestation is a journey into the depths of the universe, a journey from which we must return victorious and share with existence our perfection of spirit for eternity.

A life without effort and suffering at some point as part of the didactic process of one's own existence is a life that has failed to identify its own meaning, a life that has not been worthwhile.

The Glory of the Empire

The youth of our country is not lost, no matter how much effort and care the generations of bad examples have dedicated to it.

Much has been done, and with much dedication, to sink youth from any possibility of assuming its generational role; personified in the eternal youth of individuals who stopped being young a long time ago and who have never thought about the future, much less about the future of the youngest in the country.

Youth is a matter of thought and freedom, it is a spirit that is lost when one believes to be above others.

Any future generation is represented in the youth, the elders of tomorrow; that is the treasure to be cultivated in a society that has already assumed a certain political maturity.

It is therefore difficult to defend any attitude of criticism or struggle against youth because youth only does what it knows and also what it does not know, and in both cases it only needs good information, to give continuity to everything that is productive for the individual and society.

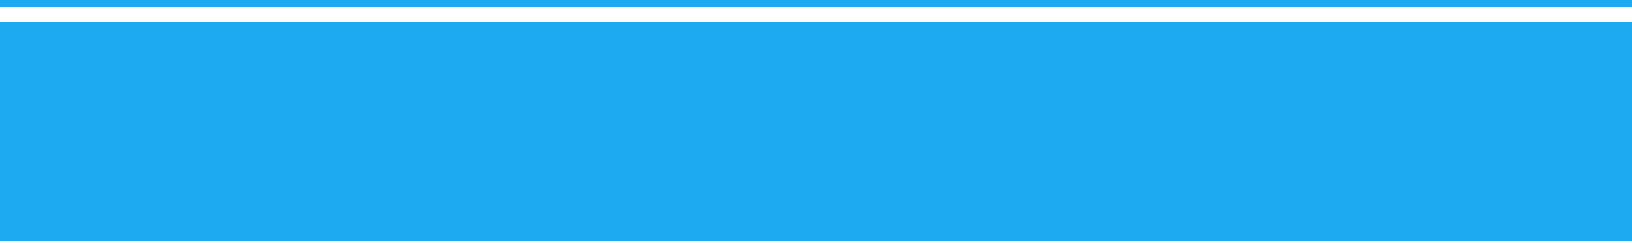

That is why the attitude towards youth cannot be that of the eternal enemy, simply because it is no longer understood or wanted to be understood, since the elders have decided to be eternally young.

The attitude and positioning of the generations must be one of alliance and not of struggle, because there is nothing new that the youth can teach the preceding generations that they do not already know beforehand, regardless of their mistakes.

Without alliance there is only fight and there should not be fights in the same house, it is not characteristic of the African culture nor of the principles that make us different from other cultures, other races.

We solve conflicts and differences with alliances, not with plots or fights or wars.

Africans sit down to solve problems, not to say bad things to each other's faces and that's it; the African is practical, systematic, seeks harmony and peace, and not disorder and conflicts.

But that spirit in Our Society has already been lost because practically "there are no more elders", as it is commonly said.

That is what we have lost by turning society into a slave of money, of oil no less, a very powerful master but one that does not rain equally for all.

And while some live presuming to be "excellent by decree", others are truly excellent in their patience, in their perseverance and in their service to others and to Jehovah-God in all that they do, and with their consciences very clean.

Believing in order to see is more characteristic of people of faith.

False Prophets

The Bible says a lot about false prophets, but it also says more than enough about true prophets.

No holy book tells us anything - however - about "false politicians" , because being a politician should not be synonymous with being a thief, a corrupt or a liar.

Tomas Sankara, for example, was a great African politician and he was neither corrupt, nor a thief nor a liar.

Mandela in South Africa, was a magnificent leader, and he was neither a thief, a liar nor a scorpion.

False politicians are those who are identified not by their achievements but by their corruption; not by their rank but by their embezzlement; not by their principles but by their capacity for oppression; not by their love but by their manifest malignity.

False politicians are the worst thing that can happen to a country when it has fallen into the wrong hands, and by their works you shall know them.

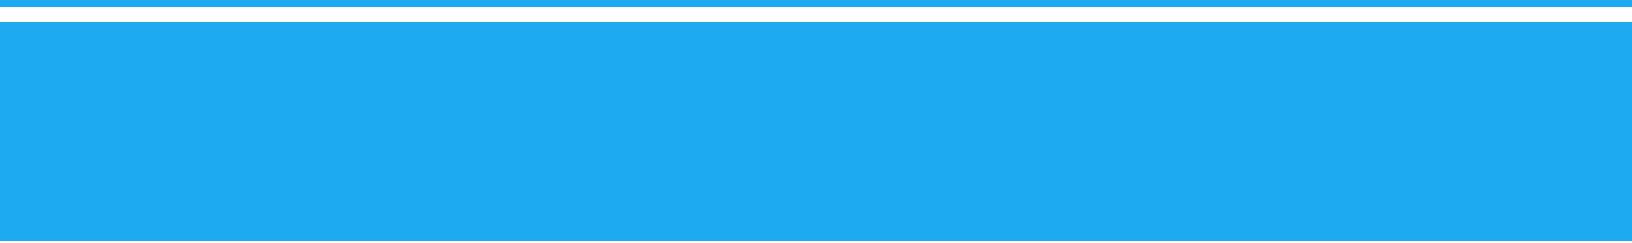

They are like a nest of crows who are only after cars and offices, and who do not think that neither the one nor the other will take them to the grave, and they console themselves with doing evil to others, and they do not know that this is more condemnation for their souls.

From time to time they remember God, when they see an evil that overcomes them or when their conscience returns to a certain normality but they easily return to evil, because they believe that it is the only thing they know how to do, but that is an error of perception, a sickness of the soul.

From time to time they even dare to go to mass, in an attempt to appease their consciences and to mock the soul, but God is not mocked by anyone and the circumstances of the wicked are always the same, adverse in every way.

Because what we do defines us, and what we think directs us; when we think before we act and if we think with conscience, we build a very safe path under our steps, that path that the evil one sees so impossible: the Straight Path.

Silence is a gift from the Creator; God speaks to us in the harmony of silence, so that we may always keep Him in mind and never forget Him.

Humility is a blessing and its reward is prosperity; always trust in the Universe for after all it knows more than you do.

The Enemies of the People

Throwing the stone and hiding the hand is the most common practice of the arrogant, of those who think they are the masters of the People.

It is their way of oppressing, of keeping their brothers - the People - always unsatisfied; it is not the task of a single person to do for the People all the good they deserve, nor is it the task of a single person to blame for the evil.

Those who do not wish to do good declare themselves to be what they are, and cannot be called anything else.

Those brothers - because we are all brothers of a single country who live together with brothers from other countries in a common space that we call by default "our country" - who have decided to ignore that it is important to treat others as one wants to be treated in order to receive the good treatment, courtesy and pleasure that one desires, are very mistaken if they think that they do any good to anyone - including themselves - by doing evil, because evil cannot do good.

The People is formed by all of us, collectively and without individualism, and the People is not the property nor is it at the service of anyone, that is what Sovereignty means.

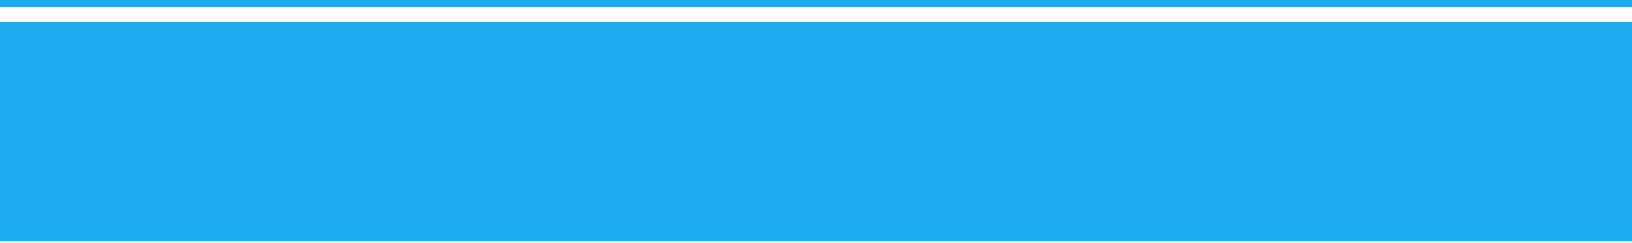

The People is at the service of neither the richest nor the poorest, because both are part of the collective.

Whoever belittles the People, is belittling himself and digging his own grave.

Being powerful, rich or poor does not give anyone reason not to recognize the value and the power of the People, and their authority over everything in matters that are proper to them.

And the People is represented by the masses - not the masses easily manipulated by their unconsciousness, their tolerance or their timidity - but the masses of the youth, those who have nothing to lose because they know that every day is a struggle they do not intend to lose.

That ambitious but upright youth, that youth that wants to be right, that youth cannot be stopped by any false prophet or any false politician, because it is an invincible youth, strong, stable, and capable of building its own future and of defending itself against adversity.

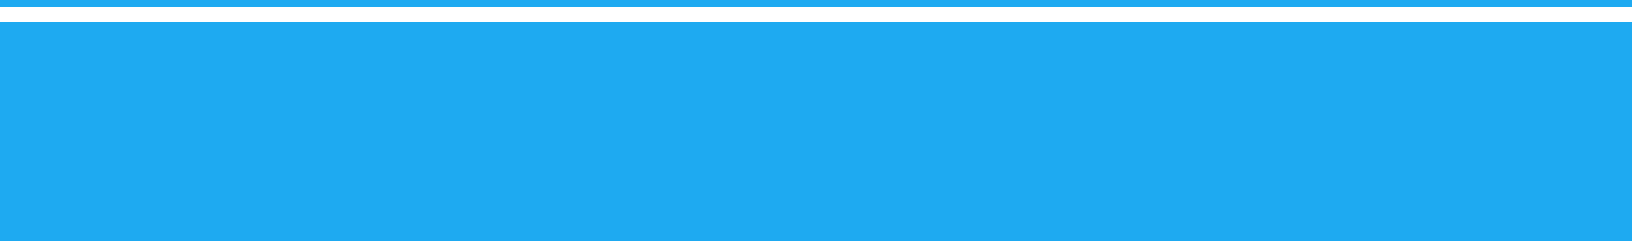

It is the youth that has survived the blows, the slander, the false accusations, the unjust jails and the conspiracies and yet has said that it will never forgive, because it will never forget, until evil ceases to be the rule of three in our society.

Whoever dares to confront this youth is condemned to fail and to be branded in the history of the country as one more evil person, or rather, one less evil person.

Death is the greatest of ignorance; it is the pinnacle of oblivion and materialism:
Death is nothing, it is an error of perception and understanding, just that.

It is true that prayer is the key to Salvation; pray always and everywhere, and in silence, it is not necessary to call much attention, because in your relationship with God it is enough to put your conscience as a witness, and let God take care of everything else.

Wanting to empower is not is not Wanting Power

To wish to do things well and the best for the country is a very common facet of Patriotism; but when this spirit, so highly valued in other times, is already conspicuous by its absence, the terms are easily confused and the value of individual actions for the common good and not only for the good of a few, is no longer considered.

The People are always the judge because they know all the parties; above all the People know who wants them and who wants Power, because the street only lies when it does not know. And when it comes to what can be done right by the People, the People know who is the one who can and who simply cannot, because it is not in their interests or they do not have the mental capacity.

The People are forgiving, it is true, but only until they remember what they are worth, and that is why the People must be treated well by putting into practice all just laws.

But can injustice create just laws? Can the deceiver speak of truths, the liar of certainties and the thief of good gifts? Can the fool exhibit his intelligence like a naked emperor in a square?

The People forget, after they have seen their wounds healed.

But how many wounds can a People endure without bursting? How many evils must it tolerate? Or is it a Holy People prevented by its virtues from breathing and programmed only to sigh?

Those who only "want the Power", must "want" it for something; that end cannot be only to "accumulate money", since not even the Egyptian pharaohs - millenary dynasties - took their treasures to the kingdom of God, to the other world. Those "things" that we accumulate without stopping, are not the key to wisdom or peace of soul and conscience; rather they are a burden, a very heavy burden for many who do not know where to hide their faults.

Why do those who only accumulate goods want Power? Why do those who do not respect neither the life nor the existence of their fellow men, their brothers want Power? Do they want Power exactly to do what good and to whom?

Because not everybody wants Power, not everybody believes that the basis of life is to accumulate money, goods and fortune. Not all people think that the material is the core of our existence.

Because if one must want Power, it must be to be able to do more things and more good for others, and not the other way around, and that is the problem of corruption in the hearts, souls and actions of those who only want Power to be able to do evil.

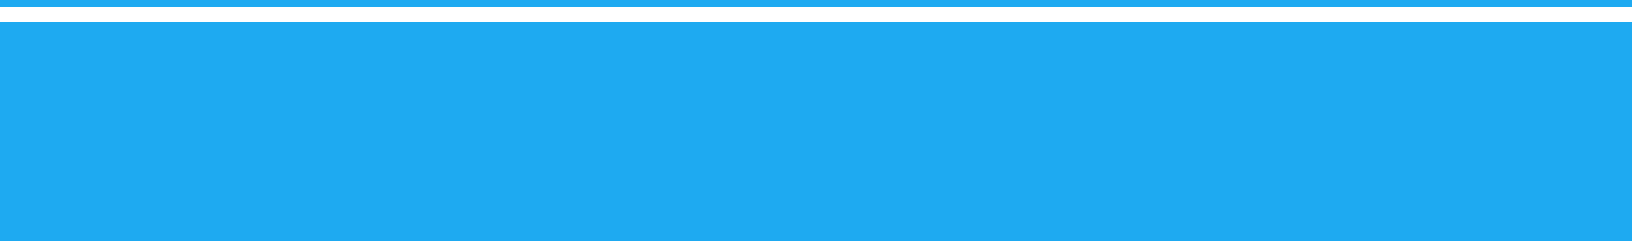

In my opinion, power is the capacity to be able to serve others by giving the best of oneself, the maximum effort, and obtaining the maximum results.

That Power is only granted by perseverance, tenacity, and faith, pillars of the construction of a path of power and independence in the most intrepid minds.

That is the power of a warrior, it is not an ambitious power, but an accurate, humble power, it is the power of knowing how to think well, act well, and take advantage of the best of what you know to achieve the maximum you desire.

It is the power that is achieved when you have conquered countless battles in the silence and solitude of life; it is the power that is acquired by being different, by being yourself.

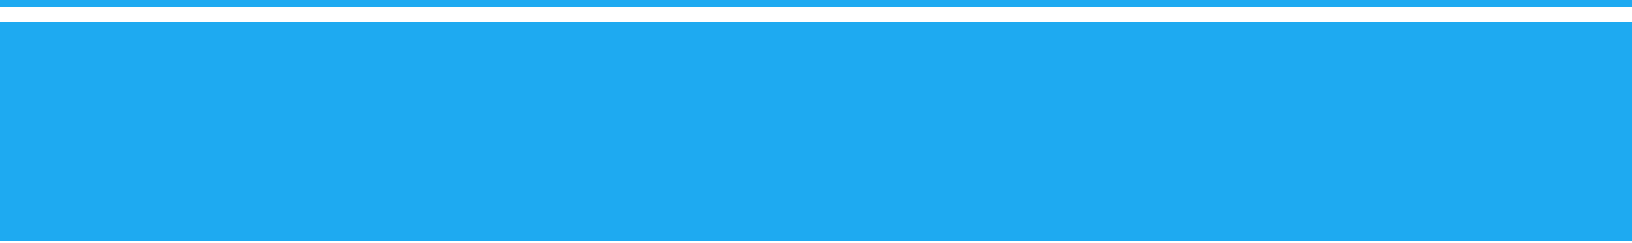

It is the power that comes with the passage of time and gray hair, the power of one's own and others' experience, the power of being an observer.

When we lose that power - or if we don't have it - it is because we have let our guard down and we don't really understand our circumstances if there is too much turbulence in our lives, and there is no life without turbulence.

Wanting is Power, is not Wanting Power, and the wicked must understand that, because in Our Country there are too many people who want to but cannot, and who do not want power, much less to oppress innocents.

They want the power to be able to do what their hearts inspire them, with their creativity and their economy, for the betterment of their country and their families. That is the power to which fair minds aspire, people who understand that a country is built with effort and not with pantomimes.

It's easy to get discouraged when we don't see the results we want ahead of us, but we only really lose when we stop, that is, when we stop trying.

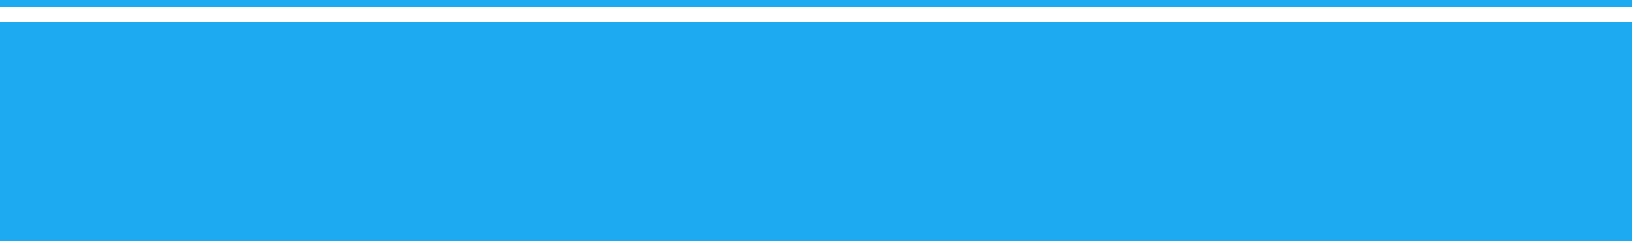

Jehovah is a wonderful, great and loving God; when we trust in God alone, we transform our reality into the world we have always dreamed of.

Definitions

1. Define your life as you want, but don't let anyone tell you that something is impossible.
2. Define your path in your own way, and learn from what you have lived, in your own way.
3. Define time as something beautiful, as a set of memories forwards and backwards.
4. Build your definition of destiny, but don't stray too far from reality.
5. Define friendship as a two-way test, nothing is ever what it seems.

6. Define death as the beginning, not the end of your film;

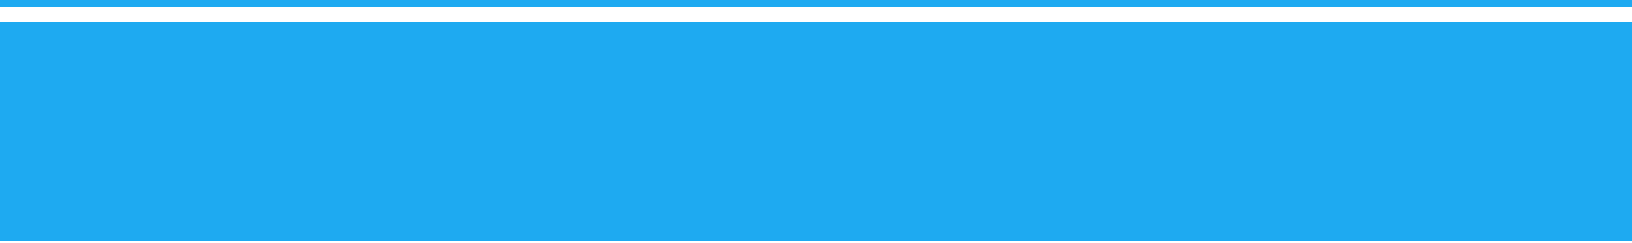

7. Define death as something avoidable, it is not written anywhere that you cannot be here forever.

8. Define God as more than an angel, and as close as an angel.

9. Defines God as judge and part, but does not condemn, only corrects.

10. Defines God as absolute wisdom that keeps us from all evil, nothing more.

When Truth is manifested in reality, the world always understands Truth: Jehovah-God is Truth.

Only with God do we become victorious in all battles.

Epilogue

Thank you for reading these lines, it has been a long time since I wrote a book in one day; I lost practice for a few months, immersed in this other reality that is living in a country that ... simply ... is what it is, a baby in diapers looking for how to grow up, and making the worst mistakes. I am not an enemy even of those who have declared war on me without knowing me and only because of my name and surnames; I understand that they see the world only in the way they can understand with their limited perception of things: "if you are not like them, you are bad", but that formula does not work in an objective world, we have to change the batteries, be more realistic.

It is easy to point out guilty people, to fabricate set-ups and plots against innocent families, to ignore any right that a human being may have as a fellow human being just because of minimal issues, but BEWARE! We must all be aware that history is looking at us, now more than ever.

And whoever wants to be the devil in the movie, do not worry and let him continue in his role of satan, since the devil never triumphs, and the victims of his crimes, the innocent People and their masses, will always manifest in their desire to see all their aspirations realized every time they are inhibited for a long time;

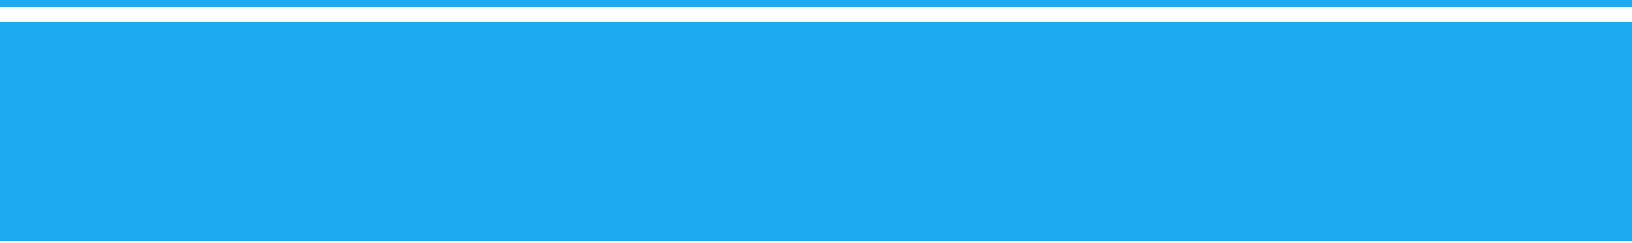

this is how the destinies of the great nations have been created and this is how the history of Our Country has been gestated since October 12, 1968 to the present day.

Thank you for reading these lines.

We must serve God with dedication and decision; not with doubts and without submission. Perhaps that is why faith is so important, because it is certainty without evidence and that simply pleases God because it demonstrates effort and endurance.

Silence is a miracle, listen to its sound and you will learn to understand the universe.

About the Author

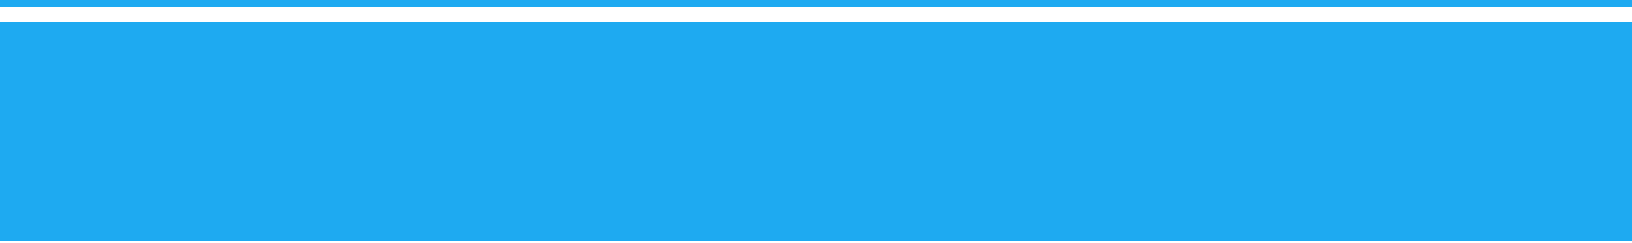

My name is Javier CLEMENTE ENGONGA AVOMO, I am an entrepreneur, author and Christian, Master in Business Administration (MBA) from the European Graduate Institute (IEP) of Spain, and with undergraduate studies in international trade and economics from Xiangtan University (Hunan 湘潭大学), People's Republic of China. In my youth, I also worked as a civil servant, as Director General of National Content in the Petroleum Industry and Inspector General of National Content in the Ministry of Mines, Industry and Energy (2010-2013), Director General of Business Promotion and Private Investment (2013-April 2015) and Director General of Trade (June 2015-2019), respectively, in Equatorial Guinea.

For me, youth is something that is lost when we become aware, when we live consciously and when we live being consistent with our actions and responsibilities. Not everyone has political ambitions, because some of us only have ambitions for peace and prosperity for all, that's all.

That is why I am a servant of Christ-God, and the blood of Christ-God protects me, and that is why I write not to forget, for in life we all forget, for forgetting is part of this great dream of life, that life that we strive to understand but can we really?

Can we really?
