

Trust is built
in small
discoveries.

These cups are not tests.

They are invitations.

You prepare. They explore.

Where your sight ends,
their senses begin.

*What's
under the cup?*

TRUST & OBSERVE

Hide a soft object
or cloth with scent.
Let them find it.

Stimulates scent memory
and problem-solving — gently.

You're not testing.
You're offering curiosity.

*Can sound
lead the way?*

TRUST & OBSERVE

Drop a dry seed
or soft object inside.
Tap once.

Activates directional hearing
and cautious approach.

Let them guide the tempo.

*What does
their paw
choose?*

TRUST & OBSERVE

Use same item,
but place the cups
on different surfaces
(paper vs fabric).

Explores discrimination through
touch and resonance.

Let variation reveal preference.

*What
changes
when you
change?*

TRUST & OBSERVE

Keep the setup,
but shift the context –
another room,
time, mood.

Environmental variation fosters
confidence and adaptability.

Same objects, new meaning.

*What can
you add
today?*

TRUST & OBSERVE

Try introducing
a safe scent:
olive oil, rosemary,
lavender.

Enhances novelty, encourages
scent work and shared attention.

The ritual grows as you do.

*What does
your hand
smell like
today?*

TRUST & OBSERVE

Rub your palms
on cloth. Hide
it under a cup.

Your scent becomes
a comfort cue.

*It's not about touch —
it's about recognition.*