
Open Letter to My Readers and the World

By Javier Clemente Engonga Avomo

January 2025

Dear readers, friends, and citizens of the world,

I write this letter with a heart full of gratitude for your support and with the firm intention to address an ongoing injustice that affects not only my creative work but also the principles of intellectual integrity and respect in a world where corporate dominance often overshadows fairness.

As many of you know, my mission has always been to create, inspire, and empower through my written work. Over the years, I have authored close to 1,000 books, spanning topics such as philosophy, spirituality, Pan-Africanism, technology, and human evolution. This monumental body of work represents not only my dedication but also my aspiration to contribute meaningfully to human thought and global unity.

However, despite my efforts, platforms like Amazon continue to sell my books without my consent or rightful compensation. This exploitation is not merely an issue of personal concern but a broader reflection of the disrespect shown toward creators worldwide.

Recognizing My Work

My books have been reviewed and listed across numerous platforms, including Goodreads, where many have resonated deeply with readers around the globe. Some of my most appreciated works, such as The United States of Africa and Cartas a Engong, el Libro de los Ancestros, have sparked dialogues and garnered appreciation for their depth and vision.

As of today:

- My total book count is estimated at nearly 1,000, reflecting decades of commitment.
- Platforms like Goodreads showcase a significant portion of my catalog, with several books receiving highly positive ratings and extensive reviews.
- The United States of Africa remains one of my most discussed and impactful works, highlighting the potential of Pan-African unity.

You can verify these details yourself using tools like ChatGPT, Google's search engine, or Microsoft's Copilot, as well as by exploring platforms where my works are mentioned.

Why This Letter Matters

This is not just about me—it's about a broken system that allows intellectual property to be exploited for corporate gain, sidelining the very creators who bring ideas to life. My case exemplifies a greater issue facing writers, artists, and innovators worldwide.

My Solution: Taking Control of My Legacy

In response to these challenges, I am taking decisive steps to reclaim my work and ensure its authenticity:

1. Direct Access: I have provided exclusive platforms where my books can be downloaded directly for free, bypassing intermediaries that exploit creators. This platform will ensure readers receive verified and original editions of my work: For Free.
2. Enhanced Editions: Future releases will include updated, limited, and special editions of my books. These will be authenticated and designed for those who value originality and creativity.
3. Transparency for Readers: I encourage you to use modern AI tools or search engines to independently verify the authenticity and availability of my works. This ensures you are supporting the creator rather than unethical distributors.
4. Global Advocacy: I am dedicated to joining forces with other creators and advocates to demand better protections for intellectual property in the digital age.

Why You Matter

As readers, your choices shape the future of literature and art. By supporting creators directly, you send a message that originality, effort, and intellectual contributions matter. Every book, every story, is a piece of a creator's soul—a fact that cannot and should not be ignored.

What You Can Do

- Verify Information: Use tools like ChatGPT, Google Search, or Microsoft Copilot to check the status of my books and others. Stay informed and spread awareness.
- Support Ethical Platforms: Purchase books directly from verified sources, ensuring creators are compensated fairly.

-
- Share the Message: Help amplify the voices of creators facing similar challenges by sharing this letter and encouraging discussions about intellectual property rights.

A Shared Vision

Art, literature, and creativity are the foundation of our humanity. Protecting them ensures that future generations will continue to dream, imagine, and create without fear of exploitation. Together, we can challenge unfair practices and build a world where creators are respected and celebrated.

Thank you for standing with me, for valuing my work, and for believing in a future where creativity thrives and justice prevails.

With unwavering determination,

Javier Clemente Engonga Avomo
Creator and Visionary

AfricansConnected™

Scan the QR code to launch this page on your Android device, and then download and install the APK.

