Dear Readers,

We started the journey with a single step and here we are today.

Not only are we priding ourselves with our second (Ghana) issue, but actually this second issue is full of inspirational design, business link within the industry, blogs, lifestyle, dynamic designs.

I always love coming out with the details, that is a collection of items that work together or artwork that further improve the quality of an entire room.

Enjoy our second edition and kindly let us know what you think.

Kindly note that your feedbacks are always welcome and important to us.

Sir David Adjaye OM OBE

Founder and Principal

Sir David Adjaye OM OBE is an award winning Ghanaian-British architect known to infuse his artistic sensibilities and ethos for community-driven projects. His ingenious use of materials, bespoke designs and visionary sensibilities have set him apart as one of the leading architects of his generation.

In 2000, David founded his own practice, Adjaye Associates, which today operates globally, with studios in Accra, London, and New York taking on projects that span the globe.

The firm's work ranges from private houses, bespoke furniture collections, product design, exhibitions, and temporary pavilions to major arts centers, civic buildings, and master plans. His largest project to date, the Smithsonian National Museum of African American History & Culture in Washington, DC opened on the National Mall in Washington DC in 2016 and was named Cultural Event of the Year by The New York Times.

In 2017, Adjaye was knighted by Queen Elizabeth II and was recognized as one of the 100 most influential people of the year by TIME Magazine. Adjaye is also a recipient of the 2021 RIBA Royal Gold Medal, considered one of the highest honors in British architecture for significant contributions to the field internationally.

In 2022, Adjaye was appointed to the Order of Merit, selected by Her Majesty the Queen, in recognition of distinguished service in his field. He is also the recipient of the World Economic Forum's 27th Annual Crystal Award, which recognizes his "leadership in serving communities, cities and the environment".

Adjaye is on the Board of Patrons for the African Futures Institute, Accra.

Ultimately, for Adjaye, architecture is “a social act” — it’s about constructing buildings that acknowledge and understand their histories, whilst creating something entirely new, in order to serve communities into their futures.
