

Intentifiers Podcast Media Kit

About the Podcast

Intentifiers explores how intention shapes action — and how that action impacts our work, relationships, and communities. Through thoughtful, human conversations, the podcast invites reflection, learning, and connection — reminding us that being human is part of how we work and live.

The Conversations

Guests come from many walks of life and share how understanding their root intentions has helped them navigate systems, make decisions, and open doors — for themselves and others. Conversations are reflective, grounded, and non-promotional, creating space for honest dialogue about work, life, and the systems we move within.

All conversations are shaped through the lens of intention and human connection, allowing space for nuance, depth, and lived experience.

About the Host

Intentifiers is hosted by Jodi Rai, an HR and organizational behaviour practitioner, educator, and facilitator whose work centres humanity, systems thinking, and intentional people practices.
