 Working Title: “The Family Business: Called to God’s Work from Genesis to Revelation”

Chapter 1: In the Beginning, God Worked

Before the first man took his first breath, before there was sin, suffering, or sweat—there was work.

“In the beginning, God created the heavens and the earth.” — Genesis 1:1

This is not just the beginning of creation—it’s the beginning of vocation. The very first image we are given of God is that of a worker, forming light, shaping land, filling seas, naming stars. And when He finishes, He calls it “very good.” (Genesis 1:31)

God, who needs nothing, chose to create. Why? Not because He lacked, but because He desired relationship and invited participation. When He formed man from the dust and breathed life into him, He did not then tell him to go lie by a lake and contemplate existence. He gave Adam a job.

“The Lord God took the man and put him in the Garden of Eden to work it and take care of it.” — Genesis 2:15

This is the first human commission—to tend the family business. The world was God’s, and Adam was invited into the management of it. Work was not a punishment; it was a privilege. Man was made in God’s image, and part of that image is creative, productive responsibility.

A Divine Pattern

Each day in Genesis 1, God brings order from chaos, fullness from void. He separates light from darkness, sea from sky, and fills them with life. Then, on the seventh day, He rests—not because He is weary, but because rest is the completion of good work.

We were meant to reflect this pattern:

- Create and cultivate
- Steward and sustain
- Rest with satisfaction

Our First Identity Was Not a Sinner—But a Worker

Before man fell, he was already assigned a role. Work was not a curse but a calling. It gave dignity, meaning, and purpose. We were created with tasks that matter—tangible evidence that we were not created to consume, but to contribute.

This calling echoes even today. It shows up in the way a child mimics a parent's work, how a craftsman takes joy in his labor, or how even the weak long to be useful. Deep inside, we know we were made to participate, not just exist.

The story of humanity doesn't begin with failure. It begins with partnership—God and man working side by side. The tragedy is that this partnership was broken. But the hope is that God is still calling us back to it.

Chapter 2: Adam's Assignment

God didn't just place Adam in a paradise—He gave him purpose. Eden wasn't a luxury resort. It was a living workshop of divine beauty and responsibility.

“The Lord God took the man and put him in the Garden of Eden to work it and take care of it.” — Genesis 2:15

Two verbs.

Work it. Take care of it.

From the very beginning, Adam was entrusted with stewardship.

He was not a passive observer of creation, but its active caretaker. He was to cultivate, prune, protect, name, and govern. Creation would respond to Adam's labor. The animals would look to him for names. The plants would grow under his tending. In short, he had a job to do—and it mattered.

Work as Worship

This assignment wasn't a burden. It was worship. Before altars, before burnt offerings, before Scripture was written—there was obedient labor. When Adam worked the garden, he wasn't just growing food. He was honoring the One who placed him there.

To work the way Adam was created to work is to echo God's own creativity and order.

- Just as God brought form from void, Adam would form rows from wilderness.
- Just as God named creation, Adam would name the animals.
- Just as God brought blessing, Adam was to be fruitful and multiply—extending Eden's peace.

God's plan was partnership, not independence. Adam's work was to reflect God's will, not replace it.

The Freedom of Boundaries

In this assignment, God gave freedom—with a boundary.

“You are free to eat from any tree in the garden; but you must not eat from the tree of the knowledge of good and evil...” — Genesis 2:16–17

God gave Adam a whole world of “yes” with one “no.” Why? Because love and trust require a choice. And responsibility—true responsibility—requires the ability to obey or disobey.

Work without boundaries becomes domination. But work within God's design becomes a sacred calling. Adam was free to lead—but only while he followed God.

What Adam’s Assignment Means for Us

Many today see work as a curse. But Adam’s first job wasn’t part of the fall. It was part of paradise.

We were made to tend something. To steward it, cultivate it, guard it. That “something” may be a garden, a home, a child, a community, or even a soul. Each task God assigns—big or small—is sacred when done in obedience.

We must ask:

- What has God assigned to me?
- What have I been placed to “work and keep”?
- Am I treating my role as worship, or just work?

Before sin entered the world, there was a job to do. And in God's eyes, it was very good.

Chapter 3: The Fall and the Broken Contract

The garden was perfect. The work was meaningful. Adam and Eve lived in communion with God and with each other. They had purpose, beauty, and the freedom to enjoy it all — with one exception.

“You must not eat from the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, for when you eat from it you will certainly die.” — Genesis 2:17

It was not a harsh command. It was a boundary. And like all good boundaries, it protected something sacred: trust.

But into this garden came a voice. Subtle. Persuasive. Not a shout of rebellion, but a whisper of doubt:

“Did God really say...?”

“You will not surely die...”

“God knows... that you will be like Him.” — Genesis 3:1–5

The Subtle Trap

Adam and Eve were not driven by hatred or defiance. They were deceived. They were seduced by a lie that has echoed through every generation since:

“There’s more if you take it for yourself.”

Pride—quiet and lurking—told them they could be more than just workers under God. They could define their own reality. Their own good and evil.

The tragedy wasn’t just that they disobeyed. It’s that they stopped trusting the One who gave them everything.

Work Cursed, Not Removed

“Cursed is the ground because of you; through painful toil you will eat food from it all the days of your life.” — Genesis 3:17

God didn’t curse Adam. He cursed the ground.

Work itself wasn’t the punishment—frustration in work was.

- Creation, once in harmony with man, would now resist.
- Sweat, once a joy of labor, became a symbol of survival.

- Tending the world would now come with thorns, weeds, and weariness.

The assignment remained, but the ease was gone. Our relationship with work changed, just as our relationship with God changed.

Yet God Still Reached Out

Even in this moment of failure, God came looking:

“Where are you?” — Genesis 3:9

He knew where they were. But He wanted them to know how far they had wandered. And even then, He clothed them (Genesis 3:21). He gave them life. He gave them a future. Yes, they would leave the garden—but not His story.

Even His judgment held hope:

“He will crush your head, and you will strike His heel.” — Genesis 3:15

This was the first whisper of redemption. One day, a descendant of Eve would crush the deceiver’s head—though not without cost. That promise would take centuries to unfold, but it began that day.

What This Means for Us

We all feel the ripple of that fall.

- We second-guess God’s voice.
- We try to prove ourselves without Him.
- We chase pride disguised as purpose.
- We struggle with work that feels more like toil than joy.

But God hasn’t abandoned us. His plan to restore the family business was set in motion even as Adam and Eve walked out of Eden.

We aren’t doomed by our weaknesses. But we must recognize them. Pride still lurks. Deception still whispers. And trust in God—daily, humble, obedient trust—is still the only way back to what we were made for.

Chapter 4: Noah — Building Through Obedience

As generations passed, mankind multiplied—but so did sin. The world God made was now filled with violence, selfishness, and corruption. People still worked, built, farmed, and governed—but they no longer did so under God’s direction.

“The Lord saw how great the wickedness of the human race had become... and that every inclination of the thoughts of the human heart was only evil all the time.” — Genesis 6:5

In the midst of this darkness, one man stood out. Not because he was perfect, but because he walked with God.

“But Noah found favor in the eyes of the Lord... Noah was a righteous man, blameless among the people of his time, and he walked faithfully with God.” — Genesis 6:8–9

A New Kind of Work

God gave Noah an assignment that must have seemed impossible:

“So make yourself an ark...” — Genesis 6:14

It wasn’t a short project. It wasn’t easy. It wasn’t glamorous.

It was obedient work—the kind that takes decades and faith and ridicule. There was no rain. No proof. Just instructions.

Noah didn’t build the ark because he understood everything. He built it because he trusted the One who gave the blueprint.

Faith that Works

“By faith Noah... in holy fear built an ark to save his family.” — Hebrews 11:7

Faith isn’t a feeling. It’s obedience in motion. Noah showed his belief not by talking about God’s warning—but by picking up a hammer.

Noah’s hands and heart were aligned. He worked with God. He didn’t try to improve the plan or cut corners. He simply followed through.

Even when the world mocked him, Noah stayed the course.

God Still Works Through Workers

God could have saved Noah with a snap of His fingers. But He didn't. He gave him a task—a big one—and used that obedience to preserve the future.

That's how God often works. He calls people to tasks that don't make sense until much later. He uses willing workers to carry out His purposes.

- Noah's work saved a remnant.
- His trust preserved a future.
- His obedience laid the foundation for a new beginning.

What Does This Mean for Us?

Sometimes, God gives us a job that feels too big—or too strange. He asks us to trust Him when the skies are clear and everyone else is laughing.

But like Noah, we are called to build what God commands, not what the world approves.

- It may be raising children in truth.
- Serving the weak without applause.
- Starting something small and steady that takes years to grow.
- Living righteously when no one else seems to.

Obedience is not about dramatic results. It's about faithfulness.

And faithfulness often looks like slow, steady building when no one else sees the storm coming.

God is still looking for workers like Noah—people who will walk with Him, listen, and obey.

Chapter 5: Abraham — The Call to Walk and Believe

If Noah shows us what it means to build in obedience, Abraham shows us what it means to walk in faith. With Noah, God gave blueprints. With Abraham, He gave a command with no map.

“Go from your country, your people and your father’s household to the land I will show you.” — Genesis 12:1

There was no visible ark to build. No flood on the horizon. Just a call:

Leave what you know. Trust where I lead.

God’s Work Begins with Trust

Abraham (then Abram) was not given a detailed plan. He was given a relationship. God made promises—land, descendants, and blessing—and Abraham had to decide if God was trustworthy enough to follow without seeing.

“So Abram went, as the Lord had told him...” — Genesis 12:4

He packed up everything—not just his belongings, but his identity—and walked into the unknown. His obedience wasn’t rooted in understanding, but in trusting the One who called him.

This is the essence of faith-based work:

We don’t need to know the outcome. We need to know the One who assigns the task.

A Journey of Faith, Not Perfection

Abraham’s walk wasn’t flawless. He made mistakes—big ones. He lied to protect himself. He wavered and tried to fulfill God’s promise through human means (Genesis 16). He questioned, doubted, laughed, and even tried to take matters into his own hands.

But he kept walking.

“He did not waver through unbelief regarding the promise of God, but was strengthened in his faith and gave glory to God...” — Romans 4:20

This tells us something important: Faith doesn’t mean never stumbling. It means never quitting.

Faith That Produces Action

At one point, God tested Abraham in a way that defies logic and comfort:

“Take your son, your only son... and sacrifice him...” — Genesis 22:2

This wasn't just about Isaac. It was about Abraham's trust in God's goodness even when the command seemed unbearable. And as Abraham raised the knife, God stopped him and provided a ram.

“Now I know that you fear God...” — Genesis 22:12

Faith doesn't just believe God exists. It acts like He knows best.

What Does This Mean for Us?

We are all on a journey—leaving behind what is safe and familiar, following a God we cannot see, and trusting that His promises are worth it.

- Sometimes our work won't feel like progress.
- Sometimes our path will wind and falter.
- But if God has called us, we are to keep walking.

Faith is not a passive belief. It's active movement toward what God has spoken.

Like Abraham, we're not just called to believe God exists. We're called to believe He is faithful—even when His promises take time, and His instructions require sacrifice.

We may not see the whole map. But we know the One who writes it. And that is enough to keep walking.

Chapter 6: Joseph — Working in Captivity

If Abraham’s story teaches us to walk by faith, Joseph’s life shows us how to work by faith, even when our circumstances are unfair, painful, or confusing.

Joseph was the favored son of Jacob, gifted with dreams and a vision of leadership. But before he ever led anyone, he was sold, enslaved, and forgotten.

His journey went from coat to pit... from slave to prisoner... from dreamer to servant.

And yet—he kept working.

“The Lord was with Joseph so that he prospered, and he lived in the house of his Egyptian master.” — Genesis 39:2

Faithful in the Low Places

Joseph had every reason to be bitter. He was wronged by his brothers, sold like property, falsely accused, and thrown in jail. Yet at every stage, he chose to work as if God were still in control.

- In Potiphar’s house, he served with integrity.
- In prison, he managed daily affairs and cared for others.
- Even when forgotten by men, he remained remembered by God.

“Whatever he did, the Lord made it succeed.” — Genesis 39:23

Joseph’s faith wasn’t just in dreams. It was in doing today’s task well, even in chains.

Gifts That Don’t Disappear

Even in prison, Joseph’s gifts continued to function. He interpreted dreams. He listened. He spoke with wisdom.

Our environment doesn’t cancel God’s gifts in us.

Even when we feel stuck, limited, or overlooked, God can still use what He has placed in us.

Joseph never stopped using what God had given him—even when no one seemed to care.

Eventually, Pharaoh called. And in a moment, Joseph was elevated from prisoner to prime minister.

“Then Pharaoh said to Joseph... ‘You shall be over my house, and all my people shall order themselves as you command.’” — Genesis 41:40

Work That Saves Others

Joseph’s leadership didn’t just benefit Egypt. It saved nations. His integrity and preparation spared countless lives during famine—including the very brothers who betrayed him.

“You meant evil against me, but God meant it for good, to bring it about that many people should be kept alive.” — Genesis 50:20

This is what kingdom work looks like. It restores, redeems, and preserves. It may take time. It may hurt. But in God’s hands, our labor bears fruit.

What This Means for Us

Not every assignment will be glamorous. You may be working in a place that feels like a prison. You may feel unseen, unpromoted, or unfairly treated.

But your faithfulness still matters.

- You may be preparing for something bigger.
- You may be protecting someone who hasn’t arrived yet.
- You may be placed where no one else can serve like you.

Joseph didn’t wait to become powerful to start being faithful. He honored God where he was, not just where he hoped to be.

Work—even in the shadows—is still part of the family business.

Chapter 7: Moses — Called at the Burning Bush

By the time God called Moses, he was 80 years old and living in exile. Once a prince in Egypt, now a shepherd in the wilderness, Moses probably thought his best days were behind him.

But God thought differently.

“God called to him from within the bush, ‘Moses! Moses!’ And Moses said, ‘Here I am.’”
— Exodus 3:4

This is how God often calls workers: not when they’re looking to be called, but when they’re simply doing the work in front of them.

Moses was tending sheep—a humble job—but God had a greater task waiting.

God Uses Unlikely People

Moses had every reason to decline the assignment. He was a fugitive. He had failed before. He had doubts, insecurities, and a speech impediment.

“Who am I that I should go to Pharaoh and bring the Israelites out of Egypt?” —
Exodus 3:11

God didn’t answer Moses with a résumé. He answered with a promise:

“I will be with you.” — Exodus 3:12

The call wasn’t based on Moses’ ability, but on God’s presence.

This is true for all of us. God doesn’t wait until we feel qualified. He calls us to work—and qualifies us through the call.

Signs and Obedience

God gave Moses signs: a staff that turned to a snake, a hand that became leprous and was healed. These signs weren’t for show—they were tools for the task.

Even so, Moses hesitated.

“Please send someone else.” — Exodus 4:13

But God didn't let go. He gave Moses help—his brother Aaron—and a mission: go to Pharaoh, speak for Me, and lead My people.

What Moses saw as weakness, God saw as opportunity. The same staff that once herded sheep would now confront kings and part seas.

The Power of Reluctant Obedience

Moses wasn't bold like Joseph. He didn't have Abraham's blind faith. But he went anyway.

He stood before Pharaoh. He witnessed plagues. He saw the impossible become possible. And he became the man who spoke with God as a friend speaks to a friend (Exodus 33:11).

His work wasn't just physical—it was deeply spiritual. He interceded, guided, judged, taught, and led.

He wasn't perfect—but he was faithful.

What This Means for Us

You may feel like you're too old, too broken, or too ordinary.

You may have failed before.

You may think your time has passed.

But God is not finished.

- He calls the overlooked.
- He equips the insecure.
- He sends the hesitant.
- And He stays with those who obey.

You may be tending sheep right now—but that staff in your hand may become a tool of deliverance when God calls your name.

When the burning bush appears—however it may look in your life—the question isn't whether you're ready. The question is:

Will you say, "Here I am"?

Chapter 7.a: When the Talent Isn't Obvious

Some people seem born to lead, to teach, to build, to serve. Their gifts are visible, affirmed, and welcomed. But what about the rest of us?

What about the one who stutters, the one who doubts, the one who's been overlooked—even by their own family?

“The Lord does not look at the things people look at. People look at the outward appearance, but the Lord looks at the heart.” — 1 Samuel 16:7

God doesn't just use obvious talent. In fact, He often seems to prefer those who feel least equipped.

Moses: The Insecure Speaker

When God called Moses, he didn't feel ready.

“I am slow of speech and tongue.” — Exodus 4:10

Most scholars believe Moses may have had a speech impediment or severe anxiety. Either way, he was convinced that speaking—let alone speaking to Pharaoh—was beyond him.

But God saw a deliverer, not a defect.

Moses didn't recognize the preparation of 40 years in the desert. But God had shaped him in obscurity for something public.

Joseph: The Brash Dreamer

Joseph's dreams were true—but his attitude early on may have been arrogant. His brothers didn't hate him just because he was favored—they resented his apparent pride.

“Listen to this dream I had...” — Genesis 37:6

Yet God used even this flawed young man, refining his character in prisons and foreign courts until his talent—wisdom, management, and mercy—was matured and useful.

Joseph didn't see the path clearly. But God was preparing him through suffering for a purpose Joseph couldn't yet understand.

David: The Forgotten Son

When the prophet Samuel came to anoint the next king, David wasn't even invited to the lineup.

"There is still the youngest... he is tending the sheep." — 1 Samuel 16:11

No one—perhaps not even David himself—saw him as king material. But while others sought warriors or strong leaders, God sought a heart that beat in rhythm with His.

The slingshot skill, the courage, the poetic soul—these had been growing quietly in the field while no one watched.

Today: Called to More Than What You See

The New Testament affirms that all believers are given gifts (1 Corinthians 12, Romans 12). These are to be used—not buried—for the Kingdom.

But what happens when God calls us to something we don't feel gifted for?

What if:

- You're called to speak but you fear public words?
- You're asked to lead but feel more comfortable in the background?
- You sense a prompting to serve somewhere you feel wholly unqualified?

Here's the truth: God often equips after He calls, not before.

Sometimes your talent has been buried by fear. Sometimes it's been shaped in secret. And sometimes—it's simply not a "talent" at all, but an act of obedience where God shows His strength through your weakness (2 Corinthians 12:9).

What This Means for Us

Don't wait until you feel ready.

Don't assume others are more qualified because they seem gifted.

Don't bury what's been given to you out of fear.

Instead, be willing. Be watchful. And be ready to step into uncomfortable, stretching, unlikely places.

Because if there's one thing Scripture proves over and over—it's this:

God does not call the qualified. He qualifies the called.

Chapter 8: Israel's Job Description

After generations of slavery, God delivered the Israelites with a mighty hand—plagues, parted seas, and pillars of fire. But freedom was not the finish line. It was the starting point.

God didn't just rescue Israel from something—He rescued them for something.

“Now if you obey me fully and keep my covenant, then out of all nations you will be my treasured possession... You will be for me a kingdom of priests and a holy nation.” — Exodus 19:5–6

This was their job description:

- Treasured by God
- Set apart from other nations
- Priestly in function—representing God to the world

Israel's calling wasn't just about land. It was about mission.

A Nation Set Apart

God didn't ask them to earn their salvation—He had already rescued them. But now He gave them a framework to live by: the Law. Not as a burden, but as a way to walk with God and reflect His character.

Every command had a purpose:

- Justice in business
- Mercy toward the poor
- Purity in worship
- Rest in the Sabbath
- Reverence in relationships

Their way of life was to show the world what it looked like to live under God's rule.

“Observe them carefully, for this will show your wisdom and understanding to the nations...” — Deuteronomy 4:6

They were to be a light, a standard, a model of what humanity could be when aligned with heaven.

Assigned to Build and Maintain

God gave very specific instructions for His tabernacle—the center of worship and national identity. And He gifted certain individuals with the skill to build it:

“See, I have chosen Bezalel... and I have filled him with the Spirit of God, with wisdom, with understanding, with knowledge and with all kinds of skills...” — Exodus 31:2–3

This was holy work. Creative work. Worship through craftsmanship. The priests had duties. The artisans had purpose. The Levites had roles. Everyone had something to do.

The family business was back in motion.

The Gift of Rest

Alongside all this labor came a command not to neglect: Sabbath.

“Six days you shall labor and do all your work, but the seventh day is a sabbath to the Lord your God.” — Exodus 20:9–10

God wove rest into the rhythm of work. Why? Because the job He gave was not about burnout or self-importance. It was about trust—believing that God would sustain them, even when they stopped to breathe.

Sabbath wasn't laziness. It was holy surrender.

What This Means for Us

Israel's story shows that being called by God is not just about being rescued—it's about being repurposed.

- We are saved to serve.
- We are set free to shine.
- We are given laws and gifts, not to weigh us down, but to show the world what the Kingdom of God looks like.

Like Israel, the Church today is a kingdom of priests (1 Peter 2:9).
We have a job to do.

It's not just about getting to the Promised Land.
It's about showing the world who God is along the way.

Chapter 9: Joshua to Judges — Fulfilling the Mission or Failing the Call?

After years in the wilderness, the Israelites stood at the threshold of the Promised Land. God had delivered them from Egypt, formed them in the desert, and prepared them for a purpose: to establish a holy nation in a strategic land where God would dwell among His people.

But entry into the land came with an assignment.

“Be strong and very courageous. Be careful to obey all the law my servant Moses gave you... Then you will be prosperous and successful.” — Joshua 1:7–8

Their mission was clear:

- Obey God.
- Drive out the nations that practiced detestable things.
- Establish a society centered on God's presence and laws.

It was a divine opportunity — and a test.

The Land Was More Than Geography

Canaan wasn't just a location. It was God's platform — a crossroads of civilization where the surrounding nations would watch, observe, and learn.

Israel was meant to demonstrate what it looked like for a people to live in covenant with the one true God. Their purity, justice, and worship were to draw others to Yahweh.

But obedience was essential. Partial faithfulness would not do.

“Do not intermarry with them... for they will turn your children away from following me to serve other gods.” — Deuteronomy 7:3–4

God's command to clear the land wasn't about ethnic dominance. It was about spiritual protection and preserving Israel's role in God's redemptive plan.

Early Success, Fading Faith

Under Joshua's leadership, the Israelites began well. They conquered Jericho, divided the land, and renewed their covenant with God.

But obedience faded. They failed to finish the job. They allowed some nations to remain —often for convenience, wealth, or fear.

“Yet you have disobeyed me. Why have you done this? Therefore... they will become traps for you, and their gods will become snares to you.” — Judges 2:2–3

This compromise became the root of Israel’s spiritual collapse. The surrounding nations were not neutral. They were carriers of idolatry, immorality, and false worship. And soon, Israel began to look like the very people they were meant to replace.

The Cycle of Judges

The book of Judges tells the tragic pattern:

1. Israel sins and abandons God.
2. God allows them to be oppressed.
3. They cry out in distress.
4. God raises a judge to rescue them.
5. Peace returns—briefly.
6. The cycle repeats.

Each time, they forgot their purpose. They worked the land but ignored the covenant. They lived in the promise but failed to walk in the assignment.

“In those days there was no king in Israel; everyone did what was right in his own eyes.”
— Judges 21:25

They had the land. But they lost the mission.

What This Means for Us

The story of Joshua to Judges is a warning and a mirror.

- God may open doors for you—but keeping them open requires obedience.
- Starting well is not the same as finishing faithfully.
- Living in God’s blessings is different than living out His purpose.

Like Israel, we've been given a task in a land not our own. We are meant to show the world what it looks like to be set apart, Spirit-led, and wholly devoted.

The land is not the goal. The mission is.

We must ask:

Are we conquering comfort zones but compromising convictions?

Are we building a life but abandoning the assignment?

God's call is not just to inherit His promises, but to embody them—fully, faithfully, and without compromise.

Chapter 8.a: The Sabbath — A Sign of Trust and Obedience

Of all the commands God gave to Israel, few are as misunderstood—or as overlooked today—as the Sabbath. To many, it sounds like a day off. To others, a legalistic relic. But in truth, the Sabbath was—and remains—a spiritual principle of profound significance.

“Remember the Sabbath day by keeping it holy... On it you shall not do any work... For in six days the Lord made the heavens and the earth... but He rested on the seventh day.”
— Exodus 20:8–11

The command isn't just about stopping. It's about trusting.

A Weekly Declaration of Faith

To rest one day a week in an agricultural society—where survival depended on labor—was a radical act of faith. The Sabbath said to the world:

“We trust God to provide even when we pause.”

It was also a reminder:

- That work is good, but not ultimate.
- That man is not a machine.
- That God is still King, even when we rest.

Just as tithing declared that the first of one's wealth belongs to God, Sabbath declared that the first of one's time also belongs to Him.

A Covenant Sign

The Sabbath was more than a suggestion. It was a covenant marker—a visible sign of Israel's relationship with the Lord.

“The Israelites are to observe the Sabbath... as a lasting covenant. It will be a sign between me and the Israelites forever.” — Exodus 31:16–17

It stood as a test of faithfulness. Not because God needed rest—but because He wanted His people to remember whose work they were doing and who provided for them.

This was why, when the Israelites failed to honor the Sabbath, God took it personally.

“They kept defiling my Sabbaths. Then I resolved to pour out my wrath on them...” — Ezekiel 20:13

“The land enjoyed its Sabbath rests all the time of its desolation...” — 2 Chronicles 36:21

Their exile was not just political—it was spiritual dislocation, in part because they had ignored this rhythm of dependence and reverence.

The Sabbath for Christians Today

We are no longer under the Law of Moses, but the principle of Sabbath remains. Jesus said:

“The Sabbath was made for man, not man for the Sabbath.” — Mark 2:27

He didn’t abolish its meaning. He restored it.

In Christ, we find our true rest (Hebrews 4:9–11). Yet the discipline of Sabbath still teaches us:

- To stop striving and start trusting.
- To turn our focus from production to presence.
- To reset our hearts, not just our calendars.

We no longer observe a Sabbath day out of obligation—but we still desperately need its rhythm. Not to gain God’s favor, but to live like people who already have it.

What This Means for Us

We live in a world that worships hustle and hurries past reflection. But God's people are called to live differently.

Sabbath is a defiant act of faith in an anxious age.

- It says, “I am not defined by my output.”
- It says, “God is working even when I’m not.”
- It says, “My rest is worship.”

Israel ignored this, and it cost them dearly. Let us not make the same mistake.

Sabbath isn't just about ceasing work.
It's about remembering who we work for.

Chapter 10: Kings, Prophets, and Purposes Missed

The time of the judges was marked by instability, idolatry, and moral decline. The people grew restless. They looked around at other nations and decided they wanted a king—a human leader to go before them in battle, to organize their lives, to give them security.

“Now appoint a king to lead us, such as all the other nations have.” — 1 Samuel 8:5

This was not just a rejection of their current system. It was, as God told Samuel, a rejection of God Himself as their king.

The Rise of the Kings

God granted their request, but not without warning.

“You shall surely set a king over you... but he must not acquire many horses... or take many wives... or accumulate large amounts of silver and gold.” — Deuteronomy 17:15–17

God laid out clear boundaries for kingship, anticipating the very weaknesses that would bring many of them down.

Saul was chosen first—tall, impressive, and popular. But he lacked obedience and humility. When pressed, he trusted in ritual more than relationship and acted without God’s guidance. His reign was marked by insecurity and disobedience.

David, the youngest son of Jesse, was a surprise choice. A shepherd and musician, not a warrior or statesman. But God said:

“Man looks at the outward appearance, but the Lord looks at the heart.” — 1 Samuel 16:7

David's heart for God made him Israel’s greatest king. He failed, yes—but he repented. And he led with passion and worship, desiring to build a house for the Lord.

Solomon, David’s son, started even better. He asked for wisdom, built the temple, and led Israel into a golden age of wealth and fame. But his heart drifted. He multiplied wives, made foreign alliances, and introduced idolatry to the very city where God’s name dwelled.

The Divided Kingdom

After Solomon's death, the kingdom split in two:

- Israel (Northern Kingdom) followed Jeroboam and plunged into idol worship almost immediately.
- Judah (Southern Kingdom) kept the temple but slowly spiraled into the same sins.

Both kingdoms had moments of revival—kings like Hezekiah and Josiah in Judah tried to turn the nation back—but the decline was steady. Wealth increased. Injustice grew. The poor were neglected. The Sabbath was ignored. The covenant was forgotten.

The people still performed religious rituals. But their hearts were far from God.

“These people come near to me with their mouth and honor me with their lips, but their hearts are far from me...” — Isaiah 29:13

The Prophets Speak

God sent prophets—not fortune-tellers, but messengers. Their job was to call the people back to covenant living. They cried out against injustice, false worship, corruption, and empty religion.

Some of the most well-known include:

- Elijah & Elisha – confronting kings and idols directly
- Isaiah – proclaiming judgment and hope for a coming Messiah
- Jeremiah – weeping over Judah's impending destruction
- Ezekiel – warning of exile while promising restoration
- Amos, Micah, Hosea – calling out hypocrisy, greed, and unfaithfulness

Many were ignored. Some were persecuted. But their voices became the conscience of the nation, reminding Israel that the family business had been forsaken.

“I hate, I despise your festivals... But let justice roll on like a river, righteousness like a never-failing stream!” — Amos 5:21, 24

What This Means for Us

The kings and prophets show us what happens when leadership goes astray, and when God's voice is drowned out by politics, prosperity, and pride.

- Success is not the same as faithfulness.
- Religious activity is not a substitute for obedience.
- A nation can have power and wealth—and still be far from God.

The prophets weren't just warning ancient Israel. They are still speaking to us.

Are we listening?

We are stewards of a different kingdom now. We may not wear crowns, but we have influence. And we too must choose whether to lead, follow, and labor according to God's ways—or according to what seems right in our own eyes.

The mission of the family business is still active. But it demands hearts that are humble, alert, and aligned with the King.

Chapter 10.a: The Silent Years – Preparing the Way

Between the final words of the Old Testament prophets and the first cries of John the Baptist lies a gap of roughly 400 years—a time often called the intertestamental period or “the silent years.”

But these years were not truly silent.

God may not have sent new prophets during this time, but He was setting the stage for the greatest chapter in His story.

From Prophets to Oppression

The Old Testament closes with warnings and promises. Malachi spoke of a coming messenger (Malachi 3:1), and Isaiah had long foretold a suffering servant and a future King. But after Malachi, there was no new Scripture, no fresh prophetic voice—at least none recognized within Israel’s canon.

During this time, Israel was caught in a constant tug-of-war between empires.

- First the Persians, who had allowed their return from exile.
- Then the Greeks, under Alexander the Great, bringing Greek culture and religion.
- Eventually, the empire fractured, and Seleucid rulers began to pressure Jews to conform.

One Seleucid king, Antiochus IV Epiphanes, went so far as to desecrate the temple, sacrificing pigs on the altar and forbidding Jewish worship. This blasphemy ignited a holy rebellion.

The Maccabean Revolt

Led by Judas Maccabeus and his family, a group of faithful Jews fought back. The revolt was fierce and costly, but successful. The temple was rededicated, and Jewish independence was briefly restored. This event is still remembered during the celebration of Hanukkah.

While the revolt was political and military, it was deeply spiritual. It showed that the people had not forgotten the covenant, and that some were willing to die rather than defile God’s commands.

But it was also a warning: Israel had learned to fight, but it had also become fractured. Competing factions—Pharisees, Sadducees, Essenes, and others—emerged, each with its own interpretation of faithfulness.

By the time of Jesus, Israel was weary, divided, and once again under foreign control—this time, by Rome.

What Was God Doing?

Though God’s voice seemed silent, His hand was active.

- The Greek language had spread across the known world, creating a common tongue.
- Roman roads and rule allowed for unprecedented travel and communication.
- The Scriptures had been translated into Greek (the Septuagint), making them accessible beyond Israel.
- Messianic expectation was rising. Many believed the time was near.

The conditions were perfect—not for a warrior king, but for a humble Savior, a servant who would redefine power and fulfill the prophecies.

“But when the fullness of time had come, God sent forth his Son...” — Galatians 4:4

The silence wasn’t absence. It was preparation.

What This Means for Us

We often struggle with silence. When God feels distant, we assume He’s not working. But the intertestamental years remind us that God is always at work, even when we don’t hear Him.

- He prepares roads in silence.
- He forms hearts in the dark.
- He aligns nations and souls for what’s coming next.

If you find yourself in a waiting season, take courage.

Silence does not mean God has forgotten.

It may mean He’s getting everything ready for the next chapter.

Chapter 11: Jesus — The Laborer and the Lord

At last, the silence broke.

Not with a royal decree, but with a baby's cry in a stable.

Not with an army, but with a carpenter's hands.

The Messiah came—not as a king on a throne, but as a worker.

“Is this not the carpenter, the son of Mary...?” — Mark 6:3

Before He ever preached a sermon, Jesus worked with wood.

Before He healed the sick, He swung a hammer.

Before He called others to follow, He honored His earthly father's trade.

He did not arrive above work—He entered into it.

The God Who Got Splinters

When Jesus became flesh (John 1:14), He didn't skip the ordinary.

He lived in a real town, in a real family, with real responsibilities. He likely bore the smells of sawdust and sweat long before He walked the dusty roads of Galilee as a teacher.

This was not accidental. It was theological.

God dignified human labor by entering into it.

Jesus affirmed that everyday work—done in humility and integrity—is holy.

“The Son of Man did not come to be served, but to serve...” — Matthew 20:28

Even His miracles were often framed like the work He had always done:

- He fixed what was broken.
- He restored what was lost.
- He healed what was beyond human repair.

He brought heaven's craftsmanship into every encounter.

The Business of the Father

At age twelve, Jesus already understood His calling:

“Did you not know that I must be about My Father’s business?” — Luke 2:49 (KJV)

His whole life was lived with purpose—kingdom work, every day. He taught, healed, confronted, forgave, challenged, built, and ultimately gave Himself as a sacrifice.

And when He began His public ministry, He didn’t choose the elite. He chose workers:

- Fishermen
- A tax collector
- Ordinary men with calloused hands and willing hearts

They were called not to lay down their nets and rest, but to become fishers of men—to labor in a new field.

“The harvest is plentiful, but the workers are few.” — Matthew 9:37

Jesus was not recruiting spectators. He was gathering laborers.

A Life Poured Out

Every parable Jesus told about the kingdom involved work:

- A sower in the field
- A master and his stewards
- A vineyard and its laborers
- Talents invested for return
- Servants watching for their master's return

He consistently affirmed that following Him meant doing, not just believing. Obedience. Faithfulness. Fruitfulness.

His own obedience was complete—even unto death.

“I have brought you glory on earth by finishing the work you gave me to do.” — John 17:4

On the cross, He didn't say, “I am finished.” He said:

“It is finished.” — John 19:30

The work. The redemption. The restoration.

What This Means for Us

Jesus didn't just die for us. He lived the life we are called to emulate.

- He worked with His hands.
- He served with His heart.
- He obeyed with His whole being.

To follow Jesus is to join Him in the family business—bringing restoration, truth, hope, and love into a broken world.

He was a laborer—and He is the Lord.

And now, He invites us to put our hands to the plow and never look back (Luke 9:62).

Chapter 12: The Harvest Is Plentiful — Teachings for Kingdom Workers

Jesus didn't just model a life of purpose—He taught about it constantly. His parables were earthy, practical, and filled with images of workers, fields, tools, and stewards.

He was forming a people who would carry on the Father's business, not just admire it.

“The harvest is plentiful, but the laborers are few. Therefore pray earnestly to the Lord of the harvest to send out laborers into His harvest.” — Matthew 9:37–38

This wasn't poetry. It was a call to action.

Work in the Fields: The Urgency of the Mission

In an agricultural society, a ripe harvest meant urgency. If not gathered in time, the fruit would rot. The window was short. The work could not wait.

Jesus used this to describe the spiritual state of the world:

- People were ready to hear truth.
- Lives were ripe for change.
- But there weren't enough workers to reach them.

He didn't say the world lacked spectators, thinkers, or believers. He said it lacked laborers.

And then He sent out His disciples two by two—not to observe, but to act.

Parables of Purpose

Jesus told story after story to reinforce the point that kingdom faith involves kingdom action:

1. The Parable of the Talents (Matthew 25:14–30)

A master entrusts his servants with different amounts of wealth and leaves. When he returns, he expects a return. Those who invested and multiplied what they were given are commended. The one who buried his talent is condemned—not for doing evil, but for doing nothing.

“Well done, good and faithful servant...”

“You wicked and lazy servant...”

This parable reminds us that inaction is not neutral. God expects fruit from our gifts.

2. The Workers in the Vineyard (Matthew 20:1–16)

Laborers are hired at different hours, but all receive the same reward. The story speaks of grace—but it also assumes this truth:

Everyone was expected to work.

There was no reward for standing in the marketplace idle.

3. The Wise and Foolish Servants (Luke 12:35–48)

Servants are left in charge while their master is away. The wise one keeps working; the foolish one becomes lazy and abusive.

When the master returns unexpectedly, their actions—not intentions—determine their reward.

“From everyone who has been given much, much will be demanded.” — Luke 12:48

Watchfulness and Work

Jesus’ teachings consistently link watchfulness with faithfulness.

It’s not enough to wait for Christ’s return—we are to work while we wait.

- Prepare the soil
- Tend the flock
- Feed the hungry
- Preach the Word
- Serve without seeking credit

Every act of obedience becomes part of the harvest.

What This Means for Us

We were not saved just to believe—we were saved to build.

- What are we doing with our talents?

- Are we investing what God has placed in us, or burying it out of fear or comfort?
- Are we praying for laborers—or are we willing to be one?

Jesus didn't lower the bar for discipleship. He raised it.

To follow Him is to join the mission.

The work is great. The time is short. The harvest is ripe.

The only question is: Will we show up to the field?

Chapter 13: “Be Like Me”: Paul’s Blueprint

After Jesus’ resurrection and ascension, the Church faced a challenge: How do you follow someone you can no longer see?

There were no bound New Testaments, no study Bibles, no long tradition of church practices. Believers needed living examples of what it meant to follow Christ. And in this critical moment, Paul stepped forward—not with pride, but with clarity:

“Follow my example, as I follow the example of Christ.” — 1 Corinthians 11:1

This wasn’t self-glorification. It was discipleship in motion.

Paul: A Man of Two Callings

Paul was a tentmaker by trade (Acts 18:3) and an apostle by calling. He labored with his hands, not out of obligation, but to avoid burdening others and to model a life of integrity and balance.

“We worked night and day, laboring and toiling so that we would not be a burden to any of you... We did this... to offer ourselves as a model for you to imitate.” — 2 Thessalonians 3:8–9

His physical work was not separate from his ministry—it was part of it. He showed that Kingdom service happens in the pulpit and in the workshop, in prayer and in productivity.

A Life of Imitation and Instruction

Paul didn’t merely say, “Believe what I preach.” He said, “Watch how I live.”

- “Whatever you have learned or received or heard from me, or seen in me—put it into practice.” — Philippians 4:9
- “You know how we lived among you for your sake... You became imitators of us and of the Lord.” — 1 Thessalonians 1:5–6

Paul’s life was an open letter—transparent, sacrificial, relentless in pursuit of the Gospel. He taught by example what it looked like to:

- Suffer for Christ
- Pray without ceasing

- Love the unlovable
- Preach in power
- Serve with humility

Why “Be Like Me” Still Matters

Paul knew he wasn’t perfect. He called himself the “chief of sinners” (1 Timothy 1:15). But he also knew something else: the Church needs visible models of transformation.

Today, we have Scripture—and praise God for it. But we still need living examples. People who show:

- What grace looks like in failure
- What generosity looks like in success
- What endurance looks like in suffering
- What humility looks like in leadership

Paul wasn’t creating fans. He was training followers of Christ.

“Join together in following my example... and just as you have us as a model, keep your eyes on those who live as we do.” — Philippians 3:17

What This Means for Us

“Be like me” is not just for Paul. It becomes a challenge for every believer.

- Can others follow your example?
- Is your life a map to Christ?
- Are you modeling worship, work, patience, faith, repentance?

We are all called to live lives worth imitating—not because we’re perfect, but because we are faithfully following the One who is.

You may never write letters like Paul. But your life can become a letter—read by your children, your neighbors, your coworkers.

Don’t just believe the message. Become the message.

Chapter 14: Many Parts, One Body — Every Role Matters

Jesus ascended, the Spirit descended, and the Church was born. But it didn't begin with buildings, boards, or budgets. It began with people filled with the Holy Spirit, given different gifts for one mission.

“Now you are the body of Christ, and each one of you is a part of it.” — 1 Corinthians 12:27

This wasn't a metaphor to make people feel included. It was a blueprint for how the family business would now operate.

Just as a body needs all its parts to function, the Church needs every believer to engage.

Gifts Distributed by the Spirit

Paul explains that each believer is given spiritual gifts, not randomly, but intentionally.

“There are different kinds of gifts, but the same Spirit distributes them... Now to each one the manifestation of the Spirit is given for the common good.” — 1 Corinthians 12:4–7

These gifts aren't trophies. They're tools.

- Some teach.
- Some encourage.
- Some lead.
- Some give generously.
- Some show mercy.
- Some pray with power.
- Some serve quietly behind the scenes.

All are essential. None are expendable.

No Spectators

Paul confronts two lies we often believe:

1. “Because I am not like them, I don’t belong.”
2. “Because they’re not like me, they’re not important.”

“The eye cannot say to the hand, ‘I don’t need you!’” — 1 Corinthians 12:21

“If the whole body were an eye, where would the sense of hearing be?” — v.17

In the family business, there are no sidelines. Everyone has a role. Everyone has responsibility. Everyone has been gifted for the good of the whole.

You may not preach, but your quiet encouragement could restore someone’s faith. You may not lead worship, but your hospitality might soften a heart to receive the gospel. You may not go overseas, but your generosity might send someone else.

From Sunday to Every Day

The early Church didn’t limit spiritual gifts to a building. They used them in daily life:

- In homes and marketplaces
- Around tables and prayer meetings
- In public witness and private suffering

The body of Christ was living, breathing, and active in the world—through its many members.

“Whatever you do, work at it with all your heart, as working for the Lord...” — Colossians 3:23

Even the so-called “ordinary” parts of life became sacred assignments.

What This Means for Us

You have a place. You have a part. You have a purpose.

God has not only called you, He has equipped you.

The Church doesn’t function properly when people sit back and watch. It thrives when every member serves, loves, prays, and labors with what they’ve been given.

You may be a hand, a foot, a voice, or a heartbeat.

You may be seen or hidden.

But if you are in Christ, you are essential.

Let no one—especially yourself—convince you otherwise.

Chapter 15: Quiet Labor — The Unseen Work of the Kingdom

When we think of “Kingdom work,” we often imagine bold preaching, overseas missions, or church leadership. And yes—these are essential. But much of God’s greatest work happens in quieter places, through people whose names may never be known, but whose faithfulness echoes into eternity.

“Let your light shine before others, that they may see your good deeds and glorify your Father in heaven.” — Matthew 5:16

Sometimes that light isn’t a spotlight—it’s a lamp on a table, quietly pushing back the darkness.

Showing the Way, Not Just Telling It

The harvest field isn’t only for those who speak—it’s for those who live the message.

- A kind word in a moment of tension
- A meal for someone who’s grieving
- A ride to church, a prayer in secret, a handwritten note
- Integrity in business, patience with children, joy in hardship

These are not lesser forms of work. They are fruit—tangible evidence of God's Spirit alive in you.

“In the same way, faith by itself, if it is not accompanied by action, is dead.” — James 2:17

The world watches. And often, it’s not our words, but our daily ways, that speak the loudest.

The Church Needs Laborers Too

The mission doesn’t stop at the church door. In fact, much of the work is within the Body of Christ.

Paul’s “many parts, one body” metaphor (1 Corinthians 12) includes not just spiritual gifts, but practical roles.

- Setting up chairs, sweeping floors, maintaining the building
- Watching children, preparing meals, welcoming strangers
- Giving generously, organizing schedules, offering rides
- Listening with empathy, praying without being asked

These are not chores—they are acts of worship. And when done with love, they build both the physical church and the living Church of Christ.

No act done in Jesus' name is ever wasted.

We Don't Own What We Have

In both the Old and New Testaments, God teaches that we are stewards, not owners.

“Honor the Lord with your wealth, with the firstfruits of all your crops.” — Proverbs 3:9
“Each one must give as he has decided in his heart...for God loves a cheerful giver.” — 2 Corinthians 9:7

What we've been given—money, time, energy, skill—was never meant to be hoarded. It was meant to be sowed into the work of the Kingdom.

This includes:

- Supporting the local church building and its needs
- Helping the poor and the vulnerable
- Giving sacrificially, not just conveniently

God doesn't demand what we don't have. But He delights when we offer Him our first and best, not our leftovers.

What This Means for Us

You don't have to stand on a platform to stand in the Kingdom.
You don't need a title to carry a towel.

- Your workplace can be a mission field.
- Your home can be a sanctuary.

- Your neighborhood can be a vineyard.
- Your offering—however small—can be multiplied by God.

You are not just a witness when you speak. You are a witness when you love.

The harvest is not just out there. It's wherever you are.

Chapter 16: The Work of the Weak — Purpose in Infirmary and Age

In the world's eyes, value is measured by strength, productivity, and visibility. But in the Kingdom of God, weakness is not a liability—it is often the platform through which God does His most profound work.

“God chose the weak things of the world to shame the strong.” — 1 Corinthians 1:27

From the beginning, God has used the least likely:

- An elderly couple (Abraham and Sarah) to start a nation
- A timid fugitive (Moses) to confront Pharaoh
- A forgotten shepherd boy (David) to become king
- A barren woman (Hannah) to birth a prophet
- A poor teenager (Mary) to carry the Messiah

Strength Isn't Required. Faith Is.

The body may weaken. The voice may falter. The hands may tremble.
But none of this disqualifies a person from the family business.

“Though outwardly we are wasting away, yet inwardly we are being renewed day by day.” — 2 Corinthians 4:16

Those who are homebound can still pray with power.

Those who battle chronic illness can still encourage with wisdom.

Those nearing the end of life can still bless and testify to God's faithfulness.

The Church does not exist in spite of the weak—it is strengthened by them.

The Elderly and the Seasoned

In a culture that prizes youth, Scripture exalts age.

“Gray hair is a crown of splendor; it is attained in the way of righteousness.” — Proverbs 16:31

The elderly are not meant to step aside and watch the younger generation work alone. They are meant to:

- Speak into the lives of the next generation
- Share stories that anchor faith
- Guide, mentor, and model endurance

Paul called older men and women in the Church to be examples (Titus 2:2–5). Their work may look different than before—but it is still vital.

The Disabled and the Chronically Ill

Some are born with limitations. Others acquire them through injury or illness. Either way, their purpose is not diminished.

In fact, their very lives can be testimonies to the sufficiency of God.

“My grace is sufficient for you, for my power is made perfect in weakness.” — 2 Corinthians 12:9

God can use a wheelchair, a quiet bed, or a hospital room to accomplish what a stage or pulpit never could.

- The endurance of suffering
- The joy in affliction
- The peace in the storm

These are sermons no microphone could amplify.

What This Means for Us

We must reject the lie that only the strong can serve.

In the family business:

- Everyone has a part.
- No one is benched.
- No offering is too small.

- No life is without purpose.

Whether you're full of strength or barely able to rise from bed—you are part of the mission.

And for those who are strong right now: look for those who may feel left out.

- Draw in the elderly.
- Make space for the disabled.
- Ask for their prayers, receive their wisdom, honor their faith.

Because in God's Kingdom, weakness is not wasted.

Chapter 17: Work at Home, Work in the World

Not all Kingdom work happens in pulpits or on mission trips. Much of it happens in kitchens, offices, schools, sidewalks, and family tables. In God’s design, no location is too ordinary to be holy ground.

“Whatever you do, whether in word or deed, do it all in the name of the Lord Jesus...” — Colossians 3:17

Whether you’re changing diapers or running a business, managing a household or managing employees—your work matters.

The Home as a Mission Field

Home is often where the hardest, most hidden work happens. It’s where faith is tested, character is formed, and generations are shaped.

- Teaching a child to pray
- Modeling patience and forgiveness
- Serving a spouse with humility
- Caring for aging parents
- Making space for hospitality

These are not background tasks—they are frontline assignments.

“These commandments that I give you today are to be on your hearts. Impress them on your children...” — Deuteronomy 6:6–7

The home is the first training ground for the next generation of workers in God’s Kingdom.

Labor in the World with a Different Spirit

God also places His people in the marketplace, not just in the sanctuary.

- Teachers shape minds.
- Builders shape neighborhoods.
- Nurses and doctors bring healing.

- Judges, farmers, engineers, drivers, artists—all can glorify God in their roles.

It's not about what job you have—it's about how you do it.

“Work with sincerity of heart and reverence for the Lord... It is the Lord Christ you are serving.” — Colossians 3:22–24

In a world that cuts corners, chases profit, and prizes status, the Christian's work ethic becomes a witness:

- Integrity in the face of compromise
- Joy in the face of monotony
- Excellence without arrogance
- Kindness in high-pressure environments

You are a light in boardrooms and break rooms, in emails and spreadsheets, in brief conversations and long projects.

Dual Citizenship, Unified Purpose

We live in two kingdoms:

- The earthly one with time clocks and taxes
- The heavenly one with eternal rewards and holy calling

But the line between them is not as thick as we think.

Every Christian is an ambassador (2 Corinthians 5:20), sent into the world not just to survive it—but to bless it.

God has scattered His people into all corners of society, not to blend in, but to shine.

Wherever God has placed you, there's work to do.

What This Means for Us

You don't need to change careers to serve God.

You don't need to leave your home to be a missionary.

You simply need to say: “Lord, this place—this task—is Yours.”

- Raise children like future Kingdom leaders.

- Teach like you're forming image-bearers.
- Cook, drive, serve, design, plan, and protect—as unto the Lord.

Every job becomes sacred when it's done with God, for God, and because of God.

Chapter 18: Do Your Work as Unto the Lord

At some point in every job—whether in the church, the home, or the world—the temptation arises:

Does this even matter?

Maybe no one notices. Maybe no one thanks you. Maybe the results don't match the effort. But Scripture cuts through that weariness with a powerful reminder:

“Whatever you do, work at it with all your heart, as working for the Lord, not for human masters.” — Colossians 3:23

Work is worship—not just when it's big and visible, but even when it's hidden and hard.

Who You Work For Changes Everything

If you're working for a boss, a paycheck, applause, or even yourself, your work will eventually feel hollow.

But when you work as unto the Lord:

- Your cubicle becomes a chapel.
- Your broom becomes a baton of worship.
- Your spreadsheet becomes a scroll of faithfulness.
- Your quiet service becomes an offering before the King.

This doesn't mean every task feels spiritual. It means every task can be holy, when the motive behind it is love and obedience.

Attitude Over Applause

God doesn't just look at what we do—He looks at how and why.

“People look at the outward appearance, but the Lord looks at the heart.” — 1 Samuel 16:7

- You may never be recognized—but God sees.
- You may never be promoted—but God rewards.

- You may never “go viral”—but your name is known in heaven.

Even the most menial job becomes sacred when done with a heart that honors God.

And even the most powerful position becomes hollow if done for self.

Not for Eye-Service, but Faithfulness

Paul warned against “eye-service”—working only when someone is watching.

“Not only to win their favor when their eye is on you, but as slaves of Christ, doing the will of God from your heart.” — Ephesians 6:6

In other words, work like Jesus is standing next to you—because He is.

Faithfulness in secret is the measure of maturity. That’s where character is formed, and where Kingdom seeds often bear the most fruit.

Eternal Impact, Even in Earthly Labor

Nothing done for the Lord is wasted.

“Your labor in the Lord is not in vain.” — 1 Corinthians 15:58

- A single prayer can change a heart.
- A quiet act of kindness can ripple into generations.
- A faithful life in the background may one day be rewarded before all of heaven.

We may not see the full harvest of our work on this side of eternity—but God keeps the books.

What This Means for Us

Wherever you are, whatever you’re doing—you are on assignment.

- You were created to work.
- You were gifted to build.
- You were placed where you are for such a time as this.
- And the Lord of the harvest is watching—not to condemn, but to reward.

So whether you teach or wash dishes, fix engines or lead prayer, preach sermons or change diapers—do it all as unto the Lord.

He is worth it.

Chapter 19: A Mile Wide and an Inch Deep

The modern Church has never had more access to resources: sermons, books, podcasts, conferences, and media. Worship is professional. Programming is polished. The reach is wide.

And yet—depth is lacking.

We've become a field that stretches for miles but can't hold water. We are, as the old phrase goes, a mile wide and an inch deep.

“Though by this time you ought to be teachers, you need someone to teach you the elementary truths of God's word all over again. You need milk, not solid food!” — Hebrews 5:12

This was not written to new believers. It was written to Christians who had stopped growing. And it's still true today.

Imitation Requires Immersion

To emulate Christ is not merely to copy His works. It is to know Him so deeply that His character becomes your own.

- You can't follow Jesus well without learning what He said.
- You can't reflect His love if you don't dwell in His presence.
- You can't stand in storms if your roots are shallow.

Discipleship means discipline. It means intentional, regular, deep time in:

- Prayer
- Scripture
- Worship
- Community
- Obedience

Anything less creates a façade of Christianity that crumbles under pressure.

“Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly...” — Colossians 3:16

We don't just need more sermons. We need soaking.

From Milk to Meat

Paul rebuked the Corinthians for their spiritual immaturity:

"I gave you milk, not solid food, for you were not yet ready for it. Indeed, you are still not ready." — 1 Corinthians 3:2

Spiritual milk is essential for new believers. But too many stay there—decades in church, yet still shallow in truth, easily offended, doctrinally weak, and tossed by every trend.

Growth isn't automatic. It takes intentionality and endurance.

- Solid food is not just theological knowledge—it's obedience under pressure.
- It's feeding on truth when your emotions scream otherwise.
- It's laboring in the Word, not just listening passively.
- It's chewing on Christ's teachings until they shape your life.

Growth That Fuels the Work

You cannot sustain long-term Kingdom labor without roots.

The deeper your fellowship with Christ, the more:

- Pure your motives will become
- Steady your hand will remain
- Clear your calling will be
- Fruitful your work will be

"Blessed is the one... whose delight is in the law of the Lord... That person is like a tree planted by streams of water, which yields its fruit in season..." — Psalm 1:1–3

Depth doesn't just benefit you—it nourishes others.

The Church Must Wake Up

Many churches are filled with attenders, not disciples. Crowds gather—but few go deep.

- We know how to perform.
- We know how to consume.
- But do we know how to abide?

Jesus never said, “Come and be entertained.” He said:

“If anyone would come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross daily and follow me.” — Luke 9:23

That’s not shallow. That’s not casual. That’s life-consuming transformation.

What This Means for Us

If your faith feels dry or weak, the answer is not to “try harder.”
It is to go deeper.

- Spend unhurried time in Scripture.
- Pray honestly, not religiously.
- Sit in silence with God.
- Read slowly. Repent quickly. Obey fully.

Let Christ’s words take root, and your work will bear much fruit.

Because God isn’t looking for flashy Christians.
He’s looking for faithful ones.

Don’t settle for shallow. Go deep—because the deeper the root, the greater the harvest.

Chapter 20: The Judgment of Work — What Lasts Will Remain

All work will one day be measured.

Not by titles.

Not by trophies.

Not by applause.

But by eternal impact.

“Each one should build with care... their work will be shown for what it is, because the Day will bring it to light.” — 1 Corinthians 3:10, 13

The Bible speaks of a coming day when our efforts—what we’ve built with our lives—will pass through fire. Not for the purpose of destruction, but for refining. To reveal what was built for God, and what was built for self.

Fire Will Test Every Work

Paul explains this clearly to the Corinthians:

“If anyone builds on this foundation [Christ] using gold, silver, costly stones, wood, hay or straw, their work will be shown for what it is... it will be revealed with fire, and the fire will test the quality of each person’s work.” — 1 Corinthians 3:12–13

Some things will survive.

The difference is often found in motives, not just in methods.

Were we building God’s kingdom—or our own?

Were we giving our best—or just enough to get by?

Were we laboring from love—or from pressure and pride?

Salvation Is Secure. Rewards Are Real.

Paul makes it clear—this judgment is not about salvation, but about reward.

“If what has been built survives, the builder will receive a reward. If it is burned up, the builder will suffer loss, yet will be saved...” — 1 Corinthians 3:14–15

This is a call to take our lives seriously—not fearfully, but faithfully.

Heaven is not earned by works, but works reveal our love for the One who saved us.
Jesus said, “If you love me, keep my commands.” (John 14:15)

We are not saved by fruit—but every healthy tree bears fruit.

The Legacy That Lasts

What kind of work survives the fire?

- That which is built on Christ
- That which is done in love
- That which reflects truth, mercy, and obedience
- That which lifts others toward God

This means:

- A faithful parent who raised children in the Lord
- A caregiver who served the elderly with compassion
- A teacher who planted seeds of hope
- A believer who prayed faithfully for decades without attention

These things last.

Jesus said:

“Even a cup of cold water given in my name will not lose its reward.” — Matthew 10:42

That’s how carefully He watches. That’s how much He values our labor.

What This Means for Us

This chapter of judgment is not meant to cause anxiety—it is meant to awaken purpose.

You only get one life.

You only get one chance to build what matters.

But it’s not too late to start.

Build carefully.

Build joyfully.

Build on the foundation of Christ—and your work will endure.

Chapter 21: New Heavens, New Earth — New Assignments?

The Bible begins in a garden and ends in a city. It opens with a man placed in a perfect world to work it and closes with a redeemed humanity reigning with Christ in a world made new.

This isn't just a happy ending. It's the restoration of the family business.

“Then I saw a new heaven and a new earth... I saw the Holy City, the new Jerusalem, coming down out of heaven from God...” — Revelation 21:1–2

God isn't destroying everything and starting over. He is renewing creation, restoring what was broken—not just people, but the world itself.

And in that world, there is work to do.

They Will Reign With Him

In the final chapter of Scripture, we find this astonishing promise:

“The throne of God and of the Lamb will be in the city, and his servants will serve him... and they will reign for ever and ever.” — Revelation 22:3, 5

His servants will serve.

Eternal life is not sitting on clouds. It is not endless leisure. It is not retirement. It is active, joyful participation in God's eternal Kingdom.

Though Scripture doesn't give us all the details, we're told enough to know:

- The curse will be gone (v.3)
- God's presence will be full (v.4)
- And we will serve and reign forever

That means assignment and purpose will continue.

A Return to Eden — But Better

The New Jerusalem is filled with echoes of Eden:

- A river flows through it
- The tree of life is there
- There is no more death, pain, or sorrow

But this time, there's no serpent.

No sin.

No fear.

Only unity, beauty, and the complete presence of God.

And we will not be idle—we will be active in His perfect will.

This is the family business, fully restored.

Your Work Today Matters for Tomorrow

How we live and work now doesn't just affect this life—it prepares us for the next.

Jesus spoke of entrusting greater things to those who were faithful with little (Luke 19:17). Paul reminded us that our suffering, our labor, and our discipline now are training us for eternal glory (2 Corinthians 4:17).

The stewardship of this life is a preview of the one to come.

The tools may change—but the heart of our calling remains:

To glorify God.

To serve in His presence.

To participate in His Kingdom.

Forever.

What This Means for Us

Heaven is not the end of our work.

It is the renewal of it, without corruption or fatigue.

It is what we were made for, finally free from sin and striving.

So we labor now, not in vain—but in anticipation.

- Every act of faithfulness is a rehearsal for eternity.
- Every moment of obedience is a step toward that city.

- Every tear, every sacrifice, every unseen act of love—He will remember.

“Well done, good and faithful servant... Come and share your master’s happiness!” —
Matthew 25:21

That joy will be the beginning of a new chapter—one without end.

Chapter 22: The Family Business, Forever

The story began in a garden—with a man and a mission.

It ends in a city—with a redeemed people, still serving, still reigning, still working in joy.

What was lost has been restored.

What was cursed has been healed.

What was broken has been made whole.

But this isn't just the end of the story. It's the fulfillment of everything God set in motion at creation.

“They will see His face, and His name will be on their foreheads... and they will reign forever and ever.” — Revelation 22:4–5

The family business continues—not in weariness, but in eternal worship and purpose.

God Has Always Wanted Partners

From the very beginning, God didn't need help—but He wanted participation.

- He invited Adam to tend His garden.
- He called Noah to build His ark.
- He chose Abraham to carry His promise.
- He raised Moses to deliver His people.
- He gave Israel laws to show the world His holiness.
- He sent His Son to redeem what was lost.
- He sent His Spirit to empower the Church.
- He calls us now—to finish the work.

We were never meant to be spectators.

We were meant to build, plant, serve, and carry light—together.

This is the legacy. This is the invitation. This is the business of heaven.

Faithfulness Over Fame

The world celebrates the famous, the fast, the visible.
But in the Kingdom, it is faithfulness that God rewards.

- Not how much you accomplished, but how well you followed.
- Not how loudly you led, but how humbly you served.
- Not how much others noticed, but whether God was glorified.

The final words you want to hear are not “You were impressive.”
But:

“Well done, good and faithful servant.”

That is the commendation of the Father. That is the reward of eternity.

Don't Miss the Mission

The greatest tragedy is not to fail—it's to succeed at the wrong things.
To live a life full of activity, but empty of purpose.
To build a kingdom of your own and neglect the one that lasts.

But it's not too late.

Whether you are young or old, strong or weak, just beginning or nearing the end—

There is still time to step into the family business.

Jesus said:

“My Father is always at His work to this very day, and I too am working.” — John 5:17

And He invites you to join Him.

What This Means for Us

We were made to work with God, not for ourselves.
We were made to invest in things that last, not things that fade.
We were made to be a people of purpose, not passengers in a world going nowhere.

The family business is not about profit.
It's about redemption.

It's about love.

It's about souls.

And it goes on—until the day we see Him face to face.

The work continues. The door is still open. The fields are still ripe.

Let's go to work.

 Book Two: “What If We Don’t?” – The Cost of Ignoring the Call

Chapter 1: Many Are Called, But Few Are Chosen

The invitation of God is wide.

“Go to the street corners and invite to the banquet anyone you find.” — Matthew 22:9

But the response is narrow.

“For many are called, but few are chosen.” — Matthew 22:14

These are not words of exclusion—they are words of warning and truth. God’s invitation goes out to all. But not all accept it. And not all who say yes live like it.

The Parable of the Wedding Banquet

In Matthew 22, Jesus tells the story of a king who prepares a wedding feast for his son. The invitation goes first to the expected guests. But they ignore it. Some mock. Some go about their business. Some even attack the messengers.

So the king opens the invitation to everyone— “both good and bad” (v.10). The banquet hall is filled.

But then something surprising happens. The king sees a guest without wedding clothes —someone who accepted the invitation but came on his own terms, without preparation or transformation.

“Friend, how did you get in here without wedding clothes?” — Matthew 22:12

The man is speechless. He is removed. And Jesus concludes with that unsettling phrase:

“Many are called, but few are chosen.”

The Call Is Real. The Commitment Is Required.

This parable reminds us:

- It’s not enough to be invited—you must respond.
- It’s not enough to show up—you must be clothed in Christ (see Galatians 3:27).
- It’s not enough to be near the kingdom—you must be born into it (John 3:3).

God’s grace is free. But it is not casual.

To enter the banquet—to be “chosen”—means to be changed.

Grace Is Not Permission to Drift

Too many hear the call of God and respond emotionally, impulsively, or even half-heartedly. But over time:

- They go back to their business.
- They grow bored with the invitation.
- They refuse to prepare for the feast.

Jesus warned about this in other parables:

- The seed that springs up quickly but withers in the sun (Matthew 13)
- The lamp without oil (Matthew 25)
- The servant who hides his talent (Matthew 25)

These are all people who heard the call, but lacked enduring faithfulness.

What About Us?

Have we heard the invitation... but neglected to respond in full?

Have we accepted the idea of salvation... without the transformation that comes with following Christ?

Jesus is clear: the road is narrow. The door is not locked, but it is not wide open forever.

“Strive to enter through the narrow door. For many... will seek to enter and will not be able.” — Luke 13:24

This is not a threat—it is a loving alert.

What This Means for Us

God is calling.

To the religious and the rebellious.

To the far off and the near.

To the proud and the poor.

The call goes out. But the question remains:

Will you show up prepared?

Will you come clothed in Christ?

Will you enter the Kingdom as one who is not just called, but chosen?

There is still time. But time doesn't last forever.

Chapter 2: Saved to Work — Not Saved by Work

The Bible is crystal clear:

“For it is by grace you have been saved, through faith—and this is not from yourselves, it is the gift of God—not by works, so that no one can boast.” — Ephesians 2:8–9

Salvation cannot be earned.

It is not a reward for good behavior.

It is not a transaction for holy effort.

But the very next verse completes the thought:

“For we are God’s handiwork, created in Christ Jesus to do good works, which God prepared in advance for us to do.” — Ephesians 2:10

We are not saved by works.

We are saved for works.

The Root and the Fruit

Faith is the root.

Works are the fruit.

A tree is not alive because it bears fruit—it bears fruit because it is alive.

“In the same way, faith by itself, if it is not accompanied by action, is dead.” — James 2:17

James isn’t contradicting Paul. He’s clarifying. Faith that does not transform, that does not produce obedience, that does not stir the heart to serve and love—is not faith. It’s a mask.

A faith that saves is a faith that moves.

Jesus Wasn’t Looking for Agreement

Jesus never asked people to agree with Him quietly and carry on with life as usual. He called them to follow, to obey, to labor in the harvest, to take up their cross.

“If you love me, you will keep my commandments.” — John 14:15

“Why do you call me, ‘Lord, Lord,’ and do not do what I say?” — Luke 6:46

Love is not measured in emotion. It's proven in action.

The grace that saves is also the grace that reshapes the will.

Paul, the Apostle of Grace, Worked Harder Than Anyone

Paul preached grace louder than anyone. But listen to how he describes his life:

“But by the grace of God I am what I am... No, I worked harder than all of them—yet not I, but the grace of God that was with me.” — 1 Corinthians 15:10

Paul didn't work to be saved. He worked because he was saved. Grace didn't make him lazy—it made him alive.

And the result was a life of tireless, joyful labor for the Kingdom.

So What Role Do Works Play?

Works are not the price of salvation.

They are the proof of it.

Jesus said:

“You will know them by their fruits.” — Matthew 7:16

This isn't about perfection. It's about direction. The heart that's been transformed by grace begins to live differently.

- It seeks to please God.
- It serves others.
- It gives generously.
- It confesses and repents.
- It labors—not to earn heaven, but because heaven has come to live within.

What This Means for Us

If your life is truly rooted in faith, there will be fruit.

Not always dramatic. Not always fast. But it will be there—because the Spirit of God does not dwell in a heart without changing it.

- If there are no works, we must ask: has there been real grace?
- If there is no obedience, has there been true faith?
- If there is no love, have we truly met the One who is love?

We don't work to be saved.

But if we are saved, we will work—because Christ is working in us.

Chapter 3: Depart from Me, I Never Knew You

Few words in Scripture are more chilling than these:

“Then I will tell them plainly, ‘I never knew you. Depart from me, you workers of lawlessness.’” — Matthew 7:23

This statement doesn’t come in the context of atheism or open rebellion. It comes in the context of religious activity.

“Many will say to me on that day, ‘Lord, Lord, did we not prophesy in your name... and in your name perform many miracles?’” — Matthew 7:22

They used His name. They did ministry.

But they missed the most important thing: knowing Him.

A False Sense of Assurance

These people thought they were in.

- They used religious language.
- They did spiritual things.
- They assumed their work would validate their place.

But Jesus pulls back the curtain to reveal something terrifying:

It is possible to be active in the church and unknown in heaven.

They had works—but they lacked relationship.

They had the outward signs—but their hearts were far from Him.

“These people honor me with their lips, but their hearts are far from me.” — Matthew 15:8

Not Just What You Do — But Why You Do It

The problem isn’t activity. It’s authenticity.

Jesus is not condemning good works—He’s revealing that good works done apart from Him are hollow.

“Apart from me you can do nothing.” — John 15:5

These are people who used Jesus' name, but didn't submit to His Lordship.

They were building their lives on sand—using religious materials, but refusing His foundation.

“Not everyone who says to me, ‘Lord, Lord,’ will enter the kingdom of heaven, but only the one who does the will of my Father who is in heaven.” — Matthew 7:21

Knowing About Him Is Not the Same as Knowing Him

Many know about Jesus. Few truly know Him.

- Knowing Him means surrender, not just study.
- Knowing Him means love expressed through obedience (John 14:15).
- Knowing Him means intimacy, humility, and a daily relationship.

The scariest part of this passage is not that Jesus says, “I once knew you, and now I don't.”

It's that He says: “I never knew you.”

They never entered the relationship. They played the role, but never gave Him their hearts.

What This Means for Us

We must ask hard but honest questions:

- Am I following Christ—or simply admiring Him from a distance?
- Is my service for His glory—or my own image?
- Do I know Him personally—or just operate in the system of Christianity?

The antidote to this terrifying statement is simple but not easy:

Come to Him. Know Him. Walk with Him. Obey Him.

Let your life be built on the solid rock of Christ—not religious routines, not impressive deeds, not public ministry, but a real, deep, obedient relationship.

“My sheep listen to my voice; I know them, and they follow me.” — John 10:27

Because in the end, the question isn't: Did I do enough?
The question is: Did I belong to Him?

Chapter 4: If You Love Me, Keep My Commands

Love is the greatest commandment.
But it is also the most misunderstood.

Many treat love as a feeling. A moment of warmth. A kind word or inner belief. But Jesus redefined it—love, He said, looks like obedience.

“If you love me, you will keep my commands.” — John 14:15

This wasn't a threat. It was a test of truth.

Words Are Easy. Obedience Is Evidence.

Jesus knew that many would say they loved Him.

- They would sing it.
- They would preach it.
- They would claim it.

But love is not proven by volume—it is proven by submission.

“Anyone who loves me will obey my teaching. My Father will love them, and we will come to them and make our home with them.” — John 14:23

If we truly love Christ, it will show up in how we:

- Forgive
- Sacrifice
- Speak
- Serve
- Live

Love that does not lead to obedience is not love. It's sentimentality wearing a cross.

The Danger of Selective Submission

We don't get to choose which commands to follow.

Love doesn't edit Jesus—it embraces all of Him.

- The command to love our enemies is as binding as the command not to lie.
- The command to give generously is as binding as the command to pray.
- The command to pick up our cross is not optional—it's central.

Jesus isn't looking for part-time followers. He's calling for full surrender.

“Why do you call me, ‘Lord, Lord,’ and do not do what I say?” — Luke 6:46

Obedience Is Not Legalism

Some hear the call to obey and react with fear: “But we're not saved by works!” Absolutely true.

But we must distinguish between:

- Legalism (trying to earn God's love through obedience)
- And Love-driven obedience (responding to God's love with surrender)

Grace is not opposed to effort—it's opposed to earning.

“We love because he first loved us.” — 1 John 4:19

Our obedience doesn't cause God to love us—it reveals that we love Him.

Jesus' Commands Are Not a Burden

The world says “rules” kill freedom. But Jesus says:

“Take my yoke upon you... For my yoke is easy and my burden is light.” — Matthew 11:29–30

The commands of Christ are not chains. They are life-giving boundaries, paths to peace, purpose, and joy. Obedience may be hard—but it's holy. And it leads to the abundant life we were made for.

“In fact, this is love for God: to keep his commands. And his commands are not burdensome.” — 1 John 5:3

What This Means for Us

Love for Jesus is not something we just feel.
It is something we do.

- If we love Him, we will forgive others.
- If we love Him, we will turn from sin.
- If we love Him, we will serve with joy.
- If we love Him, we will trust Him—especially when obedience is hard.

Obedience is not the death of freedom.
It is the evidence of love and the gateway to joy.

Jesus doesn't want our admiration. He wants our allegiance.
Not because He's a tyrant—but because He's a Savior who gave everything.

Love Him with more than your lips.
Show Him with your life.

Chapter 5: It's Not Too Late

The warnings are real.
The judgment is just.
But the door is still open.

“The Lord is not slow in keeping his promise... He is patient with you, not wanting anyone to perish, but everyone to come to repentance.” — 2 Peter 3:9

Though many are called and few are chosen...
Though some may hear, “Depart from me”...
Though love must be proven in obedience...

It is not too late.

The Door of Grace Is Still Open

God has not closed the invitation. In fact, the invitation burns brighter in the face of coming judgment.

Jesus never stopped calling people to Himself—even as He hung on the cross:

“Today you will be with me in paradise.” — Luke 23:43

That promise was spoken to a thief, a criminal, a dying man with no time left to prove anything—except his faith in the Savior beside him.

There is always time—until there isn't.
And if you're reading this now, there is time.

Repentance Is Not Shame—It's a Gift

Repentance is not a punishment.
It's the path home.

“Return to me, and I will return to you,” says the Lord Almighty. — Malachi 3:7

God is not waiting to crush you. He's waiting to restore you.

- The prodigal son came home—and was embraced.
- The woman caught in adultery heard, “Neither do I condemn you.”

- Peter denied Jesus—and was called back to feed His sheep.

“Repent, then, and turn to God, so that your sins may be wiped out, that times of refreshing may come from the Lord.” — Acts 3:19

That’s what God wants—for you to turn, and be refreshed.

You Don’t Have to Earn Your Way Back

You may feel unworthy. That’s because you are. We all are.

But that’s what makes grace so beautiful. It’s for the unworthy.

“While we were still sinners, Christ died for us.” — Romans 5:8

You don’t need to clean yourself up before you return to God.

You just need to turn. To say, “I need You.”

And He will run to you.

“Everyone who calls on the name of the Lord will be saved.” — Romans 10:13

What This Means for Us

If you’ve been walking away—stop.

If you’ve been drifting—turn around.

If you’ve been doing good without knowing God—come home.

God is not done with you. He’s waiting.

And the time is now.

“Today, if you hear his voice, do not harden your hearts.” — Hebrews 3:15

You were made to be part of the Family Business.

Not just a spectator. Not just a wanderer.

God wants to know you. Use you. Walk with you.

Not someday. Today.
