Green Library Project

UNEC's 24/7 Library has introduced the "Green Library" project as part of the "Year of Solidarity for a Green World" and the "Green UNEC Year" initiatives.

The goal of the project is to present research on the world's leading eco-friendly and sustainable libraries to experts and the general public.

The first edition of the project is dedicated to the Joe and Rika Mansueto Library at the University of Chicago. Each edition highlights the core mission, infrastructure, architecture, and functions of global libraries holding the "Green Library" status, examined at a modern scientometric level. Additionally, the branding, certification, and ecological, economic, and social sustainability of these libraries are brought to the attention of readers.
