

Comparison Table:

Talent at Work vs. Other Global Expansion Models

What Matters	Talent at Work (TaW)	In-House Regional Staff	External Agency Network
Time to Market	Immediate readiness with local teams in place	Long recruitment, onboarding, and setup timelines	Fast on paper, but often lacks strategic depth
Brand Control	Fast on paper, but often lacks strategic depth	Full control, but hard to monitor remotely	Usually co-branded or limited to campaigns
Strategic Alignment	Aligned with your mission, systems, and reporting	Can vary based on individual staff and training	Not guaranteed beyond scope of work
Cultural and Political Fluency	Deep expertise in market context and protocols	Depends on local hire's experience and network	Typically limited to translation or logistics
Partnership Access	Established ecosystem of government, academic, and association partners	Must be built from scratch	Rarely includes high-level institutional access
Cost Structure	Flexible retainer plus performance-based fees	High fixed costs, including salaries and offices	Project fees, sometimes padded or fragmented
Compliance Support	Navigates regional regulations and delivery rules	Requires legal support or in-house expertise	Often left to the client
Program Delivery	Fully localized and managed by experienced staff	May require additional vendor coordination	Rarely delivers full program scope
Results Tracking and Reporting	Integrated with your KPIs, CRM, and dashboards	Depends on internal setup	Often reports only on outputs, not outcomes
Risk Management	Shared accountability with clear performance goals	All responsibility rests with HQ	Agencies avoid delivery accountability
