Commercial INTRODUCTION

Export of Roses, Carnations and Foliage from Cotopaxi, Ecuador

Since the early 1990s, Ecuador has earned a distinguished reputation as one of the world's leading exporters of premium-quality flowers. Among them, its roses stand out globally for their exceptional beauty, longevity and elegance. At the heart of this thriving industry is the province of Cotopaxi, a fertile region in the Ecuadorian highlands, where the unique combination of altitude, volcanic soil and year-round sunlight creates ideal conditions for cultivating extraordinary flowers.

However, Ecuador's floral export offering extends far beyond roses. The country is also a key supplier of carnations, gypsophila, alstroemeria, chrysanthemums, lisianthus, hydrangeas, and an impressive variety of ornamental foliage, all highly sought-after in the international floral design market for their vibrancy, freshness, and versatility in floral arrangements.

Commercial INTRODUCTION

Ecuadorian Roses: A Global Symbol of Excellence

- Large, dense blooms with rich and vivid colours.
- Long, straight stems, perfect for bouquets and floral centrepieces.
- Superior vase life thanks to high-altitude growing conditions.
- Unique and wide colour range, including exotic and bi-colour varieties.
- Produced under strict quality and sustainability certifications (Rainforest Alliance, FlorEcuador, Fair Trade).

Commercial INTRODUCTION

Ecuadorian Carnations: Resilience, Elegance, and Versatility

- Compact, symmetrical flowers with strong, long-lasting petals.
- Extended vase life, making them ideal for export and prolonged decorative use.
- Available in a broad spectrum of colours, from soft pastels to bold, vibrant hues.
- High resistance to handling and transport.
- Widely appreciated by florists for their ability to complement a wide variety of arrangements and themes.

Commercial INTRODUCTION

Ecuador also offers a rich selection of ornamental foliage such as ruscus, eucalyptus, leather leaf, and ferns, which add texture, contrast, and elegance to any floral composition. These green elements not only support the visual balance of the arrangement but also enhance the colour and structure of the flowers, playing a vital role in modern and classic floral design alike.

To export flowers from Cotopaxi, Ecuador, is to deliver a natural masterpiece – cultivated with dedication, innovation, and a deep respect for the environment. Each rose, carnation, and foliage stem tells the story of a community committed to quality, sustainability, and excellence in global floriculture.
