

Fatima Al-Fihriyya

*"If you asked me, I would tell you: I was not the richest. I was not the wisest. I was not the strongest.
But I saw a need — and I believed Allah could make something great from my small hands.
I planted a dream in the soil of sincerity.
And Allah grew it beyond anything I could have imagined.
You, too, have a seed.
What will you build for Him?"*

Reflect:

1. What do I admire most about Fatima Al-Fihriyya's story? (Think about her dedication, vision, use of wealth, or commitment to education.)
 2. What challenges might she have faced in her time — and how did she rise above them? (How does this compare to challenges I face today?)
 3. What kind of legacy would I like to leave behind? (For my family, my community, or the Ummah at large.)
 4. What does it mean to "build" something meaningful in my context? (It could be a habit, a skill, a business, a relationship, or even a mindset.)
 5. How can I use what Allah has given me — time, skills, wealth, influence — in service of others?
 6. Where in my life am I holding back from stepping into a bigger vision — and why? (What would it take for me to begin?)
 7. If Fatima were alive today, what advice might she give me?
 8. How can I stay connected to my purpose, like Fatima did, even when things get hard? (Where can I find support or motivation?)

When you plant your dreams for Allah alone,
He makes the earth and sky bear witness.
