1. Preface

This is the first digital edition of the Boerkoel family tree. This edition is based on the original first edition of March 24, 1989, by Jeannet Pasterkamp-Boerkoel. Jeannet and I worked on its further digitization for several years, until her death in October 2022. Thanks to increasing search capabilities on the internet, many additions and improvements have since been possible, without numerous time-consuming visits to archival institutions. The Boerkoel family in the United States is another major expansion. An attempt has also been made to map the family in Germany. During this process, many contacts with family members have been established, these days mostly through the Boerkoel Family Tree Facebook page and via email. The subscription to genealogieonline also allowed for extensive cross-referencing, and the CBG's Wiewaswie.nl website was a valuable resource.

This digital edition has become much more comprehensive, not only due to the number of Boerkoels, but also to the amount of information about them, the addition of Germany and the United States, and the many underlying facts and stories. To keep things manageable, the publication is now divided into four parts in more or less chronological order:

- Part 1. In the German Language for the German family the complete German branch with the name Burkuhl
- Part 2. In Dutch for the emigrated family from Germany to the Netherlands with the name Boerkoel and history of Germany with the name Burkuhl
- Part 3. In the English language for the emigrated family from Germany to the United States with the name Buhrkuhl and history of Germany
- Part 4. In English for the emigrated family from the Netherlands to the United States with the name Boerkoel and history of the Netherlands and Germany

This section also clearly separates data from the past 100 years and the present, due to privacy regulations. This can be helpful in determining publication formats. The ancestor numbering system has also been addressed; see the explanation in that chapter.

The family crest has also been officially in effect since 2023.

To provide some clarity to the family tree, the "book version" attempted to record the ancestors, parents, children, and grandchildren of every person whose birth surname was Boerkoel. It's clear that this isn't always successful. Sometimes there are no children, sometimes biological parents are unknown, sometimes no registration has taken place in the past, sometimes children have disappeared through relocation abroad, and sometimes it's simply a mystery. Despite everything, the Netherlands, in particular, proves to be a country where much information about our ancestors can still be accurately traced. I've compiled what I was able to find here. If you have any additions such as photos, stories, publications, certificates, etc., that you would like to include in this family tree, please don't hesitate to contact me. Thank you in advance.

Despite my translation issues, enjoy reading.

Lisse, March 1989

Preface from the 1989 written edition by Jeannet (translated into English)

Dear family and namesakes

At the beginning of this book, one might ask: "Who is family, and who is (only?) a namesake?" A second cousin, yes, and a second-second cousin no...? A great-uncle, yes, and a great-great-aunt no...?

Following the call in the Margriet magazine of November 6, 1987, several people responded. Almost all of them were strangers to me. But by working on our family tree together and sharing stories, we got to know each other better. And then I thought: "What difference does it make, anyway, who is and isn't family?" By the end of this book, once you know the relationships and have read the stories, you can form your own opinion.

2. The Family tree research.

In this chapter I want to delve deeper into the genealogical research itself, and the results that come from it, both in detail and in broader terms.

The sources used, and how to handle them.

First, the 1989 printed publication by Jeannet Pasterkamp-Boerkel was used. At that time, digitization had barely begun. Word processing was still done on a typewriter, and this publication was therefore mimeographed. The information Jeannet collected was therefore primarily obtained through time-consuming visits to family and archival institutions. Jeannet eventually built up her own archive. Unfortunately, after her death, due to the concerns of her loved ones, I was no longer able to access this archive. Fortunately, the 1989 printed edition has since been digitized, and relevant aspects could be incorporated into the current digital edition. It also turned out that much of the material Jeannet collected can now be found online, and much more.

Starting digitization.

So, thanks to modern computers and the internet, it became possible to make a huge leap forward in family tree research. The first important step was the use of a genealogical computer program. I chose the program GensDataPro, published by the Dutch Association for Genealogy, of which I am also a member. This program has the advantage of linking genealogical sources to the CBG digital archive (website: wiewaswie.nl). The CBG is the central digital Dutch archive where population registrations have been digitized since at least 1800. Various provincial and municipal archives in the Netherlands have also been digitized, with much of the information often freely accessible, as far as privacy permits. A Facebook page, "Stamboom Boerkel", was also launched at that time, which has since been joined by many of the same namesakes. An account was also created at genealogieonline.nl as a digital office, supported by various facilities. All of this has led to many new contacts with family.

Jeannet's entire written publication was subsequently digitized in GensDataPro, and checked and expanded with digital data from the CBG, other archives, family, etc. This largely resulted in the digital version. Thanks to the possibilities of the internet, it appears that the Dutch family tree could largely be worked out up to the present day. The only thing missing at the time was the German section, which was supposed to precede it.

Archion.de

Meanwhile, the German family tree also turned out to be available digitally. However, accessing this information was much more difficult. The only clue was that Johann Burkahl, who emigrated to the Netherlands, must have been born in Warmsen sometime around 1730. In Germany, until around 1875, baptism, marriage, and death records were only available in church records, which recorded these records locally depending on the church you were a member of. At a genealogy fair, a representative of the website Archion.de gave me free access for a week to browse their website. Archion.de has already created digital scans of many church records, which you could view in Archion. One problem with this might be that you would need to be able to read the old German handwriting. It turned out that Warmsen was probably located somewhere north of Minden and was primarily Lutheran. Thanks to this free pass, research in the digitized scans of Warmsen's Lutheran church record soon yielded results. I had found Johann Burkahl!!!

(In English: On November 28th, Cord Heinrich Burkule had his son Johann baptized.)

And it turned out there was much more to be found. In early 2025, I took out a three-month subscription to Archion.de to see which church records still contained Burkuhls. This research revealed more than 350 Burkuhl scans in 42 church records. Copies were made of all the Burkuhl scans found, transcriptions were made, and documented in a separate compilation file. This compilation file largely enabled a reconstruction of the German family tree. The beginning of this family tree is included in all four volumes of this digital publication, with the relevant source references for each family for the scans found in the scanned church records.

The German family tree.

Research through Archion.de in German church records have shown that the eldest Burkuhl must have been born around 1606. German church records began recording this information around 1675. The purpose of this recording was actually unclear. Who decided to start these registrations? Who decided which information should be recorded? This was likely triggered by the Reformation. Since the Council of Trent (1545-1563), the separation between the Catholic and Protestant churches became definitive. This meant that each faith had to clarify and establish its own identity. The subsequent recordings in the church records were therefore primarily intended to identify your faith and which associated facilities you could participate in, or claim, otherwise you might commit sacrilege. If you moved to another place, you could therefore take your credentials from your old church to the church of the same faith in your new place of residence. So the registration was mainly a membership certificate to show whether you were friend or foe.

It's clear that these records weren't always sufficient for genealogical research. It was often recorded that "Father Johan Burkuhl had his son baptized on the date of baptism with the name Hendrik." So the date of birth remained unknown, as did the mother. Therefore, if someone remarried, that also remained unclear if it wasn't recorded, which happened quite often. And if there were multiple Johannen Burkuhls around, the pastor knew whose child the child belonged to; after all, the main thing was membership in the relevant faith through the recording of the baptism.

Another problem was the naming. Not only Burkuhl existed, but also Buhrkuhl, Burkuhle(n), Buerkuhl, Burkuel, and so on. If written poorly, the name could also cause confusion with names like Lehmkuhl. Ultimately, around 1900, the name was officially registered in Germany as "Burkuhl" by the government. German family members who emigrated to the Netherlands around 1750 were given the official name "Boerkel" by the Dutch authorities, which phonetically sounds the same in Dutch as "Burkuhl" in German. But variations also occurred in the Netherlands, such as Boerkool, Boercool, Boerekool, Borkoel, and so on. The Dutch Boerkel family who emigrated to the United States retained the Dutch name Boerkel. German families who emigrated to the United States changed their name to "Buhkuhl." This means that in the United States, the same family lives with two different names, Boerkel and Buhrkuhl, and probably don't know each other. For clarity, I'm using only three different names in this family tree: Burkuhl for the family in Germany, Boerkel for the family in the Netherlands who emigrated from the Netherlands to the United States, and Buhrkuhl for the family who emigrated from Germany to the United States.

The "Standesamtregister".(register of the German state office)

The German church registers continued to record until 1875. After that, this registration was transferred to the non-ecclesiastical "Standesamtregister" or "Personenstandregister" (Personal Register) maintained by the local municipal authorities. Around 1800, Napoleon had already made attempts to do this in Germany. However, this provoked such opposition from both the churches and the inhabitants that after Napoleon's departure, the old situation was resumed. Clearly, these situations were not always conducive to accurate registration. But in 1871, Germany, which had been divided until then, became a unit in the form of the German Empire with Emperor Wilhelm I (Wilhelm Friedrich Ludwig von Hohenzollern), who had been King of Prussia since 1861. This was due to the Franco-Prussian War of 1870-1871, in which Napoleon III opposed the appointment of Leopold von Hohenzollern. France was defeated, Napoleon III imprisoned, and the French Republic returned.

Nevertheless, it wasn't Leopold, but Wilhelm I, who became emperor. And for convenience, a few years later the Standesamtregister (Standesamt Register) was also definitively introduced for all of Germany. A certificate was drawn up for every birth, marriage, and death, which was stored in an indexed archive. Unfortunately, the Archion.de website doesn't have a digital version of this. I discovered that I needed a subscription to Ancestry.com for this. They had many digital scans of these certificates from the Nienburg District. This research provided a nice, well-matched record with the church records. This allowed me to further develop the German family tree back to births in 1925. All the certificates found from the Standesamtregisters are stored in my archive and can be consulted if desired. The results of this research can be found in part 1, the complete German family tree. Parts 2, 3, and 4 each include the beginning of the German family tree, but are further detailed to the country of emigration.

The last hundred years in Germany, the Netherlands and America.

In the original printed edition by Jeannet Pasterkamp-Boerkel in 1989, there was no mention of digitization, nor was there any privacy legislation. Therefore, this publication still contained a great deal of information about people who were still alive at the time. Officially, this is no longer possible due to numerous privacy laws. Consequently, in Germany, little information about the last hundred years of the family tree is available digitally. Connecting to the present can only be achieved through individual research by each family.

In the Netherlands, however, a great deal of information about the last hundred years can be found online. Many birth, marriage, and death notices from digitized newspapers often provide sufficient genealogical information. Social media from 2000 onward, as well as other digital sources, also provide useful information. Combined with the information from Jeannet's publication, this has made it possible to partially connect the family tree to the present day in the Netherlands.

In the United States, even more information may be available online. However, many digital resources are only accessible through a fee. The Familysearch website was a good, freely accessible resource, as were the obituaries published by the families themselves, which provide a wealth of genealogical information. The freely accessible Spokeo website, social media, and various others also provided this information. So, despite the US government's privacy regulations, Americans are still publishing freely. Even there, the family tree could largely be developed to date.

Sometimes it was unclear which family someone came from. To still give everyone a place in the family tree, a suitable solution sometimes had to be found, and in such cases, this is indicated in the publication with the relevant person/family, along with reasoning. In reality, there weren't many problematic cases, and there was often enough indirect information available to allow for a most plausible choice. Also, because it wasn't a particularly large family, the options for a solution were limited. However much a genealogist might want to provide the utmost proof for every family relationship, under these circumstances, that's an impossible goal. You can't avoid having to make unexpectedly questionable decisions sometimes.

It should be clear that I will not be publishing general publications covering the last hundred years. Only upon request will I share specific information with families about their part of the family tree.

3. The further development of the family Buhrkuhl

As mentioned before, the oldest traceable Burkuhl was born around 1606. That is Hermann Burkuhl.

Source: Archion.de, Churchbook Warmsen, 1693, Scan 24

Transcription: Den 25 Octob ist Hermann Buhrkuhle 87 Jahr alt beerdig. (so he should have been born around 1606, assuming the age of 87 is correct, but actually that is not so important here)..

But where did Hermann Burkuhl come from? That's a difficult question to answer, because no further data exists. But perhaps something can be said about it indirectly. But that will always remain speculation. First of all, there's the Thirty Years' War (1618-1648). The Burkuhls apparently lived in Warmsen, Germany, near Minden and near by the Weser River. The Weser was an important border region at the time, and thus the scene of many warring factions of various stripes: various bishoprics, counties, principalities, religions, and all the major European countries of the time. This war was primarily a religious war between Protestants and Catholics. The question is therefore whether Hermann Burkuhl was actually born in Warmsen in 1606, or whether he arrived there later, during or after the war. The idea that the Burkuhl family didn't always live in this region also stems from the fact that the surname was relatively rare at the time compared to other surnames.

This genealogical research has also revealed that there were already Burkuhls around Bremen at the time. A problem with this is that Archion.de doesn't have any digital church records from Bremen. Bremen has its own genealogical society that apparently manages these records, but it cannot or will not make this data available digitally. However, Ancestry does show that Johann Friedrich Burkuhl had a daughter baptized in 1679, and in 1675, a daughter of Hermann Burkuhl from Warmsen married Victor Bok in Bremen. The church records in Bremen apparently begin as early as 1575, so perhaps something can still be found there. However, you would have to stay in Bremen for a while to find them.

But things weren't exactly pleasant in Bremen at that time either. In 1654, the first war broke out between Bremen and Sweden over control of that area. This proved to be poorly resolved in the Peace of Westphalia of 1648. Although another truce was agreed upon in 1654, the problem remained unresolved. This led to another war with Sweden in 1666, the second war over the same issue. However, a solution was finally found that year, and Bremen remained independent. Whether Hermann Burkuhl moved to Warmsen because of the problems in Bremen, or whether the peace in Bremen after 1666 created more opportunities to move from Warmsen to Bremen, remains a mystery. Near Bremen, however, there was a well-known place at the time, Burg, on the Lesum tributary of the Weser River, which was indeed a defensive structure and was involved in the skirmishes. One might therefore wonder if that place had anything to do with our family name. In any case, Hermann Burkuhl remained in Warmsen until his death in 1693.

The first step of emigration.

Although things remained calm for a while afterward, the German Lutherans from the Osnabrück/Minden area were mostly poor farmers in serfdom after the Thirty Years' War. This was partly due to the extensive plundering and destruction of people, their homes, and livestock, but also because of the rather infertile, sandy, and marshy soil. In addition to their agricultural work, these farmers necessarily also had various home-based crafts to supplement their income, such as textiles, trade, clog-making, carpentry, or mercenary work. So, essentially, they had to grab what they could get; they had to put food on the table.

Because of these poor economic conditions, it soon became widely known that the economy and employment in neighboring Netherlands were much better thanks to the wealth after the Golden Age, the dry mills, and the boom in shipbuilding. As a result, many seasonal workers from these regions temporarily traveled to the Netherlands during the summer months via now-familiar trade routes. Warmsen was also located near such a trade route, which ran into the Netherlands via Minden and Osnabrück, Bad Bentheim, and Oldenzaal. This was the reason why Cord Hinrich Burkahl (1697) from Warmsen, his sons Johann (1729) and Dirck (1735), and his nephew Cord Johann (1733), also made these lucrative journeys. It is unknown when they began. Perhaps Cord Hinrich initially traveled alone, and only later did his sons and nephew join him, known as Hollandgänger, on their way to the "land of Pattjan." The peak of this trade route, or Töddenroute, was around 1750.

In Germany, a complex war unfolded again between 1756 and 1763, with the Prussians, French, English, Swedes, and Austrians as key players, vying for both power and religious reasons. This seven-year war already resembled a world war, as the conflict also took place in America. One of the "highlights" of this war in the Osnabrück/Minden region was the Battle of Hastenbeck (near Minden) in July 1757. The French won the Battle of Hastenbeck, bringing the area around Warmsen back under French (Catholic) influence, with all the attendant religious and administrative consequences. It seems this was the last straw for our ancestors from that region.

Around 1757, these four Lutheran Burkuhls settled in (the area surrounding) Haarlem and officially registered with the Lutheran Church of Haarlem. Their motivations were crystal clear: peace, work, and freedom of religion. In recent years, it was primarily Belgians who officially registered with the Lutheran Church in Haarlem. But later, German emigrants gained the upper hand. The German Burkahl family was given a new name in the Netherlands, one that better suited the Dutch language: Boerkoel. Their faith also changed. Initially Lutheran, many later converted to the then-established Dutch church, the Reformed Church. This proved to have economic advantages in trade and employment. In terms of employment, the Dutch Boerkoels initially focused more on horticulture, flower bulb cultivation, and the related trade, but they also increasingly found themselves in government positions.

In the next chart you can see that the Burkuhls more and more moved from Warmsen to the north in Germany.

Source: googlemaps with own data

The second emigration step.

Around 1800, living conditions were again threatened by the arrival of Napoleon and French rule. Bremen lost its independence as a free Hanseatic city and became later the capital of the département des Bouches du Weser. Nienburg was also part of that département, but Warmsen was once again located in the neighboring département der Ober-Ems. The new French legislation changed old German customs and traditions. The organizational structure of the German national government was modified according to the French model. The French language was also introduced in the writing of deeds. This period lasted until 1813, after which Napoleon was forced to retreat. After that, everything was restored as much as possible into the old German situation. Bremen became a free Hanseatic city again, the Duchy of Oldenburg and the Kingdom of Hanover returned, and where possible, all reorganizations were reversed. Whether this significantly improved everything is doubtful. Nevertheless, global developments had been initiated that would soon change Germany as well. Meanwhile, in America, the American War of Independence (1775-1783) had ended. This gave rise to a new, first real democratic state in the world, consisting of 13 former colonies. In the subsequent period, the territory of the United States expanded significantly. Texas joined in 1836. And in 1846-1848, the Mexican-American War took place again, after which California also joined.

These developments also permeated Europe, but especially in those places in Europe that had connections to America. Bremen, for example, was one such place. Trade with America grew from Europe, thanks in part to ever-larger ships and the development of steam engines. Consequently, more and more shipping to America came from Bremen, and reports of the beautiful, endless, free land grew. It's no wonder, then, that these stories reached the Burkahl family, and that they were enthused by them.

- The first Burkahl to leave for America was Johan Heinrich (1800), who was apparently still single and left for the United States in 1835 at the age of 35 on the SS Meridian. He arrived there on October 17, 1835. Nothing more is known about him, so one can only guess what happened to him in America.

Subsequent Burkuhlen also emigrated to America. It is suspected that they didn't always make the crossing on the now-larger passenger lines, as nothing can sometimes be found in those archives. The presumption is that, through their contacts with Bremen, they traveled to America on smaller boats from smaller companies, where formal registration was considered less important. Therefore, it is not always clear when the crossing to America was made. See the following events:

- Johan Heinrich Ludwig (1819) is the branch that began in St. Louis (Washington, Illinois). He apparently also came to America as a bachelor. When he was not yet 30 years old, he married Frederike Lehmkuhl in St. Louis in 1848. This means he must have crossed over sometime before 1848. They settled as farmers in Stockton, east of St. Louis, and he later married twice more, and all their children were born there.
- Heinrich Friedrich August (1838)
Radensleben is the branch that began in Texas (south of Amarillo). According to Familysearch, Heinrich emigrated to America with his entire family, except for his two eldest daughters, in 1892. They made the crossing on the Norddeutsche Lloyd passengership SS Darmstadt. In Texas, they first settled as farmers. Heinrich had four sons, all of whom married and had children in America.

Then there were a number of non-descendants:

- Marie Sophie Catharina Burkuhl (1829) * Fischer, and her sister
- Marie Wilhelmine Dorothea (Doris) (1844) * Wilhelm/Hofmann, and her sister
- Marie Dorothee Wilhelmine (1832) * -?

And the sisters:

- Doris Sophie (1876) from Hoysinghausen, started as a servant for a New York family,
- Marie (Mary) (1881) followed a few years later at the age of 16, with her sister paying for her passage in 1897 on the SS Havel 1 of the Norddeutsche Lloyd. She married Ludemann a year later in New York, and by the 1920 census they already had three daughters..

But who is Mina Burkuhl, who arrived in the US at the age of 19 on the SS New York of the Norddeutsche Lloyd on March 25, 1868? She should have been born around 1849. But nothing of this can be found in the family tree. Research on the Familysearch website provided a bit more information. Her full name should be Wilhelmine Minnie Anni Burkuhl, born on October 27, 1850 in Bruchhagen. But there is only indirect evidence for this from American sources. Her parents are therefore unknown. According to Familysearch, however, she could be the daughter of Johann Ludwig Burkuhl (1808). But no proof is provided for this. Looking at our family tree, it also appears impossible. Johan Ludwig Burkuhl had eight children, of whom Sophie Dorothee was born on April 26, 1850, according to the official certificate. It's therefore impossible for another child to be born six months later. But who would her parents be then? Looking at the family tree, the only real possibility is Johan Heinrich Dietrich Burkuhl (1819). He married Sophie Dorothee Stöteler from Kirchdorf on June 30, 1850. They also lived near Bruchhagen. Mina would then have been born four months later, something that wasn't entirely unusual at the time. She thus became the first daughter of four children, two of whom died prematurely. As the eldest daughter, she would also have had the character to dare to go to America at the age of nineteen. On the other hand, it appears that Familysearch data can be unreliable if no sources are cited!

Unfortunately, developments in the United States weren't always peaceful either. The Civil War raged from 1861 to 1865, and it's unknown whether the Burkahl family participated in it, nor what its consequences were. Slavery was abolished in 1865, which also brought considerable economic problems to southern states like Texas. Emigration also proved to be a seismic shift for the family tree. In the eighth generation, Germany still had eight Burkahl families. In the ninth generation, there were only three families. However, the Franco-Prussian War of 1871 likely had little impact on the German Burkuhls.

Besides wars, epidemics could also significantly decimate the population. Around 1770, for example, the bubonic plague was a recurring issue throughout Europe due to the Russo-Turkish War. This was just after Johann Burkahl's emigration to the Netherlands in 1751 and just after the Seven Years' War. Incidentally, frequent disease outbreaks were possible until the 20th century, when medical research led to the discovery of the bacterium, the vaccine, and hygiene measures.

The third emigration phase.

The third emigration phase followed, first with Lucas Boerkel (1865), who went together with Arie Prook. Arie Prook was a brother of Rensje Boerkel's husband (1859), and Rensje was a second cousin of Lucas. They left Rotterdam for America in 1891 on the SS Maasdam of the NASM (see pages 82 and 83). What became of Arie Prook is unfortunately unknown.

Then followed by:

- Aaltje Boerkel (born 1868), married Klaas Mars in 1903. Klaas Mars was a baker. They then emigrated to the United States and ended up in Seattle. There they started a family, the Mars family.
- Antonetta Boerkel (born 1882), married Hendrik Willem Serdijn in 1904 in Haarlem. They then left for the United States and settled in Lewiston, MI. There they started a family.
- Neeltje Boerkel (1861), married in 1887 to Lambertus Moodoo. They initially lived in the Dutch East Indies, but after the fall of the colony after World War II, they emigrated with their family to Australia.
- Catharina Christina Boerkel (1878), married Wilhelmus Johannes Rooijers in 1904 in Haarlem. Wilhelmus was a baker and emigrated to the United States, to Paterson. It seems his wife Catharina couldn't cope with this, because she returned a few years later, and the divorce was finalized in Haarlem in 1917. There are no children.
- Marijtje Boerkel (1896), went to the United States with Folkert Spoor in 1920. There they married, lived first in Albany (OR) as Maxine and Frank, later in Los Angeles.
- In 1912, Cornelis Franciscus Boerkel (born 1860) moved with his entire family of five sons and one daughter from the Netherlands to Grand Rapids, Michigan. As a furniture maker, he found good work in the more industrialized north. Grand Rapids was an area with many Dutch immigrants who helped each other and were often united in the Reformed Church, and where many place names had Dutch names.

The Burkuhls in the south were more likely to live in areas with many German immigrants, were predominantly Lutheran, and initially still worked in agriculture. Consequently, place names in these areas were given German names. The consequences of Cornelis Franciscus Boerkoe's emigration from the Netherlands to America had little impact on the Dutch family tree. In the 9th generation, there are 12 Dutch families, and in the 10th generation, there are already 15 families, despite his departure.

The fourth emigration step

- Dale Lavon Buhrkuhl (born 1942), who moved to New Zealand in 1997. His daughter Mary owns a photo shop in Christchurch, and his son Daren Carl is a medical specialist in Auckland.
- Anthonie Boerkoe (born 1955) moved to the US to become a mathematics professor at the Digipen Institute in Redmond, Washington state. He is also an avid chess player, and in his old age in Seattle, he has plenty of time to devote to it.

Current status 2025

The overview above shows the general development of the Burkuhl family since 1606. Hermann Burkuhl could never have imagined this. Outside of Germany, there are currently approximately 40 families with an estimated 150 people. If you include in-laws, this number is many times higher. In Germany itself, this number now seems to be less than 10 families with an estimated number of fewer than 25 people. Most Burkuhls are no longer in agriculture, but sometimes in surprisingly different professions, such as Jan-Carsten Burkuhl, who achieved great success as a WDSF athlete in dance in Germany. And so, every Burkuhl has found his path. But whatever we became, we had Hermann Burkuhl as a connecting ancestor.

5. Design principles.

Jeannet Pasterkamp-Boerkel and Ronald Boerkel strongly advocated for a coat of arms for the Boerkel family. Initially, it seemed that a coat of arms already existed, but when this proved not to be the case, they decided to design a new one. Extensive historical research was conducted for this purpose (see above), and the requirements are described below. The coat of arms was designed in collaboration with the Netherlands Heraldic College (NGV). Official registration took place through this channel in 2023. Permission was also granted to the CBG for further publication.

Heraldic principles

When designing a new coat of arms, several principles must be observed to achieve a heraldically stylish and strong coat of arms. It is also essential to ensure that the coat of arms is unique to the family in question and does not create confusion or suggest affinities or pretenses. One of the most important things to do is to avoid shield divisions (intersected, divided, quartered, etc.). In most cases, this suggests a combination of several separate coats of arms. Even if one does not combine complete shields, but only symbols in this way as a kind of collage, this does not create unity; it essentially becomes a jigsaw puzzle. Instead, it is important to find a way to merge the various characteristic family motifs into a complete coat of arms. This can be achieved by choosing symbols and colours (heraldic colours and 'metals') in such a way that a clear and uncluttered, unified coat of arms is created. It is important to limit the colours used and the variety of pieces to what can be seen at a glance. (That is an essential characteristic of heraldic expression.) Colours (the basic colours and the two 'metals' gold and silver alternating), and ideally only two, and preferably no more than three; because with colours it already starts to become a gaudy carnival. The number of pieces used should also not be too excessive. You should be able to say: 'that coat of arms with the horseshoes', etc., and not also have to try to spot a tree, plough, etc. Certain symbolism can sometimes also be expressed through colour.

Justification of heraldic elements of the Boerkel family coat of arms design:

The chosen priority was the portrayal of the name castle owl (original German name: Burkuhl: i.e. Burg-Uhl, in old German). This is vividly represented by an owl on top a castle. A bird or other animal on a castle (tower) is more common in heraldry, but this is not known for an owl and does not exist in these colors. This creates a strong unique image. Given the aforementioned heraldic principles and limitations, it is a combination not possible with the horse heads, but it is possible in the colors. The colors chosen are therefore in accordance with the main colors of the characteristic symbols in Saxon regions (in the regional coats of arms), the Saxon steed, the stiepels with horse heads, the castles: all are generally depicted in silver on red. Three stalks of corn have been placed as a helmet sign; These are also in the coat of arms of the municipality of Uchte, which Warmsen falls under, thus symbolizing the region of origin and agricultural background of the family.

The motto under the coat of arms: "DICERE ET AGERE IN SCIENTIA ET SAPIENTIA" means: "Speak and Act with Knowledge and Wisdom"

The motto itself was designed with considerations on the one hand, the owl in the coat of arms, and on the other hand, the relationship of many Boerkelen with education and science as well as (agricultural) nature. Due to the fact that the Boerkel family was originally of evangelical Lutheran origin, the castle also refers to the Lutheran motto: "Eine feste Burg ist unser Gott". ("A solid castle is our God")

6. Ancestor numbering.

In genealogy, various numberings are possible to designate people in the family tree. First of all, the question is whether you start from the current person to all parents and ancestors, or whether you start with the earliest ancestor and from there start numbering to the children and grandchildren and beyond. The latter is then called a lineage, and you start with the oldest known ancestor. You then have the choice to work out the family tree with only the male descendants (patrilineal series), or only the female descendants (matrilineal series), or with male and female descendants (called parentage). However, if you start from the current person (called the proband(us) or quarter bearer) to all ancestors, then there is a pedigree chart.

Numbering in the written family tree of 1989.

In the 1989 edition, Jeannet Pasterkamp-Boerkel uses the patrilineal series, employing the numbering system I.a, whereby the Roman numeral I represents the generation and the successive letters represent the children born into that generation. The progenitor is the word for the first male person in the family tree. Only the male descendants are numbered here. Because it is not always clear whether living male descendants will start a family, they are also numbered.

I.a Progenitor

 II.a Son

 III.a Grand Son

 III.b Grand Son

 II.b Son

 III.c Grand Son

 III.d Grand Son

 II.c Son

 III.e Grand Son

 And so on.....

The numbering system above is somewhat similar to that of the Meurgey de Tupigny system, where the number appearing in the written line of descent is replaced by a letter. While this is a nice, simple numbering system, it has the disadvantage that with increasing generations, 26 letters are no longer sufficient, and it's also no longer clear from which lineage someone descends.

Numbering in the new digital family tree.

Therefore, in addition to this old numbering, a new numbering system will be used in the digital family tree. For those interested, this is the numbering system according to Jacques d'Aboville, also known as the d'Aboville system. We will apply this numbering system here to the sons only. This is how it works:

1. Progenitor
- 1.1 Son
 - 1.1.1 Grand Son
 - 1.1.2 Grand Son
- 1.2 Son
 - 1.2.1 Grand Son
 - 1.2.2 Grand Son
- 1.3 Son
 - 1.3.1 Grand Son

And so on.....

The disadvantage is that with each subsequent generation, the numbering becomes increasingly longer. The advantage is that numbering can now be done "infinitely," and on the other hand, the lineage line has now become visible. The number 1.2.5.3.6.4 therefore signifies the 6th generation (6 digits), where the person in question is the 4th child of the 6th child of the 3rd child of the 5th child of the 2nd child of the progenitor.

This digital version uses both numbering schemes. That's the convenience of a digital version. This way, on the one hand, a connection can always be established with the original written version from 1989, and on the other hand, the new numbering scheme can continue indefinitely. The old numbering scheme ends in the digital version when new generations are mentioned that were not included in the original 1989 edition. So on top of each familychart you will find two numbers, the one according the Meurgey de Tupigny, and a second number according the d'Aboville system.

Genealogie van het geslacht / Familyline: BURKUHL	Generation: VIII.31
Familie / Family A.B. Burkuhl	No: 1.3.2.1.3.1.2.1

In this version, however, the family tree remains an elaboration of only the male descendants, because of the added stories, deeds, newspaper clippings, etc. A complete family tree without these stories is worked out as a pedigree chart.

Privacy.

This publication also distinguishes between generations from more than 100 years ago and later. Many of the later generations, which include family members less than 100 years old, may still be alive and may object to publication. This boundary is therefore extended every year. The family tree will therefore never be complete; new generations will always be added.

Sources of birth and death::

- Burkuhl, Hermann, Warmsen Kirchenbuch 1675-1784 scan 24 (buried)
This scan shows that Hermann died at the age of 87 and that he must therefore have been born around 1606. Nothing else about Hermann can be found in the church records I examined.

The birth of Hermann Burkuhl's ancestors therefore lies somewhere in the last quarter of 1500, estimated around 1575. Around that time, the Peace of Augsburg was concluded in 1555. This peace established the freedom for Lower Saxony to practice the Lutheran faith. At that time, Warmen was located in the county of Hoya, where the Evangelical Lutheran faith was primarily practiced. The Burkuhls therefore always adhered to this faith initially. This early period was characterized by relative peace, which allowed agriculture to flourish. Warmen was (and still is) located in a large agricultural area, and the Burkuhls were therefore also farmers. A noteworthy article has also been written about the peasantry of that period; see the end of this publication.

♂ 1.3	Hermann	Warmsen, ± 1655	?
♀	Anne Margrethe
				Warmsen, 12-05-1719

Indirect birth sources:

- Burkohl, Rolant, because Rolant had reached the age of 50 when he died in 1693, his year of birth can be determined as approximately 1643
- Burkohl, Hinrich, Warmsen Kirchenbuch 1675-1784 scan 5, marriage. These first entries in the Warmsen church register reveal a Hinrich Burkohl, who married Anna Tatenhorst in 1677. However, no ages or parents are given. Another name is mentioned, Johan Hillman (see the Source Book), presumably a deceased first husband. Hinrich was married to Anna for 30 years, until her death in 1707. If Hinrich married at, say, 27, he would have been born around 1650.
- Burkohl, Hermann, Warmsen Kirchenbuch 1675-1784 Scan 15, 1685. (baptism) Hermann had his child Maria baptized in 1685. I haven't been able to find any further information about Hermann, only the birth is estimated around 1655.

Death sources:

- Burkohl, Rolant, Warmsen Kirchenbuch 1675-1784 Scan 24, 1693 (buried) shows that because of the age of 50 he must have been born around 1643. Burkohl, Anne Margarethe, Warmsen Kirchenbuch, Scan 52, 1719. Since no age, parents, etc. are given, this is a mystery, added here as 2nd daughter.

The name Rolant:

- From the church records and consulted old first name lists, it's not clear whether  Rolant, Rolant, or... is meant. I'll stick with Rolant, as that's a bit more common. In principle, anything is possible: Rolof, Rolaf, Roelof, etc., etc. In later generations, a Rolf (with and without a double f) is clearly mentioned several times.

A riddle:

Warmsen Kirchenbuch 1675-1784 Scan 42, 1713

Transcription: Den 23 Junij 1713 ist ??? Buhrkuhle 76 Jahr alt begraben.

Because a dash is always written above the name Buhrkuhl on both u's, which is characteristic of the letter "u" written at that time, it really is the name Burkuhl. However, the given name is unclear to me. Considering his age, the person in question must have been born around 1637. However, his parents are not listed. Given the year of birth, he could have been a brother of Rolant (1643). However, I have been unable to find any further clues. This information is therefore too insufficient to do anything beyond these speculations.

- Sammlung Bremen, Evangelischer Kirchenbücher 1574-1945
- Transcrip: Heirat in 26-11-1671: ...?...Trinitatis enz..ist Mr (Meister?) Victor Bok, Hader of Hoder (Beruf) alhier (=Bremen) und jfr (jungfrau) (E)lisabeth Buhrkuhle (in der Sankt Petri Dom Bremen,) Hermann Burkuhls zu Warmen in Amt Holtzhausen Wohnhaften, eheliche Tochter, ehelich copuliert worden.

- The above would mean that the aforementioned Hermann Burkuhl from Warmen could be this first known Burkuhl. The marriage took place in 1671, so Lisabeth could have been born around 1645, which means Hermann had this daughter at about age 35. Unfortunately, no mother is mentioned here either.

Given his birth year, there are essentially two possibilities: either a child of Rolant or a child of Hinrich. Given the births, he best fits the Hinrich lineup..
- Burkahl, Rolf Hinrich, married Anne Ilse Fincken in Warmen on November 12, 1744. If he married between the ages of 25 and 30, he would have been born sometime between 1714 and 1719. That also gives him the best possible place here. He had two children, but shortly afterward the Seven Years' War began. I have not found anything about this family since then.

Matrimonial Sources:

- Cord Hinrich's marriage date is derived from the birth year of their first child. The wife's name can be found indirectly in her death certificate and the various births of her children. See there.
- Ilse Margrete married Cord Heinrich Siemann in 1710, she had the age of 14 years? and the following children were born:
 - o Rolf Hinrich op 13-04-1713,
 - o Ilse Marie op 21-03-1723, en
 - o Johan Hinrich op 16-05-1726

Birth sources:

- Hermann Burkuhl's death was recorded as 66 years old. His birth year of 1671 can be inferred from this, according to family who lived in Warmen at the time.
- At her death in 1745, the widow Anne Lucia Geseke was 79 years old, so her year of birth was approximately 1666.

- Burkuhl, Johan Dirck, Oudekerk a/d/ Amstel dec. 1803, emigrated to The Netherlands.
- What happened to son Johann Hermann is unclear.
- Two other sons of Cord Hinrich, Johann and Johan Dirck, appear to have emigrated to the Netherlands in 1757. His daughters are all deceased as well. However, he apparently always stayed in Warmen, given his death in 1770 there. Although he seems also to have frequently been in Haarlem, see further on under Johann and the treatment of the estate in 1772 after his death, but also as a witness at baptism and marriage by his sons.

- Johann Dietrich's existence is known only through the baptismal records of his children in church records. These records (initially) never mention who the mother was. No marriage record for him has been found, nor has a death record for his wife. So, who his wife was remains a mystery for now.

Here too, the probable marriage dates have been estimated. Nothing further is known about the second and third marriages. Because no further information is available, the most obvious solution is that these marriages took place between 15 years of the first and fourth marriages. In the Riessen Family Book III, only the two marriages to Ahrens and Hartmanns are listed. The question remains how, when, and how this information was obtained in a Church Book.

- The marriages with Siemering and Hoppe are derived from the respective births of each of their children. No further births are found here, nor are the deaths of Siemering and Hoppe. It is also unclear whether this refers to Rolf's Johan Diederich (1946) or his nephew, Johan Diederich (1948), whose brother, Rolf, Johan Diederich (1712), was married. Since you can only be married to one person at a time, this solution was chosen. According to the church records, no other Johan Diederichs were born, so this is technically the best solution. Despite the fact that only the marriages with Ahrens and Hartmanns are recorded in the Riessen Family Book III, how these Family Books were compiled remains completely unclear. It is equally possible that children from both cousins may have been exchanged, for whatever reason. Riessen and Stolzenau are not far apart, and both cousins are almost the same age. Due to a lack of conclusive information and the impossibility of other good solutions, this most elegant solution was chosen

- Henry 47 years old, wagon maker, is assumingly Gerd Heinrich Christiaan, his mother died when he was 10 years old, he emigrated in 1866, assumingly with Marie Dorothea Wilhelmine Buhrkuhl, also 47 years old, from Bruchhorst, Eltern Johann Dietrich Wilhelm Burkahl and Sophie Agnese Schröder. In the census of 1910, they are both 67 years old. No kids, no marriage? So, no number.

8. Generations after emigration from Germany till 1925.

This map shows where the first families Buhrkuhl started when they arrived after their emigration from Germany. First Johann Heinrich Ludwig's family settled in Illinois

- St. Charles is situated west of St. Louis
- New Minden, Stone Church, Addieville, Lively Grove, Plum Hill, Hoyleton, Centralia, are situated within a circle of 7 miles from each other.

The other family Heinrich Friedrich August first settled in Texas, more south of Amarillo.

But later they all went all directions.

- I found in Ancestry his first marriage should be with Fredericke Lehmkuhl on 9-1-1848 in Madison. Don't know what happened to her. But he married in 1851 with Anna Maria Hoelscher. I also found in Familysearch this:

Friedericke Christina Katharina K Burkuehle's Parents and Siblings

This is impossible. I guess the birthyear of Fredericke Christina Katharina Burku(e)hl(e) should be 1848, as that's the marriage year of her parents. And her father married after 3 years in 1851 with Anna Maria Hoelscher in St. Louis. So, this is a problem. Either her birthdate is wrong or the parents of Fredericke are wrong. I think the first.

But when Johann Heinrich Ludwig married Anna Maria Hoelscher in 1851:

- , his first kid is Heinrich Dietrich in 1853, see church record below.

Blumenrost.	Blumenrost.	g. Friederich S.
49. Heinrich Burkahl September 7.	October 20.	Heinrich Burkahl Maria Dorothea, Johann H. Hen Friederich, Doe

- It is clear that Stone church is meant as a village community in Johannisburg Township, Washington County, Illinois, located about 50 km east of St. Louis.

So Johan Heinrich Ludwig (1819-1879) is the first Burkahl that emigrated to the US in Illinois east of St. Louis, in the year 1851 he married in the US in St. Louis, so all his children are born in the US.

Mary Wilhelmine Dorothea (1844-1883) was a sister of Johan Heinrich Ludwig. She married Friedrich Georg Wilhelm, and also emigrated to the US, in Utah near Salt Lake City. They had one child, Anna Louise (1871) but when she was 5 years old her father died, and when she was 12 years old her mother died. Anna Louise married later with August Herman Ulmer.

Then Heinrich Friedrich August (1838-1903) with Radensleben in Texas, he emigrated with all his children, his youngest one was born in Germany 1884. Also the family Radensleben emigrated to the US, however more in the region of Nebraska.

Also, August Heinrich Wilhelm (1875-1944) emigrated to the US, with his father Heinrich Friedrich August). He also married in the US round 1900 so all his children were born in the US.

Friedrich Buhrkuhl went in 1892 to the United States with his whole family, except the two eldest daughters.

His two youngest sons, Diedrich Ludwig Wilhelm (William) and Heinrich Diedrich Wilhelm (Richard) remained unmarried, en were buried together on the cemetery of Kahoka (Missouri). Apparently, they lived all their life together and worked on the farm of their sister Marie Wilhelmine Doris (Minnie), who had married Oryon Biggerstaff. They also were buried on the same cemetery of Kahoka:

- Elmer had the Hodgkin-decease which caused his death.
- Walter died from pneumonia
- Paul married Lucie Gregg, but there were no kids
- Leona married Alphonsa Henry Brandhorst (Hoffman, 27-08-1909 Hyattsville 00-03--1976) in St. Louis, 27-05-1938, and they had a daughter Mildred Brandhorst in 1941 (Carlyle, 04-12-1941 Peoria, 21-11-2006)
- Alvin didn't marry but helped the family farming as their father died in 1922
- Corinne Anne Elisabeth should have been married Edwin in the fifties, and got a son, Dennis Edwin Rohlfing (1955-1978) who died in Centralia 23 years old. (Avon lies east of Indianapolis, 400 km west of St. Louis).
- Since there are no further male descendants, this branch ends here. Paul married when he was 45 and Lucy 46 years, so no kids are to expect.

and was therefore born around 1881 in Germany. From my information, this seems to be Catharina Wilhelmine Dorothea (Dora) Buhrkuhl, born in 1882 in Bruchhagen, and who indeed accompanied her parents (Buhrkuhl/Radensleben) to America at a young age. What happened to her afterward is unclear.

But it's more likely that it could be her brother, assuming that Wm is short for William, who was born in 1879, and could therefore just as easily be him. His other brother, Richard, is also there, both as farm workers, while Fred, the farmer, is the head, as you can see in the census 1930 here above.

A Radio Set For Every Policeman!

Detroit Officer Burkuhl Designs Tiny Receiver to Bring Broadcast Crime Reports Direct to Men on Beats. BY ISRAEL KLEIN..

(Continuing newspaper article....)

Burkuhl of his own staff was already working on a miniature radio receiver for: police officers. Today this small receiver, weighing less than four pounds, batteries, earpiece and all, is almost ready for actual use as a means to combat crime with the of radio, At the same time Burkuhl has been experimenting on an improved receiver installation in police cars that cruise about the city constantly in touch with the central radio station of the Detroit police department. Detroit the first city in the world to operate its own radio broadcasting station in an effort to catch the criminal in his unlawful act. Its success has been so overwhelming that plans are being made to equip every car in the department, not only the police cruisers, with receivers that would keep the entire force on wheels informed of every reported crime almost at the moment of its occurrence. .

Sgt. Burkuhl had been interested in radio ever since it became popular in the early '20's. "I used to build radio receivers at my home," he says. "My 13-year-old daughter plays the piano and she used to perform on the air at station WBMH, where I first met O. F. Gabbert, one of owners of this station." "I had been thinking of a little receiver for police officers, and so got Gabbert to help me with his technical training.

"Nearly every night, sometimes up to 3 in the morning until our wives chased us to bed, we worked on this tiny set. We had it done in five months, Now we are corresponding with some battery makers to provide us with the smallest plate batteries possible, and we are trying to get an earpiece that will fit right into the ear." The little receiver is four inches wide, six inches long and an inch deep. (See for more the newspaper total story).

- As you can see in the census of 1930 above, both the family Buhrkuhl and Rosser were close to each other. At that time Alice was 18 years old and Henry 21 years. Henry was already mentioned as a manager of the grain elevator of his father. So it is not surprising they married each other 5 years later. They had the following children:

- When he married Margarette, she was very young, his first son Robert Knox, was born in 1937. Robert Knox unfortunately died a year later.
- After the death of his first wife Margarette in 1972, Robert George had a second marriage with Annabel Piercy, but there were no kids, she also had already two sons of her first marriage with Lange.
- I suppose Robert George wanted to have money with his drill press work, before starting farming. In the census of 1950, he was already farming.

10. Afterword

Jeannet's afterword from the old 1990 publication on which this edition is based

NAWOORD.

Dit is al weer de laatste bladzijde van het boek.
Het is tot stand gekomen met de hulp van heel veel mensen.
Ik wil dan ook graag van deze gelegenheid gebruik maken, om iedereen die er aan heeft meegewerkt, heel hartelijk te bedanken. Allereerst Rita Boerkool uit Baarn, die naar verschillende archieven in Rotterdam, Utrecht en Arnhem is gegaan, en Jan Boerkool uit Edam, die voor mij het Gemeente Archief in Amsterdam heeft bezocht. En verder natuurlijk alle mensen, die gegevens, verhalen, foto's e.d. hebben verzameld en opgestuurd. Door al die leuke brieven die telkens met de post kwamen, had ik steeds weer zin om door te gaan!

Helemaal compleet is het boek niet, maar waarschijnlijk voor ongeveer 95 %.

Van enkele oude aktes en sommige krantenknipsels en foto's is de kwaliteit niet zo goed. Maar ze zijn toch té interessant om ze niet te gebruiken.

Ik hoop, dat u dit boek met veel plezier gelezen hebt.
En wie weet, is het voor u het begin van een nieuwe hobby...

Oriëndelijke groeten van
Jeannet Pasterkamp
Boerkool

Afterword

Ultimately, a family tree story is never finished. Hopefully, many more will follow. The first publication was by Jeannet in 1990. It's now 35 years later, and a generation and a half have been added, and Jeannet has sadly passed away. Initially, Jeannet and I were able to collaborate on this new edition. Due to her passing, the project was halted for a while, but now it's moving again. The biggest task was tracing the ancestors in Germany, with the first traceable ancestor, the progenitor Hermann Burkuhl (1606-1693). In addition, the Boerkoel family in the United States has also been mapped, which will appear in a separate publication as part 2. The Buhrkuhl family in Germany from the late 1800s to the present is still a new project, which will result in part 3. Several people also emigrated from Germany to the United States. This German branch, Buhrkuhl (note the extra H), has also been mapped and appears in volume 4. In the meantime, I also received all sorts of responses from various family members in the form of requests for information, additions, and corrections, for which I am very grateful.

The intention is to try to maintain this publication so that a major periodic catch-up effort is no longer necessary. None of this is possible without the family's own cooperation. I would therefore be grateful if additions, corrections, stories, photos, videos, etc. could be included, while respecting privacy. The publication's purpose is to provide a glimpse into the history of our roots and the special facts that have emerged from the family. And last but not least, it would be wonderful if this led to new contacts, referring to Jeannet's motto, "What unites us Boerkoels." I therefore hope for many responses. Sincerely,

Ronald Jan Boerkoel
