

Keep Your Wound Clean

Cleanse me with hyssop, and I will be clean; wash me, and I will be whiter than snow. Psalm 51:7

You have been wounded. You have suffered pain. Your blood was shed. What now? Is this your end?

Absolutely not. God can clean your wound and make the repairs necessary to stop the bleeding. Ask Him. He can do anything but fail. However, failure lies with us. For healing to continue properly, we must keep our wounds clean.

We cannot allow the bacteria from unforgiveness, bitterness, malice, resentment, anger, and revenge to penetrate the wound, spread, and cause sepsis. It keeps us sick in our minds, hearts, and souls. This sickness, this uncleanliness, keeps us from being in a close relationship with God.

Do not allow Satan and his lies to take you down the dark path of disobedience and self-righteousness. It is easy to do this, especially when you have been hurt. “They hurt me to bad- so they should feel what I feel.” “They don’t deserve grace- they don’t deserve my forgiveness.”

Actually, they do. They need it more than anyone. Think about it- whatever they did to you, was certainly not of God. They were taken captive by the enemy to do his will, not God’s. Therefore, how can they ever know what that looks like if you do not show them Christ. Choose today to be that example and give the rest to God. Keep your wound clean daily.

Be blessed everyone!
